NO IMPERIALISM IN TRUE DEMOCRACY, SAYS HOOVER IN ECUADOR SPEECH

In First Utterance in South America Depicts U. S. Friendship for Latin Neighbors.

75,000 AT GUYAQUIL WELCOME VISITORS

President Ayora Gives Chief Guest the Abrazo—Party Will Sail for Peru Today.

By the Associated Press.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Dec. 1.—The "true democracy" of the United States was pictured by Herbert Hoover tonight at a formal banquet given him by President Isidro Ayora of Ecuador as the "guarantee of respect which comes only from equals in a common struggle to upbuild human welfare."

This was the first speech made in South America by the President-elect on his tour.

"I thank you," Hoover told his hosts, "for the reception you have given my colleagues and myself, and I thank you for the high terms in which you have spoken of my country. I feel gratified that you should think so well of the country which we love. We are proud of the many sturdy virtues of our people but we know full well our own weaknesses.

"The progress in the building of Government for the people and by the people is a long process of trial and error. We in the United States have made progress and we have attained a great degree of prosperity, but we have made failures. Yet if we survey the experience of the whole Western Hemisphere both in failures and in successes I believe we can say that we should be of good faith and confident in the future.

War Brings Only Loss.

"I have known of the great economic difficulties which have devastated Ecuador since the great war. The whole world has suffered from its unspeakable losses. No one profited by it whether combatant or neutral. The apparent gains at the time were illusions. The multitude of economic life in the world is such that only losses can come from the destruction of war. But 10 years is a minute spent in the history of nations. Our adversities are the refining fires of experience out of which comes the pure metal of progress.

True Democracy Not Imperialistic.

"The world as a whole is now recovering rapidly from the destruction of the war and the great tide of prosperity which I believe lies before us cannot fail to bear its blessings to this republic. The good will towards all our sister republics which I know lies in the hearts of the people of the United States democracy is more than a form of political organization. It is a human faith.

"True democracy is not, and cannot be imperialistic. The brotherhood of this faith is the guarantee of good will. It is the guarantee of respect which comes only from equals in a common struggle of upbuild human welfare. I trust that our relations of so friendly a character over all these years since the birth of our republics, may continue to strengthen mutual esteem."

President Ayora in greeting Hoover in the name of the Ecuadorean people, said: "We welcome you with fraternal rejoicing and enthusiastic friendship because we know that your foreign policy will be founded on scrupulous respect of the rights of all countries, on the acknowledgment of an absolute juridical equality between all states, and the effective proclamation of unrestrained sovereignty of justice and right."

Members of the Cabinet individually gave similar assurances of their esteem for their northern neighbor.

The official banquet was held in the Metropolitan Club and was followed by a large reception at the Union Club attended by the socially and politically prominent of Ecuador.

Volunteer Escort in Harbor.

A swarm of motorboats met the Cleveland several miles off shore and gave Hoover a volunteer escort on his approach to Ecuador. As the cruiser entered the harbor the sirens of all ships in port shrieked a welcome, while a shore battery fired the presidential salute. The Cleveland anchored in midstream of the Guayas River.

MILLIONAIRE ONE OF FIVE KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Homer D. Ballard of Denver and Companions Burned to Death in Accident Near Spur, Tex.

By the Associated Press.

SPUR, Tex., Dec. 1.—Five men were burned to death six miles north of Spur this afternoon when the trimotored airplane in which they were riding from San Antonio to Denver crashed and burst into flames. Homer D. Ballard of Denver, owner of the ship and millionaire president of the Sunbeam Air Transport Co. of Denver, was one of the victims. The plane was piloted by Matthew Watson of San Antonio, commercial pilot.

The other victims: Willis Washburn, 22, employe of a San Antonio garage; a Filipino cook employed by Ballard named Quinten; James O'Banion, Ballard's chauffeur, Denver.

The bodies of the five men were so badly charred that identification was impossible. It was determined soon after the crash that Ballard and Watson probably were among the dead, as papers found in a suitcase thrown clear of the wreckage disclosed their names. The other victims' names were learned at San Antonio, where the plane took off early today.

Linemen employed by the West Texas Utilities Co. saw the ship crash about 5 o'clock this afternoon, and were first to reach the scene. The plane was first identified by its license number by a flyer employed at San Antonio.

The trouble that led to the crash had not been ascertained tonight. The plane was seen flying low as though in an attempt to get down, when suddenly it went out of control and crashed in flames.

Watson, the pilot, was a well known commercial pilot and war air veteran. He recently had been employed as pilot at the Austin airport. During the World War, he was a Sergeant in the air service, and was stationed at Ellington Field, Houston, and Mitchel Field, New York. He formerly operated a flying school in Los Angeles.

He is survived by a daughter, "Bubbles," of Cleveland, O., and his father, who lives in Gary, Ind.

Owner Planned to Put Craft Into Service at Denver.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 1.—The airplane which crashed near Spur, Tex., today, killing five persons, was owned by the Sunbeam Air Transport Co., Inc., with offices here. Homer D. Ballard, millionaire aviation enthusiast, was president of the company.

Denver aviators familiar with Ballard's activities understood he was on his way to Denver with the plane to put it into passenger service. The millionaire air enthusiast had properties in 13 states and in two Canadian provinces.

Ballard bought the first Ryan monoplane manufactured by Mahoney Aircraft Corporation of San Diego and St. Louis which was turned out after Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis." Lindbergh's plane was No. 76; Ballard's No. 77.

TOY BALLOON SENT UP IN IOWA LANDS IN MASSACHUSETTS

Released at Football Game Thursday, Found Friday 1000 Miles Away.

By the Associated Press.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Dec. 1.—A toy balloon reported to have landed in Chesterfield, Mass., 1000 miles by air line from here, yesterday morning, was released here Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by Paul Frantzen, 15 years old, in celebration of the scoring of a touchdown in a football game by his school, Columbia Academy. Francis Sutherland, 10, was reported as the finder of the balloon near his home at Chesterfield.

The balloon was one of a hundred released by rooters as Barkley, Academy star, finished a 96-yard run for a touchdown against St. Ambrose of Davenport. All had names and addresses of the students attached, and a prize was offered to the one whose balloon floated farthest.

$350 TAKEN IN HOLDUP OF MELBA THEATER OFFICER

Fred Wehrenberg, of Amusement Chain, Robbed in Alley at Grand and Miami.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the South Side Amusement Co., which operates five neighborhood theaters, was held up by two men and robbed of $250 in cash in the alley beside the Melba Theater, at Grand boulevard and Miami street, at 10:15 last night.

He had made the round of the five theaters, paying employes at each place from the night's receipts, and placing the balance in his purse. At the Melba Theater he parked in the alley because of congestion on Grand boulevard. When he returned to the car, the robbers were waiting.

With drawn pistols, they marched him about 50 feet farther into the alley, where they took his purse and fled on foot to the east.

Leon Toral had been given a sentence of death before a firing squad and the nun, as the "author of the crime," incurred a penalty of 20 years' imprisonment.

The three magistrates of the Superior Court before whom the appeal was argued on Nov. 22 gave their finding tonight. The defendants were immediately notified in their cells in the penitentiary.

WILKINS PLANE AND PILOT GO THROUGH ICE

Propeller Bent, Hole in Wings; Flyer Suffers Only an Antarctic Ducking.

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS.
(Copyright, 1928.)

This story is published exclusively in St. Louis in the Post-Dispatch. All news articles from members of the Wilkins party, or from special correspondents assigned to it, will appear only in the Post-Dispatch in this city.

DECEPTION ISLAND, Antarctia, Dec. 1.—Marring a day of otherwise excellent progress for this Antarctic expedition, an accident climaxed the transfer of our two planes from the ship to the ice fields today, preparatory to taking off for Southern explorations.

Net results of the accident: Plane Los Angeles has a bent propeller and a hole in its wings. Pilot Ben Eielson suffered a ducking in the icy sea, and aerial operations are delayed about a week.

We took what we thought was a fifty-fifty chance. It turned out to be fifty-to-one against both machines. With only a pilot and a few gallons of gasoline aboard each, the planes took the air at 5:30 a. m.

Our object was to land on the ice with wheels, equip planes with skiis, then fuel up for flights. Orville Porter and I had inspected the ice last night.

The Los Angeles came down beautifully, taxiing several hundred feet. But as it came to rest a wheel struck a hole in the ice and went through. The machine slowly nosed over. Eielson fell through the ice but managed to clamber out without suffering more than a wetting.

A slightly bent propeller was the only real damage. We tried to right the machine but as its weight came on the wheels, they crunched through the ice. The plane sank until the wings and fuselage held it.

With a line and the willing help of the Norwegians, under direction of Mates Thorbjornsen and Fendahl, we jacked up the machine on towers made especially for such an emergency. Then we slipped on the skiis and hauled the plane safely on to solid ice.

We must overhaul part of the engine, which was under water for two hours. Nothing was broken; a cleaning will fix it. We have material to mend the wing and also a spare propeller. In a week the machine should be ready to fly but we cannot use the harbor ice.

FATHER ENDS LIFE WITH GAS; SON, 4, KILLED BY FUMES

J. M. McGuffy and Child Found Unconscious at Home, 2621 Texas Av., Fail to Revive.

POLICE THINK LAD'S DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Surmise He Wandered Into Room Hunting Father and was Overcome — Husband Ill, Wife Says.

James M. McGuffy, 49 years old, ended his life with gas yesterday in the kitchen of his home at 2621 Texas avenue, and his 4-year-old son, Roy, who is thought to have wandered into the gas-filled room in search of his father, also was killed.

The police theory that the boy's death was accidental is supported by the circumstances of the tragedy, including the fact that a farewell note written by McGuffy does not mention the son.

Policemen, were called at 6:30 p. m. by a neighbor who had traced gas fumes to the McGuffy home and had turned off the gas in the basement. The police found the kitchen door unlocked and slightly ajar. McGuffy lay unconscious on a cot before the range. The boy lay on the floor between the cot and the door.

On the table beside McGuffy's cot was the following penciled note to his wife, Minnie: "I am doing this to make you happy. You cannot be happy with me, so I hope you will be happy hereafter. I tried to make you happy but failed. I loved deeply but not wisely. As ever, your loving husband. MACK."

And a post-script: "Goodby. Forgive me. You were warned."

McGuffy, a stationary engineer, had disconnected the gas range by removing a pipe connection with a wrench after his wife had left on a shopping expedition at 1 o'clock. The boy was seen playing alone in the rear yard as late as 3 o'clock.

Mrs. McGuffey came home at 6:45 o'clock, shortly after the police had arrived. Her husband had been acting queerly for some time, she said, and had been feeling ill. When she left the house, she related she told her boy to play in the yard, with the injunction, "Don't bother daddy." The only reason she could give for her husband's suicide was that his mind was affected.

With the aid of neighbors, policemen attempted to revive the boy and his father. Fire Department inhalators were taken to the house but were ineffective.

McGuffy was pronounced dead at 7:30, the boy 30 minutes later.

MISS MANVILLE BECOMES BRIDE OF SWEDISH COUNT

Heiress Married to Folke Bernadotte, Nephew of King, in Ceremony of Military Splendor.

AFFAIR SAID TO HAVE COST $750,000

Fifteen Hundred Persons At Reception — Decorations and Gorgeous Attire Make Impressive Sight.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—In a tiny church glistening with Chirstmas tree decorations and with all of Pleasantville standing around outside like the peasant chorus of an operatta, Miss Estelle Romaine Manville became the bride this afternoon of Count Folke Bernadotte, a nephew of the King of Sweden.

The ceremony united the daughter of an American capitalist with a member of the reigning house of Sweden, a democratic and likeable man, whose father might have been King had he not renounced the throne to marry a commoner.

Attending the wedding were members of Swedish royalty and the nobility Sweedish diplmatic representatives in the United States and a notable array of this country's leaders in wealth and society. About 250 persons— all the small church would hold—were invited to the ceremony, and 1000 or more attended the reception afterward at Hi-Esmaro, the country estate of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Edward Manville. The function is said to have cost $750,000.

Heir Presumptive Present.

Next to the bridal couple, the center of attraction among the guests were Prince Gustavus Adolphus, eldest son of the Crown Prince of Sweden and heir presumptive to the throne, and his younger brother, Count Sigvard. All three, as well as other Swedish members of the wedding party, wore the sky blue silver-trimmed uniforms of the Royal Horse Guards of Sweden.

The occasion was all but a public holiday in Pleasantville. The whole town turned out and divided its attention between watching the silk hats get off the trains from New York and seeing the blue Swedish uniforms go into the church. Later the streets of the peaceable village were choked with cars bringing wedding guests to Hi-Esmaro, and there were such traffic jams as Pleasantville never has seen before. The police, not only of Pleasantville, but of Chappaqua, the local firemen and a detail of New York Central Railroad detectives were called out, directing traffic.

Bride in Ivory White Velvet.

At 4 o'clock the wedding party swept up to St. Johns Episcopal Church, a little ivy-covered building set in an autumnal landscape. Miss Manville rode in an automobile with her father and mother. She was a pale figure in a trailing gown of ivory white velvet, made princess style, with its two pointed trains connected by a wide panel of rare old Italian lace. Her veil was made of old Brussels lace inherited by Count Folke from his grandmother, the late Queen Sophia of Sweden. With it she wore a coronet of crystal and silver specially made by the Swedish court jeweler.

Count Folke and the best man, Prince Gustavus Adolphus, left the weding party a little way down the street and entered the church through a side door, to join the bride and her father before the altar.

The little church, with its paneled ceiling and plain buff plaster walls, was decorated in Christmas colors—tall red and white tapers, red African daises, cheerful festoons of green smilax. The red of the candles and flowers was matched by the deep red gowns of the bridesmaids, who carried white gardenias.

Crowd Gathers at Church.

Outside, the townspeople crowded the street, the lawns, porches and windows of neighboring houses Small boys climbed trees and automobiles. They could see nothing beyond the miniature Kleig lights, under the canopy at the entrance of the church. But more privileged ones in the vestibule could see the maroon colored figures before the frosty altar, the slender figure of the bride, the solemn clergy. They could hear the wedding march from Lohengrin, and later Mendelss-

CRISIS REPORTED NEAR IN TWO-WEEK ILLNESS OF RULER

Doctor's Bulletin Makes First Mention of Sovereign's Being Tired Since Attack of Pleurisy Began.

HIS EMPIRE TO PRAY TODAY FOR PATIENT

Prince of Wales, Now Waiting in African Port for Cruiser, Expected Home Dec. 13 or 14.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(Sunday)—At 1:15 o'clock this morning all was reported quiet at Buckingham Palace, and it was said there was nothing critical in the condition of King George at that hour.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Public anxiety over the illness of King George increased tonight. The official bulletin this morning related that the patient had experienced a slight rise in temperature, and the one given out tonight said:

"The King has had a rather disturbed day, with short intervals of sleep, and is therefore somewhat fatigued."

It also was announced that although no forenoon bulletin was given out last Sunday, the regular morning and evening bulletins would be issued tomorrow.

Thoroughly conversant with the customary reticence displayed in messages from the palace, the public was inclined to take a more pessimistic view of the sovereign's illness than was indicated by the guarded language employed in today's official announcements.

Temperature Not Announced.

The exact extent of the pleurisy and infection of the lung and the king's temperature are all unknown to the public. His temperature reading has not been given out by his physicians since Monday night, when the bulletin said it had increased to 101.6 degrees. It was lower the next morning, and again yesterday a drop was mentioned.

Thursday it was announced that the infective process was being held in check, but the bulletins yesterday warned the public that the time of possible exacerbation of the infection had not yet passed.

Tonight, for the first time, the physicians said that the patient was "fatigued." He has been in bed almost two weeks and his illness is now about at its crisis.

Prayers Over Empire Today.

Throughout the vast Empire tomorrow, subjects of the King will offer prayers for his recovery. These will be not alone in the churches and chapels of many denominations of the Christian religion, but in the places of worship of many other creeds followed in the domains over which the ruler is sovereign.

A call for prayers for the speedy recovery of the King was made by the new Archbishop of Canterbury in his first public letter, which was addressed to the Bishop of London. He urged that the prayers be offered not only tomorrow but until all cause for anxiety had been removed.

The Queen and Princess Mary took a short motor drive this afternoon. The Queen left the palace at another time today to spend nearly three hours in private visits.

Family Cancels Engagements.

The weekend plans of the Royal family were much altered because of the illness of the King. King George and Queen Mary some time ago had planned to go to Sandringham today, while the Duke and Dutchess of York had arranged for a week end with the Duke and Duchess of Rutland at Belvoir Castle, which they canceled.

The Prince of Wales is expected to start tomorrow on his hurried homeward voyage by embarking on the fast cruiser Enterprise at Dares-Salaam. Leaving the cruiser at the Sues Canal, he will travel by train to Alexandria and embark

13 DIG WAY OUT OF POLICE STATION IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Prisoners Pry Open Cell Doors, Then Tunnel Through Brick Wall and Escape by Rope.

Thirteen prisoners escaped from the cell room of the East St. Louis police headquarters at 107 North Main street last night through a hole dug in the rear brick wall of the building.

While unsuspecting policemen sat in the adjoining office, the prisoners pried open cell doors and removed bricks and mortar from a space in the wall three feet wide and 18 inches high, lowering themselves 20 feet to the ground on a rope of electric wire and towels.

An hour later no trace of any of the fugitives had been found. All of the bridges to St. Louis were heavily guarded and the highways leading elsewhere from East St. Louis were being watched.

Eleven of the fugitives were Federal prisoners, some under sentence and others awaiting trial; one was a suspect held for the Sheriff, and one a confessed Negro burglar.

Most of the men had the freedom of the cell room, although some who had been locked in cells succeeded in prying the doors open. The only prisoners remaining when the jail break was discovered were in locked cells.

At 10:30 o'clock, Night Chief Thomas O'Bryan went to the cell room to lock up a suspect who had just been arrested. Ten minutes later a prisoner began shouting. Patrolman Monds ran to investigate and discovered that the prisoner had escaped.

At the rear of the cellroom, in a position concealed from the entrance, bricks had been torn from the wall and scattered over the floor. The slender piston of a fire extinguisher obviously had been used as a tool to pry out the crumbling mortar. The hole yawned out over a vacant lot which extends to Third street, a block to the west.

The Federal prisoners who escaped were Charles Dyannick and his brother, and Thomas DeBlasz, a Negro, all convicted under the Dyer automobile act; James Hamilton, Alton George, Jack Allan, George Thomas, William Spede, Norman Gaines, W. R. Healy and Henry George. The other prisoners were Elwood Shields, a Negro, who has confessed eight burglaries and James Moseley, a suspect.

122 KNOWN DEAD IN EARTHQUAKE THAT ROCKS CHILE

Unofficial Reports List 60 More — 250 Injured — Talca and Chillan Suffer Most Severely.

By the Associated Press.

SANTIAGO, Dec. 1.—Official compilation of the list of dead in the earthquake which rocked southern Chile at 12:11 a. m. today reached 122 tonight with more than 60 other deaths reported in unofficial dispatches. The government announced that more than 250 had been injured.

The cities of Talca, with 36,000 population, and Chillan, with 31,000 inhabitants, suffered most severely, although casualties were reported from a dozen other towns with destruction of property in many others.

In Talca the official count was 40 dead and 200 injured. The conductor of the first train to come from that city, however, estimated the dead at 80.

Martial Law Proclaimed.

Martial law was proclaimed in the city and demolition of tottering ruins was begun to prevent further casualties.

The Minister of War went by plane to Talca to take charge of relief work, while special trains rushed supplies, physicians, nurses and troops. The hospital there was destroyed by fire, following the earthquake.

The government reported 17 killed and 20 injured at Chillan, where 50 houses were destroyed. Forty were killed and more than 100 injured at the Barahona camp of the Teniente Mine of the Braden Copper Co., where the shock broke a reservoir and loosed a torrent down the valley. Many were drowned in the flood.

Five dead and four injured were officially reported from Pelequen and six dead from Santa Cruz, although the unofficial list showed 13 dead in the latter town. There were five dead in Quinta and two in Curico. At Curepto four were killed and several injured. At Lincanten three were killed and 17 injured.

Jail-Break Reported.

There is no confirmation as yet of reports from Talca that 40 prisoners escaped from the penitentiary after the earthquake. Martial law

SERVICE BOARD MOVES TO END GAS MONOPOLY

Grants Permit to Industrial Co. to Pipe Natural Supply From Texas to Kansas City.

"COMPETITION IN PUBLIC INTEREST"

Once Blocked by Federal Order in Preventing Increase in Rates by Present Company.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 1.—The prevailing policy of granting regulated monopolies to public utilities rather than permitting competition, was varied today by the Missouri Public Service Commission in granting a permit to the Industrial Gas Co. of Missouri, to supply natural gas to industrial consumers in Kansas City, Mo., in competition with the Kansas City Gas Co., which has had a monopoly there.

The issuance of the permit has been fought by the Kansas City Gas Co. for months. The permit will enable the Industrial Gas Co. to build and operate a gas distribution system in Kansas City, to serve industrial consumers, under a franchise already granted to the company by the City Council.

Natural gas for the new company will be supplied by the Kansas City-Texas Gas Co., owned by the same interests that control the Industrial company. Gas will be carried to Kansas City from the field at Amarillo, Tex., in a pipe line to be built at a cost of approximately $32,000,000, including the distribution system.

The Kansas City Gas Co. has a Kansas City franchise for serving both domestic and industrial consumers with natural gas. It obtains its gas supply from the Cities Service Gas Co., a pipe line company owned by the Doherty interests, which also control the Kansas City Gas Co.

"Competition Beneficial."

The commission overruled the plea of the Kansas City Gas Co. that it was entitled to protection as a regulated monopoly, and held that in the circumstances, competition would not be detrimental to the public interest, but would be beneficial.

"It may be said that the prevailing policy in State regulation of public utilities is to favor regulated monopolies rather than to encourage competition," the commission said in its order. "But this is by no means an absolute and unvarying rule. In its application it is designed to protect and promote the best interests of the public, and when it fails to do this there is no reason why this policy should be followed. In other words, the public good and the general public welfare is the objective sought and all rules should be so applied as to attain that end."

So far as rates are concerned, the Kansas City Gas Co. is an "unregulated monopoly," the commission declares, because it buys its gas from the Cities Service Gas Co., an allied company, at the Missouri-Kansas state line, and bases its Kansas City gas rates upon the price paid its allied company at the State line.

How Rates Were Increased.

In a previous case, in which the commission sought to prevent the Kansas City company from increasing its rates, based upon an increase in charges by the pipe line company, the Federal Court held the pipe line company was operating in interstate commerce and the commission could not interfere. The Court dismissed the commission's suit, restrained it from interfering with the new rates, and the ruling was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court.

In discussing the connection between the Kansas City Gas Co. and the affiliated Cities Service Gas Co. the commission said: "These controlling interests govern the price of gas to consumers in Kansas City, to a great extent, by the simple expedient of changing the price charged at the State line, and this commission has no power to interfere."

The Cities Service Gas Co. delivers gas to the Kansas City Gas Co. at 40 cents a thousand cubic feet, with some reductions for gas sold by the Kansas City company to large consumers at less than the domestic rate.

The commission did not approve any rates to be charged by the Industrial Gas Co., as this is a matter that will be presented when the company actually begins operations.

There was testimony that the Kansas City Texas Gas Co., which is to furnish its supply, would obtain gas in the Amarillo field at 3 cents a thousand cubic feet, compared to 8 to 9 cents paid by the Cities Service company in the Kansas field.

The proposed financial structure of the Industrial company was not approved in the order, as that also will come before the commission later. The order grants the permit required by law, before a gas utility can begin construction of a distribution system, and carries the authority to operate it when it is constructed.

there had prevented any disorders or looting.

A hospital and dispensary at Temuco were demolished and the Cathedral at L'Nares is in ruins. The Port of Concepcion reported two injured and considerable property damage. The Port of Tome suffered slight damage to houses. A warship has been ordered to Concepcion to aid in relief work.

The government has authorized the use of funds to enable the afflicted localities to meet the situation. President Ibanez, who was touring in Southern Chile, announced that he would visit the stricken district to inform himself of its needs.

Small Damage in Santiago.

Santiago and Valparaiso were only slightly damaged, but several persons were injured in the panic-stricken rush of the populace for the open air when the earthquake awoke them.

The earth tremors recurred for a period of three hours, although only the most severe was felt in the capital. The first shock lasted half a minute. The epicenter is thought to have been near Talca.

The torrent from the broken reservoir of Barahona mining camp swept away houses and their occupants as it raced down the valley toward Cachapoal. The reservoir held water used in washing the ore from the copper mines.

Warnings were sent to the villages down the valley, including Rio Abajo. Although structures along the river bank in Cachapoal were swept away and silt was heaped high in the lower part of the town by the raging stream, the authorities think emergency measures they have taken will keep the flow in check.

The authorities of Rancagua, the capital of the province, a little lower in the valley, took measures to prevent the fouled water from entering the reservoirs of drinking water in that vicinity.

While the Government tonight was making every effort to determine the extent of the catastrophe, in order to aid the stricken inhabitants, it could obtain only fragmentary news over roundabout routes, due to the almost total breakdown in telegraph and telephone communications within the affected region.

The area affected most seriously by the shocks lies in the south central part of this narrow country, between the Andes and the Pacific, and stretches from Rancagua, which is 52 miles from here, to towns about 200 miles to the south.

The most recent previous severe earthquake in Chile was that of November, 1922, which destroyed whole towns in Southern Chile, while tidal waves engulfed the seaports. The U. S. S. Cleveland, which today landed Herbert Hoover at Guayaquil, Ecuador, in 1922, with the American warship Denver, was sent to Chile with relief supplies from the Canal Zone as soon as President Harding heard of the disaster.

LOCAL EXHIBITION CO. MAKES EASTERN DEAL

Arranges to Bring Some of Madison Square Garden Attractions Here.

The National Exhibition Co., sponsor of the new exhibition ground on Oakland avenue immediately west of Forest Park Highlands, has entered an agreement with Tex Rickard, John Ringling, R. S. Hoyt and other directors of Madison Square Garden, under which it becomes directly affiliated with the New York enterprise, and will get many of its attractions for St. Louis.

The agreement, announced yesterday by Harold M. Bixby, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce, will insure St. Louis a program of activities calculated to attract many visitors to the city from the St. Louis trade territory. Among the events in prospect are the six-day bicycle race and the Madison Square Garden rodeo.

Approximately 100 business men have been invited to a breakfast tomorrow to be held in dining cars on a railroad spur in the exhibition grounds. Already the first of the company's buildings, an arena, is under construction, and plans will be discussed for two exhibition buildings.

The arena will be 134 feet high and 476 feet long, and besides containing 12,500 permanent seats, will have room for 7000 more on the playing field in its center.

One of the first events to be held on the grounds is to be the National Dairy Show. The association sponsoring the show has agreed to hold it in St. Louis for five consecutive years beginning next summer.

The exposition plant will represent an initial investment of $1,000,000. Later it is planned to add other buildings and a track for harness races so that the investment eventually will be probably about $2,500,000.

The members of the board of directors of the company as announced by Bixby yesterday are: Bixby, who is vice-president of the State National Bank; Mayor Miller; L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific; Oliver J. Anderson, broker; F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co.; E. A. Faust, president of the Missouri Lamella Roofing Co.; E. T. RED FIRE AND GREAT CROWDS GREET MAYOR, OUT OF JAIL

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Dec. 1.—His Honor the Mayor, Andrew J. (Bossy) Gillis, same home from jail tonight and was welcomed by thousands of persons from towns and cities thoroughout this district. Red lights were burned, and horns blown as the crowd escorted his automobile into the city. There was a parade formed through the principal streets where banners reading, "we love and appreciate our mayor" greeted the happy Bossy.

The Mayor was released from the Essex County jail at Salem today after serving two months for cutting down trees without permission and for illegally conducting a gasoline station. At the City Hall here, under a sign, "Welcome Home, Bossy," speeches were made by Mayor Gillis' friends, a check for $2000 was presented to him by the Gillisonian Club and Bossy gave vent to his feelings. He attacked Judge Nathaniel N. Jones, who sentenced him in the local court and William G. Clark of Gloucester, District Attorney, who prosecuted the charge against him, saying that they had treated him unfairly.

COLOMBIAN FLYER CRASHES LANDING PLANE IN BAY

By the Associated Press.

COLON, Panama Canal Zone, Dec. 1.—Lieutenant Benjamin Mendez, flying from New York to his native Colombia, was rescued by a United States Government launch when his plane sank as he brought it down on the surface of the bay here at 4:55 p. m. today. The Colombian aviator had flown from Bluefields, Nicaragua.

Mendez had circled over the bay within view of the town for 12 minutes before attempting a landing. Just as the plane struck the surface of the water, it turned somewhat on its nose and sank.

Mendez, who had learned to fly at Long Island aviation fields while making his way by carrying gasoline to pilots, left New York on Nov. 23 for a flight to his home in Bogota, Colombia.

Although his plane, The Ricaurte, the gift of his countrymen and the Bogota newspaper Mundo El Dia, was almost completely submerged, a line was made fast to it and it was towed to the shore.

John Todd Hunter, American mechanic with Mendez, was cut on the lips. He was given first aid at France Field.

MUSSOLINI ISSUES REBUKE TO FRANCE ON COURT DECISION

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World

(Copyright, 1928, by the Press and Publisher Publishing Cos., the New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

ROME, Dec. 1.—Premier Mussolini today rebuked France for the light sentence imposed by Paris courts on the killer of the Italian Vice Consul. He took cognizance of the fevered demonstrations of the last two days in a speech before the Council of Ministers, significant for the frank criticism expressed.

"The whole nation," he said, "these last few days has been gravely and justly wounded by the sentence of the Parisian jury which almost acquitted the assassin of an old faithful servant of the State, the consular representative of Italy at Paris.

"The Government understands the indignant emotion of the Italian people and is happy to note that the spontaneous demonstrations of the student masses went off with perfect discipline."

Wide Reaction Expected.

This utterance from the Fascist autocrat and symbol of Italian power in the modern world is expected to have a profound influence. Demonstrators welcome it as extremely favorable to their activities. Military men are elated and foresee a return to the battle fields.

The cry of war is heard in every avenue of Rome tonight. Impromptu parades of students are many, some with banners aloft, others brandishing posters of the Fascist chief and premier, all shouting for hostilities with the French.

What has aroused the emotions of the populace to a high pitch is the sentence of two years imprisonment imposed by Paris courts on Serge di Modugno, Italian Communist, who shot and killed Count Carlo Nardini, Vice Consul, in 1927. This is deemed a punishment too gentle and is interpreted as a slap at Italy.

With detachments of cavalry frustrating riotous uprising but giving generous rein, students massed in front of the French and Jugo-Slav Embassies this afternoon.

Veteran Returns French Medal.

The third Italian war hero today returned his French medal citing him for bravery to President Doumergue. Lieut. Alberici, retired, has written the Fascist Impero proposing that all Italians having French medals return their brevets and badges and send their medals to the Rome munitions factory.

"To make ammunition for our foes," he wrote, "our medals can be used."

Commenting, the Impero observes that if others follow suit, the munitions factory will soon have enough for a charge of dynamite and powder.

A woman vows in the public prints she will never use French cosmetics again, nor drink French wines, nor answer "any living soul" speaking French to her. French fashion papers and styles are taboo for her.

The Giornale d'Italia, accredited vcice of the Government, took issue with the alleged statement Premier Poincaire made before the Chamber of Deputies that "an imperialistic government" would immediately take over the Syrian mandate should France give it up.

This organ is certain Poincaire meant Italy. It strongly demands an explanation, adding France still owes Italy money for a colonial campaign in the last war. France got 10 times more colonies than Italy after the war, the Giornale protests. Italy simply wants to see Syria free from "French tyranny," the editorial remarks.

What Curtis and Longworth Expect Congress to Put Through Senator Mentions Boulder Canyon, Kellogg Treaty, Naval and Farm Relief Bills—Speaker Against Tariff Revision Now.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of the House, and Senator Charles Curtis, Vice President-elect and Republican floor leader, today at the request of the Associated Press gave their views of the prospects for legislation at the session of Congress which will begin on Monday.

With most of the major legislation mapped out for it disposed of at the first session of the Congress, the House approaches the short and final session with an eye toward completing work on other important bills still pending and sending to the Senate as soon as possible the annual supply measures.

If we are to have a special session of the new Congress to consider tariff revision this should be held in the fall so as to permit a thorough study at hearings to start after March 4 by the Ways and Means Committee.

Farm relief can and should be passed at the short session. The long pending Muscle Shoals question also should be settled and demands for a reapportionment of the House membership met. The farm bill could be put through quickly by eliminating the features of the McNary-Haugen measure to which strong objection has been made and leaving for a possible extra session relief provisions relating to the tariff.

I foresee little delay in passing the nine annual appropriation bills. The Appropriations Committee has been working almost a month and there is a probability that we may dispose of two or three of these measures before the Christmas holidays.

The record of accomplishment of the first session of the Seventieth Congress is a goal for the concluding session which we start Monday. I am confident that this high record will be maintained.

A year ago I predicted a session filled with legislative progress. That prediction was fulfilled. I am proud of that record and anxious that it be repeated.

The Senate has a large calendar of business—one that will demand every attention for its disposal. We start work immediately on the Boulder Canyon dam measure, which is the unfinished business. Then there are other major legislative and executive proposals awaiting early consideration, including the naval construction bill, farm relief and the Kellogg anti-war treaty.

With the spirit of co-operation manifested on both sides during the first session, I am confident that March 4 will mark the close of a Congress which has broken all records in its attention to the nation's business.

BLOCKS SIDENER MOVE TO SETTLE WITH BONDSMAN

School Board Lawyer Denies Agreeing to Dismiss $10,000 Suit as Circuit Attorney Said He Had.

A stipulation asking for dismissal of a suit filed in the name of the State by Circuit Attorney Sidener last February against Jack Nieman, a professional bondsman, and J. I. Epstein Jr. was refused by Circuit Judge Ossing yesterday when counsel for the Board of Education, beneficiary under the suit, objected to the dismissal on the ground that the board had been misrepresented as agreeing to the action.

The suit was to enjoin the foreclosure sale of real estate at 6616 Maple avenue, which Nieman had scheduled when he qualified as a professional bondsman in December, 1926. In his petition, Sidener pointed out that Nieman had signed two bonds of $5000 each for Lester Bene; that these bonds had been forfeited, and that attempts by the State to collect on them had disclosed Nieman had no property in his own name. Sale of the property, the petition stated, was advertised to take place in satisfaction of a second deed of trust for $6380 made by Nieman in favor of Epstein, trustee for Louis Fornoff. Sidener alleged that this deed of trust had been fraudulently executed.

Friday Sidener presented the stipulation, signed by himself for the plaintiff and by defense counsel and stating that dismissal of the suit would be agreeable to both parties providing Nieman would pay costs of $345.

The stipulation added that consent to this action also had been given by the Board of Education, to whom forfeited bonds are payable. Robert W. Burkham, counsel for the board, denied making such an agreement and declared the board had not been consulted in the matter.

Virtually All of Consignment Seized on Way to Lambert Field Recovered in Kirkwood.

LOOT $48 IN CASH AND $27 NECKLACE

Canceled Checks Representing $1,000,000 in Pouches Valueless to Highwaymen.

Virtually all of the air mail consignment stolen by two highwaymen, who held up Henry C. Graham, contract postal carrier, on Natural Bridge road, a short distance east of Lambert-St. Louis Field, Friday afternoon, was found yesterday afternoon in the automobile used by the robbers in their escape and later abandoned in front of the Kirkwood Junior High School at Clay and Adams avenues.

Each of the five mail pouches had been ripped by the robbers and a few letters from each had been opened. The greater part of the mail shipment, however, had not been opened. The pouches contained only 13 registered letters and packages with contents comprising $48 in cash and a necklace valued at $27.

Robbers Had Stolen Car.

The automobile used by the robbers, a Chrysler sedan, had been stolen Friday from the garage of the Midwest Motor Co. at 2621 Locust boulevard. When it was found by policemen summoned to the scene by a resident who had noticed the abandoned car, its gasoline tank was empty and its battery completely run down.

Kirkwood policemen and postoffice inspectors were unable to find anyone who had seen the occupants of the car and could not definitely fix the time that it was left there. The five pouches had been thrown into the tonneau and the letters taken from them had been scattered on the seat and floor of the car by the robbers.

Cash Not Sent by Air.

After the robbery, Olin M. Attebury, deputy governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, explained that it was not the bank's practice to send cash by air mail. The shipment, however, did contain about $1,000,000 in canceled checks dispatched to New York for clearing, but which were valueless to the robbers.

Graham was accompanied by his wife when his automobile was crowded to the side of Natural Bridge road, near Brown road, by a blue sedan. He was disarmed by one of the two armed men in the car, who made him and Mrs. Graham walk into a cornfield nearby, and then threw the mail pouches into the Chrysler, which was driven westward.

The Rev. Ernest W. Stires, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Long Island, performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Emmons P. Burril, rector of St. Johns, and the Rev. John N. Lewis Jr., of Westover School.

Miss Marian G. Willard was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Ethel Schniewind, Miss Lydia E. Dadmun, Miss Elizabeth Kountze and Miss Renee Baruch.

The ushers were Count Carl Bernadotte, brother of the bridegroom; Baron Sigfried Ralamb, Baron Carl Eric Von Platen, Count Pehr Sparre, Lieut. Johan Enhoerning, Lieut Lagencrantz, Lieut. Goesta Pauli and H. Edward Manville Jr., brother of the bride.

Bridegroom Caresses Child

Elizabeth Ashforth and Jack Strong were the cushion bearers. During the ceremony the bridegroom put his hand out and affectionately rumpled the small, blond head of Jack, who stood in front of him.

As the bridal party left the church, the ushers crossed swords above their heads, and the bride and bridegroom walked under a shining arch of steel. Count Bernadotte smiled and waved his helmet at the yelling crowd.

The grounds of the Manville mansion, high up on a long hill outside of Pleasantville, were strung with electric lights. State troopers directed the interminable, slow moving lines of automobiles to the entrance.

Yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, maroon chrysanthemums, yellow roses and many white flowers decorated the huge house.

A wedding cake, five foot high, made in terraces like a little skyscraper and decorated with sugar statuettes and the coat of arms of the Manvilles and the Bernadottes, stood in the center of a huge patio made into a reproduction of a tropical garden, with an azure ceiling, orange trees and tropical vines.

Buffet Supper for Guests

Here was spread a long table for the bridal party and smaller tables for the immediate relatives of the two families. A buffet supper was served the huge crowd of guests in the main dining room.

Spread through the house and guarding the presents were twenty former New York City detectives under the direction of Thomas V. Underhill, Sheriff of Westchester County and former Inspector of New York police.

The wedding gifts were lavish and valuable. Their donors were not disclosed but it was learned that the King of Sweden sent to Miss Manville a diamond brooch with two antique pearls, both said to be worth $100,000.

Count Bernadotte's gift to his bride was a diamond and platinum crown, which she will wear for her presentation at the Court of Sweden.

Among the gifts were a diamond tiara, diamond earrings, almost a dozen clocks, including two boudoir clocks with bases of rose quartz; several dozen cigaret boxes of valuable materials; objets d'art or rose quartz and jade; tables full of valuable silver and glassware; a small library of beautifully bound books, including everything from the Greville diary to Bartlett's "familiar quotations."

To Go to Sweden in January.

After the reception Count and Countess Bernadotte departed on an American honeymoon trip. They will arrive at their home in Stockholm about Jan. 1.

The history of the bridegroom's family is an interesting chapter in the history of Europe in the past century. Napoleon, at the height of his power, lifted the Count's ancestor, the first Bernadotte, who married a woman who had rejected Napoleon in his younger days, to the throne of Sweden.

Miss Manville is the daughter of H. E. Manville, chairman of the board of Johns-Manville, Inc., of New York. She is a descendant of Jeoffrey de Magnavil, an adherent of William the Conqueror and of Jeoffrey de Mandeville, first Earl of Essex. She made her debut in New York a few years ago and is known as an enthusiastic sportswoman.

Members of the Royal Swedish party who came to America for the wedding included Count Carl Bernadotte, brother of the bridegroom, and his wife, Countess Marianne Bernadotte; the Countess Elsa Bernadotte, and Baroness Sophie Fleetwood, sisters of the bridegroom; Count Carl Bonde, master of the King's horse, and his wife, the Countess Ebba Bonde; Count Nils Wachtmeister, the Countess Bernadotte; Countess Gunhild von Platen and Count Eric von Rosen.

The party attended a theater in New York tonight, later returning to Hi-Esmaro for a midnight supper party.

BUS WRECKS STORE; TWO PERSONS HURT

Trying to Avert Collision With Auto at Pattonville, Driver Loses Control.

A runaway motorbus crashed into the front wall of C. C. Branneky's general store at Pattonville, on St. Charles road, at 3 p. m. yesterday, routed some 20 customers who were in the store and stopped with its rear wheels 20 feet within the building.

Although the doors and windows of the building were splintered, parts of the brick wall torn out and show cases and shelves scattered about the room, only two persons were hurt. Mrs. E. J. Williams and her 2-year-old daughter, living nearby, were cut slightly by flying glass.

The bus, operated by the Purple Swan line between St. Louis and Kansas City, was moving west when an automobile northbound on Fee Fee road reached the intersection. The bus chauffeur swerved to avoid a collision but was unable to stop the heavy car. It bounced over 40 feet of ground before hitting the building.

Branneky estimated his loss at $5000.

The passengers were sent on in another bus while the work of extricating the disabled bus was undertaken.

GIRL SITTING IN MAN'S AUTO IS STABBED BY HIS WIFE

Miss Juanita Harvel Cut on Face and Side by Mrs. Jerry Macka, Who Flees.

Sitting in an automobile belonging to Jerry Macka, 33 years old, a soda fountain clerk, Miss Juanita Harvel, 20, a factory worker, was stabbed twice last night when Macka's wife suddenly opened the door and attacked her with a knife. The car was parked at Ninth and Locust streets, near Macka's place of employment at a downtown Walgreen store. Miss Harvel's assailant stabbed her in the face and side and fled. Police were looking for her last night.

Miss Harvel, who was taken to city hospital, said that Macka had been keeping company with her since he separated from his wife eight months ago. She said she had refused his attentions before the separation. Earlier in the evening, she said, Macka had given to his wife the $15 he pays her weekly for the support of their two children.

Miss Harvel is expected to recover. She rooms at 3958 Lindell boulevard.

"HONEST JOHN" WAITS FOR PAROLE IN STATE PRISON

Blacksmith Berne Taken Motoring to Call on Gov. Baker, but Executive Is Away.

Convict No. 32,093, otherwise "Honest John" Berne, whose testimony recently sent four men to the penitentiary, was back again in a state prison cell at Jefferson City last night, hopeful of parole.

Gov. Baker, however, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that, irrespective of "Honest John's" services to the State, the convict would have to follow the usual routine of appearing before the Parole Board. If this body recommends a parole, Gov. Baker said he would grant it. Otherwise, the Governor will take no action.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Stack and Detective-Lieutenant Carroll drove to Jefferson City with Berne and missed seeing the Governor only because the latter had gone to Columbia. They carried a petition for Berne's release which was signed by the St. Louis Grand Jury.

In Jail Here Five Months.

Berne, a blacksmith, has been held at Police Headquarters for the last five months because authorities feared to send him back to his cell at the penitentiary, where fellow inmates had uttered threats to kill him for turning State's evidence. The Warden at Jefferson City said he would keep Berne in a receiving cell, away from the other convicts, for the present, because of the threats.

Berne conducted a blacksmith shop on South Second street until August, 1927, when a payroll holdup was committed at the adjoining office of the Nicklin Tannery. Three young men who frequented Berne's shop were indicted for the robbery, and Berne's Negro "pony boy," Odell Slattery, testified they had planned the holdup at the shop.

After Edward Taylor, the first to be tried, had been convicted of the holdup and sentenced to life imprisonment, Slattery was kidnaped and killed to prevent his giving further testimony against the other defendants, Elmer Schneider and Joseph Buschmann. The murder dealt a severe blow to the State's case. But Berne, incensed at the killing of his former "pony" boy, agreed to take his place as a witness. Accordingly, Berne, who was serving a five-year term for another robbery, was brought from his cell to St. Louis.

Helped Convict Four Men.

Upon his testimony, Schneider and Buschman were sentenced to life imprisonment for the tannery holdup, and Joseph Troup and Joseph Passafume were sentenced to 10-year terms for the kidnaping of Slattery.

Berne, says the grand jury's petition, "rendered indispensable service in the conviction of four hardened criminals, and will be in a highly dangerous situation if returned to the penitentiary."

The jury suggests that "Honest John" be paroled that he may return to his trade and support his wife and several children. He has 20 months of his five-year term still to serve after deducting "good time" from his sentence.

MARINE FOR 39 YEARS RETIRES

Sergeant-Major Thomas F. Dorney Orderly to Secretary of Navy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—After 39 year, 7 months and 28 days service in the Marine Corps, Sergeant-Major Thomas F. Dorney has retired. He served in two wars and had been orderly to the Secretary of the Navy since 1921.

GAVE HIS BUSINESS TO EMPLOYES, NOW HELD FOR FRAUD

Daniel Von Bremen Accused of Obtaining $860,000 From Banks by False Statement of Profits.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—When at a dinner to 19 employes at the Hotel Pennsylvania in May, 1926, Daniel Von Bremen announced that he was retiring from business and intended to turn control of the Indiana Flooring Co. over to his guests, he was hailed as a philanthropist.

Today Von Bremen was arrested and held in $10,000 bail on a civil warrant issued by Supreme Court Justice Fawcett in Queens, as the result of an action by 15 banks to recover $860,000 lent to the flooring company in 1925 on the basis of an allegedly fraudulent statement of earnings made by him.

Thus was added a new chapter to the surprising and complicated activities of the dapper little gray-haired man in retiring with a large amount of cash from ownership of a company which within a year was in the hands of its creditors.

Accused of Falsifying Reports.

In the present action for the banks, the Marshall & Illsley Bank of Milwaukee sues for $80,000, charging in an affidavit by its vice president, Francis X. Bodden, that the money was lent on Von Bremen's statement that more than $256,000 was earned in 1925, while subsequent investigation showed the earnings were only $2602.98. This was accomplished in part, it is charged, by "arbitrary writeups of $206,179 in the undivided profits account."

In 1925, according to Irving L. Ernst, attorney for the banks, the Indiana Flooring Co., an important manufacturer of parquet floors with plants in Michigan, Ohio and New York, showed strong signs of prosperity and expansion. It floated a bond issue of $500,000. It declared large cash dividends. Von Bremen, its president, had 81 per cent of the stock.

Then von Bremen decided to retire, turning control over to his employes. This transaction involved the 137th Street and Rider avenue Corporation, which had owned the company's real estate prior to the bond issue, but at that time, according to Ernst, had no assets. Von Bremen turned over his 34,255 shares of stock to the corporation, which in turn was to be paid for by the employes out of an increase in their salaries. The flooring company, according to Ernst, had $175,000 left from its bond issue, which it lent to the Rider Avenue Corporation, to be paid by von Bremen for his stock.

To Pay for His Insurance.

As an additional protection to von Bremen before turning over the stock of the Rider Avenue Corporation to the employes, according to Ernst, the company agreed to carry on the payments of his $600,000 life insurance, leaving him the right to borrow on it.

The employes lost nothing by this deal. Von Bremen remained head of the Rider Avenue Corporation, and last January the Indiana Roofing Co., controlled by the bankers, brought suit against the company and von Bremen for the $175,000, charging that the entire transaction was a carefully worked out plan conceived by von Bremen and his attorney, Thomas L. Zimmerman Jr., to obtain cash for von Bremen's stock.

"The defendant corporation," it was charged, "was a mere dummy used by von Bremen and Zimmerman for the purpose of the scheme, and the purported gift to the 19 employees added an air of legality and benevolence to a fraudulent and corrupt transaction."

Zimmerman became president of the Indiana Flooring Co. when von Bremen retired. He was succeeded by Roger B. Williams Jr., of the company which bought the $500,000 bond issue. It was some time after the creditors took control, according to Ernst, that books were found stowed away in an obscure corner showing the true condition of the company in 1925. Until then the creditors had been mystified, he said, by their inability to make the business pay.

Besides the Milwaukee bank, the banks with claims totaling $860,000 include the American Exchange and Irving Trust Co., the National Park Bank, the Bronx County Trust Co. and the Garfield National Bank, all of New Haven, the National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, the Fidelity Union Trust Co. of Newark, the American Trust Co. of Charlotte, N. C., the Ashland National Bank of Ashland, Ky., and the National Metropolitan Bank of Washington, D. C., the Merchants' Bank of New Haven, and other smaller banks.

Coolidge Fails as Quail Hunter, but Hits "Pigeons"

Sound-Motion Pictures Taken of President At Traps on His Week-End Visit To Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

WAYNESBORO, Va., Dec. 1. — President Coolidge went hunting for quail today but after an hour's tramp through land grown thick with broomsage and scrub pine returned with an empty game bag to Swannanoa Country Club.

The President took five shots at birds but failed to bring any down. Friends accompanying the Chief Executive, however, praised the way in which he had handled his gun and were inclined to attribute his failure to bring down any quail to the type of firearm used.

For his hunting trip, Mr. Coolidge took along the long-barreled gun which he has been using for trap shooting, a sport in which he has proved his proficiency. The hunters explained that a gun with a shorter barrel and correspondingly broader spread of shot was customarily used for hunting the fast flying quail.

Mr. Coolidge was accompanied by Clide Moorehead, a Shenandoah orchardist, and Wirt Hatcher of Richmond, both of whom are inveterate hunters. Land which had not been hunted in for five years was chosen for the President's first try at the sport since assuming office. This was a part of a broad tract owned by Dr. W. B. Dodge of Stuart's Draft, Va.

Five Ineffective Shots.

Ten minutes after taking to the fields, the trained setters provided by Moorehead flushed a covey of quail, but the birds were at such a distance as to make a shot ineffective and the President did not fire. Later, however, single birds took to the air in front of the party on five occasions, and Mr. Coolidge shot at each opportunity, but with no results.

The President wore the green mackinaw presented to him when he visited Wisconsin last summer and the sombrero given to him in the Black Hills of South Dakota the year before. A pair of hunting breeches and high laced boots completed his costume.

As Mr. Coolidge climbed into his automobile for the return trip to the Swannanoa Country Club, where, with Mrs. Coolidge, he is spending the Thanksgiving weekend, Dr. Dodge inquired as to the success of the presidential hunting trip, to which the Chief Executive replied: "Well, I got a shot at two or three, but I missed them."

Little Girl Declines a Ride.

On the drive back to the Swannanoa Country Club from his hunting trip, Mr. Coolidge noticed a little girl trudging along the road, carrying what appeared to be a heavy bundle. He ordered his automobile stopped and sent secret service men to ask the child if she did not want to ride. She silently shook her head and fled down a side road.

Early in the day the President had gone again to the traps at the rear of the clubhouse for some clay pigeon shooting and while the hits predominated no exact score was kept. He went to the trap in his two-gallon hat and mackinaw. After two misses, off came the mackinaw. The third pigeon and others were tallied.

Newspaper and motion picture photographers were on hand and a sound-motion picture also was taken of the President blazing away at the flying discs.

Mrs. Coolidge Gets a Picture.

At one point the photographers were joined by Mrs. Coolidge, who carried a camera and wished to take a picture of the President. the cameramen moved to one side in order to bring Mrs. Coolidge with her camera and the President with his gun into their focus.

Tonight a large group of persons from Waynesboro, Staunton and Charlottesville were invited to the temporary White House for a program of moving pictures.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge expect to attend church services today, probably at the Trinity Episcopal Church in Staunton and later in the day will start for Washington.

TAXI KILLS WOMAN CROSSING STREET; 184TH AUTO VICTIM

Mrs. Emma Niehaus, 55, Run Down at Twenty-Third Street and St. Louis Avenue—Driver Held.

Mrs. Emma Niehaus, 55 years old, of 2314 Montgomery street, was killed last night when she was struck by a taxicab at Twenty-Third street and St. Louis avenue. Thomas F. Cook, driver of the taxicab, was arrested and held for the Coroner. Mrs. Niehaus is the 184th person to be killed by a motor vehicle since Jan. 1, as compared with 124 for the same period last year.

Cook said he was driving east on St. Louis avenue when, at the intersection of Twenty-third street, he saw Mrs. Niehaus crossing St. Louis avenue from the south to the north side. He said she walked a few steps, hesitated, and then walked a few more. He explained the accident by saying he thought Mrs. Niehaus walked into the side of his car.

Mrs. Niehaus was taken to City Hospital, but was dead on arrival. She had suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

LED 7,000,000 TO SLAUGHTER

"Joe's Jerry," Packing House Ram, Dies After 10 Years' Service.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—After 10 years of deceiving sheep and lambs and leading them to slaughter, "Joe's Jerry," the old ram of Armour & Co. in the stockyards, died of old age today. He was a self-made ram.

Coming from the country, he had such winning ways he was selected by Joe Horan, head buyer, to lead the procession of sheep to slaughter. Jerry liked the business of assistant executioner, and always lived in luxury. From the sheep pens, at the head of the procession, he would march into the slaughter house, never turning to see the unhappy fate of the others, which were quickly reduced to mutton and lamb chops. In his time he had led 7,000,000 sheep over the bridge of sighs.

No Imperialism in True Democracy, Hoover Says

who had gone out to sea to meet him were taken by launch to the dock, where other Cabinet members warmly welcomed him and escorted him to the official reception in the residence of the President.

75,000 Cheer Guest.

The water front was lined for three miles by cheering crowds. Many had come from the capital, Quito, and other parts of the country. It was estimated that no fewer than 75,000 persons struggled with one another for a glimpse of the nation's guest. Not only did they line the streets waving American and Ecuadorean flags, but many ascended to the house tops along the streets through which he passed.

A national holiday had been proclaimed in honor of Hoover. All Government offices were closed and business was virtually suspended.

Along the route from the dock to the presidential residence were soldiers and volunteer firemen in brilliant red coats and glistening helmets, lining both sides of the streets. Behind them the crowd shouted without pause "Viva Hoover! Viva United States. Viva Ecuador!" As the Hoover party passed, the soldiers and firemen formed ranks and paraded past the presidential residence, where President Ayora and Hoover reviewed them.

Gives Hoover the Abrazo.

President Ayora gave Mr. Hoover the abrazo, the embrace customary in Latin America. The President-elect returned it and they exchanged cordial words in informal greeting and expressing their warm mutual pleasure in the occasion.

About 50 American residents of the republic had come to Guayaquil to meet Hoover. At a reception by the foreign colony in the United States consulate, Hoover also met about 50 British subjects residing in Ecuador.

After watching the parade, Hoover proceeded to the new city hall building for dedication ceremonies which had been arranged in connection with his visit.

The first official of Ecuador to meet Hoover was Colon Eloy Alfaro, son of a former President and a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point. He had boarded the Cleveland at Panama, where he is the Ecuadorean Minister, and so was able to give Hoover intimate details of the affairs of his country during the long trip from the Maryland to the shore.

The foremost local newspaper, El Telegrafo, issued a special section in English with pictures and stories of Hoover. All newspapers here, and also in Quito, praised the visit and predicted happy results from it.

One of the striking features of the public reception was the singing of the Star Spangled Banner by a large assembly of school children. They had been practicing the song for weeks as a special courtesy to the President-elect.

To Sail for Peru Today.

Hoover returned to the cruiser Cleveland late tonight. Early tomorrow morning the vessel will start back to the battleship Maryland, anchored 60 miles away. The battleship is expected to resume its voyage in the afternoon for Callao, Peru.

President Ayora was invited by Hoover to accompany him on the Cleveland and to be his guest at luncheon on the Maryland tomorrow. He would be brought back to Guayaquil on the cruiser after the departure of the battleship.

Mrs. Ayora, upon meeting Mrs. Hoover, presented her a bouquet of flowers.

The Government presented to the Hoovers art treasures of colonial times and with a gold-framed autograph of Bolivar, the liberator of South America.

On account of her draft the Maryland could not go close to shore, so she anchored and transferred the Hoover party to the lighter cruiser, Cleveland. An Ecuadorean cruiser met the Cleveland and escorted it to this city.

Brazilian Coffee Growers Wonder at Hoover's Attitude.

By the Associated Press.

SAO PAULO, Brazil, Dec. 1.—The Sao Paulo Press is showing deep interest in the visit of President-elect Hoover to Brazil, particularly as it concerns the coffee planters here. It is stated that the Santos market already has been affected by uncertainty regarding the future attitude on the question of control of prices by the President-elect and also by rumors that France and England contemplate increasing the coffee duties.

The newspaper Combate denounces hidden gambling in futures, declaring that prices have been increased nearly a dollar a sack on this account. It says that Hoover knows of this activity and is coming to Brazil to make a closer investigation of it.

Arabic Disappears in Turkey.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 1. — The old Arabic alphabet today totally disappeared from shop signs, newspapers and all public announcements throughout Turkey. This development came just four months after Ghazi Mustapha Kemal issued his presidential pronouncement substituting latin A B C's for the old characters. Private Arabic communications may be continued until next June.

Piles Can Be Cured Without Surgery

A new instructive book, fully illustrated, printed in colors and copyrighted at Washington, has been published by Dr. McCleary, the noted Rectal Specialist, 566 Elms Boulevard, Excelsior Springs, Mo. In it Doctor McCleary tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the knife, scissors, "hot iron" electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The McCleary treatment has been a success for 28 years and in over 14,000 cases; if you suffer with Piles or other rectal troubles, write Dr. McCleary today for a copy of this new book. It will be sent in plain wrapper free and postpaid. Tell your friends about this.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN, SLAYER, PARDONED

At 81, Indianan Goes to Old Soldiers' Home After 15 Years in Prison.

By the Associated Press.

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Dec. 1. —From a "lifer's" cell in the Indiana State prison to a place of honor in the Old Soldier's Home, Henry J. Romine, 81-year-old Civil War veteran, was taken today.

The State Pardon Board granted him clemency for the murder of two men after he had served 15 years of a life sentence. The pardon was conditional to the extent that Romine could not leave the soldier's home at Lafayette, Ind., without permission from the Governor or the Pardon Board.

Romine, who was the oldest life prisoner in the State penitentiary here, was convicted in Columbus, Ind., in 1913 for slaying two men in an argument. He had been a model prisoner and had received leave each year to attend the G. A. R. encampments. He had returned from a parole only a month ago.

His pardon was brought about through the efforts of other war veterans. After the hearing, Romine was taken to the Old Soldier's Home.

DE MENIL FUNERAL AT HIS HOME TOMORROW

World's Fair Directors to Be Honorary Pallbearers—Literary Style Shown.

The funeral of Dr. Alexander N. DeMenil, author, historian and literary critic, who died of a heart attack Thanksgiving day, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the family home, 3352 South Thirteenth street.

Active pallbearers, selected mostly from a list left by Dr. DeMenil, will be Judge O'Neill Ryan, John S. McDermott, Isaac H. Lionberger, Arthur E. Bostwick, Richard Spamer, Casper S. Yost, James H. Maguire and Eugene McQuillin.

As many of the surviving directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition as are able to attend will serve as honorary pallbearers. The list of survivors includes Nicholas M. Bell, William K. Bixby, C. F. Blanke, Hanford Crawford, Thomas H. Francis, Nathan Frank, W. H. Lee, F. W. Lehmann, Benjamin McKeen, George D. Markham, A. L. Shapleigh, James E. Smith, Rolla Wells, Collins Thompson and J. J. Werthelmer.

A characteristic expression of Dr. DeMenil's ideas, as well as a sample of his vigorous style of writing, is afforded by a prospectus written by him for his quarterly magazine, The Hesperian, in 1909. He wrote:

"The Hesperian addresses itself to the educated and thinking classes of readers. It is virtually a magazine of essays, treating principally on literary and historical topics. Sensationalism finds no place in its pages, nor do discussions of political and religious questions. Book publishers cannot buy space in its pages for the 'puffing' of their new books.

"The Hesperian seeks for Truth, and when it discerns glimpses of it in the accumulated mass of false rubbish that pass current for Truth, it proclaims the results of its labors boldly and in unequivocal terms. It has the honesty of its convictions, whether its judgments be in accord with the reigning critical canons or not. It accepts literary dogmas only insofar as they are correct, and no further. The only 'established literary reputations' it respects are those resulting from the opinions of men of education, literary ability and scholarship. It regrets that a large majority of the literary reputations of today are due to the personal influence of the publisher and the amount of money he spends in loud and flashy advertising. Against all such and all literary commercialism, the Hesperian has determinedly set its face. It prefers to be honest than servile.

"The Hesperian is not owned by the proprietor of a book publishing house. It is not under the necessity of praising the books of rival publishing houses in order to have its own praised. It is unfettered, unincumbered—it is honest and just in its opinions. It dares to tell the truth! It can continue doing without the advertisements of Eastern book publishing houses, as it has done during the past 15 years."

ELLIS WAINWRIGHT COOK FUNERAL SERVICES TOMORROW

Coroner's Jury Adjudged Death of Head of Wine Company in Auto Crash Due to Accident.

The funeral of Ellis Wainwright Cook, 38 years old, president-treasurer of the American Wine Co., who died yesterday in Barnes Hospital of injuries suffered in an automobile accident early Wednesday near Hamil, Ill., will take place from the family residence, 5783 Lindell drive, tomorrow at 3 o'clock.

A Coroner's jury yesterday adjudged Cook's death an accident, an autopsy showing that he died of a severe concussion of the brain. Besides the head injury, Cook suffered a crushed chest, with severa. fractured ribs.

Dr. Frederick Brooks of the Paul Brown Building, who went to Cook's assistance at Staunton, Ill., shortly after the accident, was the only witness before the Coroner. He told of how Cook had explained to his wife and himself that he had been forced from State Highway No. 4 by another automobile and collided with a concrete post. Mrs. Cook and Dr. Brooks removed Cook to Barnes Hospital from the home of John H. Schild in Staunton.

Cook was a son of Douglas G. Cook, maker of Cook's Imperial champagne. He had gone hunting with friends at Mount Olive Tuesday and was on his way home alone when injured. Cook was a graduate of Holbrook College, New York. He became president of the wine company five years ago. Besides his widow, he is survived by his mother, a brother, Dickson Cook, and a sister, Mrs. Carl Horix, the widow of Edward L. Preetorius, one-time publisher of the St. Louis Times.

Federal Trade Commission Files Court Action Affecting Electric Bond and Share Co.

CHARGES EXISTENCE OF POWER MONOPOLY

Declares Holding Companies Impose Burden on Interstate Commerce — Cites $8,000,000 Fees.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. — The Federal Trade Commission went into the courts today in an attempt to obtain authority to compel officers and employes of the Electric Bond and Share Co. to produce records desired by the commission in carrying out its inquiry into the financing of power utilities.

The commission filed an application in the Southern District Court of New York for authority to obtain the records which officers of the company refused to produce at a hearing early in the fall. At the time they refused to submit the records the officials announced that they wanted a judicial determination as to whether their constitutional rights were violated in the Trade Commission inquiry.

Alleges Burdensome Monopoly.

The petition placed with the court took the position that the company, through its connections, "possesses a virtual monopoly of the sale and transmission of electrical energy in interstate commerce," constituting a burden on such commerce. It maintained that the records the company refused to produce "are necessary to determine whether such a burden has in fact been created in violation of the anti-trust laws."

The petition outlined the argument of the company's legal counsel, which questioned, first, the commission's power to issue subpenas under the Senate investigation order; second, whether the company was engaged in interstate commerce; third, whether the attempt to examine the records subpenaed was a violation of the constitutional prohibition of unreasonable searches and seizures.

Holding Companies Brought In.

The brief argued that the company came within the terms of the Senate's resolution, that it "is engaged in or has a substantial control over interstate commerce in electrical energy or gas; that it occupies directly or indirectly a monopolistic position in various sections of the country, and that it is the dominating force and influence in large numbers of companies which it does not directly own."

In support of its contention that the company had monopolistic control, the commission cited "the organization of a number of holding companies to which it has transferred the stock owned by it of operating public utility companies."

"Among these holding companies," the brief said, "are the American Gas & Electric Co., American Power & Light Co., Carolina Power & Light Co., Electric Power & Light Corporation, Lehigh Power Securities Corporation and National Power & Light Co."

Each of these holding companies, the petition continued, owned a majority of voting stock in a number of operating public utility companies selling electric energy or gas to purchasers in other states.

The establishment of interlocking boards of directors between the Electric Bond & Share Co. and various public utility companies also was cited, as well as contracts by which "important features of management of such companies becomes vested in the Electric Bond & Share Co."

$8,000,000 Collected in Fees.

"Fees amounting to more than $8,000,000, equivalent to over 43 per cent of the Electric Bond & Share Co's gross profits during 1927," the petition read, "were paid by controlled and affiliated companies under said supervision contracts for management, supervision, engineering and construction services. More than half these fees were for general supervision as distinguished from engineering and construction services.

"In some instances the Electric Bond & Share Co. and in some instances its officers personally, have received special compensation for services given in the promotion, formation, financing and consolidation of said operating and holding companies, in the form of fees and bonuses consisting of stock, securities, or options to purchase stock or securities of said company."

In conclusion the petition affirmed that "by reason of the absence of substantial diversity of interest between the individuals and corporations involved in such transactions, the Electric Bond & Share Co., and its officers and directors, are in a position to create, impose and enhance, through collusion and combination, a burden upon interstate commerce in electrical energy which may be undue, unreasonable and detrimental to the public."

The commission today also sent to the Senate its eighth interim report on its public utilities investigation outlining the details of the Electric Bond & Share Co. case, and the action taken in applying to the New York court for an order to enforce the commission's subpenas.

The report said this company had been the only one of the holding and operating companies investigated to refuse access to its books, although it had submitted for examination statements of fees and commissions received and various other information. It was added that commission examiners were still at work in the company's offices and had experienced no hindrance beyond the refusal to produce the operating expense ledger and vouchers of disbursements for publicity.

Chemist Found Dead From Gas.

Carle E. Drees, 38 years old, a chemist of 3131 South Jefferson avenue, was found dead in his room at 3 p. m., yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Martha Drees. The end of a hose leading from an open gas jet was in his mouth. His mother said he had undergone an operation recently and was facing a second one.

STILL ON FARM SEIZED

Mash Was Being Cooked When Deputies Arrived.

A still, found in operation, was seized by four St. Louis County Deputy Sheriffs Friday on the farm of Anthony Reuther, on Wild Horse Creek road near Chesterfield. Reuther, who is 49 years old, and James Skoppo, alias Tommasso, were arrested. When the officers arrived, Skoppo was building a fire under a pot in which mash was being cooked.

Reuther denied ownership of the still, declaring he had leased a portion of his farm to several other men. In a shed, near the boiler, the officers found a five-gallon can of alcohol.

I Want to Sell State Assignment

I would like to sell a State assignment for one place in each State, exclusive in this. I should say, famous invention patent pending, title name, Heel Plate, made of that aluminum metal; suitable covering will be used; cost $1 or $2 to make. Will be appreciated at $3 or $4. If not I will buy them back after a year's use. Will sell cheap—$500 and 5 per cent. The buyer should make some of his own things to work with. I can supply the specially made emery grinding wheels and sample. Then two or three men can make 15 or 25 a day. Well, say 25 pairs a day would be $7500 in 300 days or a year. By that you can figure how many years it will take to make a set for one out of a hundred people throughout a State. Wake up to the necessity of the thing or serious need, especially the money the business will make. Owner, Inventor.

WELLSTON WOMAN FIVE MONTHS IN BED WITH SEVERE RHEUMATISM

On Crutches for Two Months—Now Walks and Gives Full Credit to Weldona Tablets for Recovery

MRS. M. KOENIG.

"One month of treatment with Weldona tablets has done more for me than one thousand dollars which I spent for treatment during my illness," says Mrs. M. Koenig, whose address is Box 485, Route 29, Wellston, Mo. Mrs. Koenig continued: "I spent six weeks in a hospital suffering pain and misery every day. The disease started in my finger and ankle and stayed with me for one year and a half. For twenty-two weeks I was confined to bed, no one could touch me and I had to have a loop under the bed clothes to keep them from touching me. For nine weeks I hobbled about on crutches.

"I read about Weldona tablets in the paper, and after taking it a few weeks began to find relief. I can now move about without pain, can go up and down stairs, sleep fine and feel like a new woman. The pain and swelling has disappeared, and I cannot say enough in praise for this wonderful remedy. Anyone who wishes to verify my statement may call, write me or telephone 'WAbash 292J.'" $1000 reward to anyone proving that testimonials are not genuine.

Weldona tablets are not a mere "tonic" or, so called, "general system builder," and unlike some remedies which claim to get you rid of everything that ails you. Weldona tablets are intended and recommended for rheumatism and rheumatic conditions only, and will not upset the stomach, affect the heart or any other organ. Weldona is absolutely harmless and contains no dope.

The Weldona representative who now meets the public every day at Walgreen's Drug Store, 514 Washington Ave., St. Louis, gladly explains more about this remedy and gives out the 24-page fully illustrated and interesting books, entitled "Germs of Rheumatism," which are absolutely free of charge to all who call or write for them.

ACCUSES 20 MORE U. S. BORDER PATROL MEN IN LIQUOR PLOT

District Attorney at Detroit Says He Will Lay Evidence Before Grand Jury.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 1.—John R. Watkins, United States District Attorney, indicated today that when the Federal grand jury reconvenes Monday he probably would lay before it evidence concerning charges of graft and corruption against 20 to 30 inspectors arrested yesterday charging them with conspiracy to assist liquor smugglers and with accepting bribes.

After hearing some of the 13 inspectors who were arraigned yesterday and today, the Federal grand jury adjourned for the week-end. Beginning Monday, the body will devote two hours daily to the liquor conspiracy investigation.

Special agents who conducted an eight-month investigation leading to the arrests, estimated today that customs inspectors so far this year have collected more than $500,000 in graft from liquor runners operating on the Detroit River. Watkins said that from the statements made by the men arraigned, the entire personnel of the patrol seemed "honeycombed with corruption and graft."

One man, William Tompkins, pleaded guilty and was released on bond. The other pleaded not guilty. Bonds were set at from $2500 to $10,000, according to the recommendations of the District Attorneys.

Woman Identifies Hatchet Suspect.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 1.—Jake Bird, Negro, held in connection with the Omaha hatchet attacks, today was identified by Mrs. G. Hankins, police said, as the man who, on the morning of the attack upon Mr. and Mrs. Harold Stribling, tried to force his way into the home of Mrs. Hankins in East Omaha. The suspect previously had been identified by Mrs. Stribling.

KIEL TO DECIDE SOON ON ENTERING MAYORALTY RACE

Promises Definite Announcement in Week or Ten Days on Running Against Miller.

SCHMOLL FOR HIM, KOELN LIKELY TO BE

Anti-Administration Group in G. O. P. Committee and City Hall Also Counted on His Side.

Close political observers now feel virtually certain that Henry W. Kiel, who retired from public office in 1925 after 12 years as Mayor of St. Louis, will enter the race for the mayoralty nomination at the Republican primary in March, and the political scene is being set on the assumption that the battle for the nomination will be a fight between Kiel and Mayor Miller, already an announced contestant.

So far Kiel has made no public announcement of his intentions, but he frequently remarked, while Mayor, that he "liked the job," which he held for three terms, and politicians see no reason why he should not now want to return to it, especially since his chances of doing so are acknowledged to be uncommonly favorable. Kiel said he expected to make a definite announcement within a week or 10 days.

Circuit Clerk John Schmoll, who was estranged from Kiel for several years following Kiel's refusal to reappoint him director of Public Welfare, has buried the hatchet, which he never wielded openly against his former chief, anyhow, and has announced that he will support the former Mayor for the nomination.

In addition it is generally understood Collector Edmond Koeln, one of the big guns in local Republican politics, will come out for Kiel when, or if, he announces. Koeln is said to be withholding an announcement for the present only because he does not want to be in the position of calling upon Kiel to run.

Fusion Against Miller Likely.

So that if events follow the line predicted by the lesser politicians, Mayor Miller, himself the leader of a political machine of no mean strength, is likely to find himself confronted by a formidable candidate, backed by a fusion of the anti-Miller factions in Republican city organization, which incidentally, are likely to have the support of at least 50 per cent of the Republican City Committee.

In addition there is now discernible a distinct sentiment among City Hall employes for Kiel, who as Mayor was a strong favorite among them because of his informal manner and readiness to hear the complaints of the lowliest worker.

It had generally been conceded until the past few weeks that the City Hall machine would be united in support of Mayor Miller, but it is not so certain now that that will be the case.

Campaign Probabilities.

The contest between Mayor Miller and former Mayor Kiel, if the latter files, is likely to bring forth a lively debate on which of the candidates was responsible for the admitted progress of the city, particularly in public improvements, within the past four years.

Obviously, the Miller supporters will point out that the improvements were made in Mayor Miller's administration, while Kiel's backers are certain to point out that the money which made the improvements possible was voted in the $87,000,000 bond issue passed in the Kiel administration.

A public ceremony which will direct the public mind forcibly to the new downtown lighting system is planned for Dec. 10 and whatever may be the intention behind the plan, the occasion is certain to stress the part of the Miller administration in installing the system.

Similarly it is understood a ceremony is planned just before the primary to mark the opening of the south approach of the Municipal Bridge, an occasion that will call the mind of the public to the fact that the bridge is finally open to railroad traffic—also an achievement of the Miller administration.

CINCINNATI GIRL'S OPERA DEBUT

Miss Pearl Besuner Is Second From City to Sing at Metropolitan.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Miss Pearl Besüner of Cincinnati made her debut tonight with the Metropolitan Opera Company—the second Cincinnati girl to be introduced at the Metropolitan this season. Miss Besuner, a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, and a student of Mme. Sembrich on a Juilliard Foundation fellowship, sang the second soprano role in "Faust"—the part of a boy. Florence Easton, Giacomo Laurivolpi and Leon Rothier appeared in the leading roles.

Three weeks ago Miss Grace Devine, also of Cincinnati, a mezzo-soprano, made her debut with the Metropolitan. She and Miss Besuner were classmates in Hughes High School and at the University of Cincinnati.

50-YEAR-OLD WIDOW AND YOUTH, 21, PLAN TO MARRY

She Was His Sunday School Teacher; His Parents Object in Vain.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LYNN, Mass., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Teresa Eliza Deane, 50-year-olds widow and former assistant pastor of the First Christian Church, and Leonard C. Wade, 21 years old last Sunday, filed announcement today of their intention to marry with City Clerk Joseph Attwill at City Hall and Town Clerk Ralph D. Herritt of Swampscott. Mrs. Deane in the notice gave her occupation as that of nurse. She was ordained a minister of the Christian Church four years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wade of Swampscott, parents of Leonard, said they had done everything possible to break off th match between the boy and Mrs. Deane, and had pleaded with Mrs. Deane to discourage the boys' attentions, but she had absolutely refused to give him up. Mrs. Deane was formerly Leonard's Sunday School teacher.

Leonard is a graduate of English High School, class of 1926, where he was an honor pupil. He had planned to study for the ministry but gave up the idea. At present he is employed as a leather worker in Peabody.

Accused of Killing Mother-in-Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JENKINS, Ky., Dec. 1.—Raymond Sizemore, 30 years old, is under arrest, charged with having shot and killed Mrs. George Blair, 65, his mother-in-law, in the Blair home, after it is said she had asked her son-in-law to get out. The weapon used was an old-fashioned rifle, heirloom in the home. Sizemore walked away from the scene, but later was taken to the Whitesburg jail.

400 URGE ADOPTION OF KELLOGG TREATY

Woman Leader at Statler Says Its Failure Would Set Peace Back Fifty Years.

An audience of 400 persons, assembled in the Hotel Statler ballroom at luncheon yesterday, at the call of the National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, adopted unanimously a resolution urging the Senate to ratify the Kellogg-Briand multilateral treaty renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

The resolution also pledged support of the gathering to the treaty. Those present were almost entirely women who came from local units of 10 women's organizations. Few of them left during the meeting, although the vote on the resolution was not taken until almost 3 o'clock. Many leaders of women's associations were present and among the men were a number who likewise are prominent in the community. In the room were many of the chief liberals of St. Louis, including Charles Nagel, Bishop Johnson of the Episcopal diocese and Public Librarian Bostwick.

Read and submitted by Rabbi Samuel Thurman, the resolution was seconded by Mrs. Philip N. Moore. William H. Danforth presided. The National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War is to present similar pleas from all over the country to the Senate in the coming short session of Congress.

Mrs. Eugene T. Senseney of St. Louis was in charge of the work of organizing this movement throughout Missouri, and she and other leaders of the League of Women Voters were present yesterday.

Dean Scarlett Leads Speaking.

Dean Scarlett of Christ Church Cathedral, was the first speaker. There are three paths to peace, he said: Military predominance, such as the dream of a military alliance between England and America; balance of power, such as existed in Europe from 1870 to 1914, and "the path by covenant, the path of agreement." The League of Nations, he went on, has its obvious defects and its obvious advantages. In Europe today, he declared, peace is maintained only by the military predominance of France.

"The great danger in the Kellogg peace pact," said Dean Scarlett, "is that many people think the question is all over now. But it's just a new opportunity which the treaty has opened: we still have to turn the pact into a fact: we have to back our words with deeds."

Mrs. James W. Morrisson of Chicago, a widely-known leader of women who represented American women's organizations when the treaty was signed in Paris last August, was the other speaker of the day. In passing, she remarked that the plenipotentiaries of the 15 nations who signed the pact on that occasion happened to have distinct racial characteristics in their persons, and she took this as a sign of progress in civilization, that the typical citizens of various nations, with their differing home environments, should meet together in good will and in behalf of peace.

BRITISH ENVOY AND KELLOGG CONFER ON BRITTEN PROPOSAL

Diplomatic Procedure in Conveying Premier's Reply to Illinois Representative Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Chairman Britten of the House Naval Committee tonight still was awaiting a reply from Premier Baldwin, of England to his privately sponsored proposal for an Anglo-American naval conference between committees representing the legislative bodies of the two countries.

After a conference between Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, and Secretary Kellogg, it was announced officially at the State Department that the Ambassador had not submitted a reply from the Premier for transmission to Britten.

Word that a friendly reply had been drafted by the Premier has come from London and interest has been aroused as to the procedure to be followed by the Premier in getting this into the hands of the Naval Committee chairman. Britten took the usual course of cabling his proposal for a conference direct to the Premier, thereby vaulting the customary procedure of addressing an official of a foreign nation through State Department channels.

From the outset, the State Department has maintained silence regarding the affair. It was understood that the call of the British Ambassador at the Department today was to ask the advice of Secretary Kellogg in regard to the reply. Sir Esme said only that the proposal was without precedent and that he and Mr. Kellogg were working in harmony in regard to it. He indicated he would not consider transmittal of the reply from the British Embassy to Britten inasmuch as it would constitute a breach of diplomatic procedure unless approved by the State Department.

State Department officials were reticent, except to leave the impression that the Department would ignore Britten's communication to Premier Baldwin.

Brass Firms' Merger Approved.

ROME, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Directors of the Rome Brass & Copper Co. today approved a plan to merge with six other companies, to form a corporation to be known as the General Brass Corporation. The merger is expected to bring about 20 per cent of the country's brass and copper business within the control of the corporation.

20,000 TRY FOR $25,000 DRY PRIZE

Durant Contest on Best Way to Enforce Prohibition Closed Yesterday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Everything from tersely worded telegrams to carefully prepared documents, accompanied by charts and graphs, is included among the 20,000 entries submitted for the $25,000 prize offered by W. C. Durant, automobile manufacturer, for the "best and most practicable plan to make the eighteenth amendment effective."

The contest, which was opened by Durant's offer last August, closed today. Next Tuesday the committee of judges will hold its first meeting, organize and assisted by a corps of readers and secretaries begin the task of selecting the prize-winning entry whose author will receive $25,000 Christmas day.

W. O. Heffernan, assistant to Durant, who has been in charge of receiving the entries, said today that anti-liquor education and more drastic means of enforcement were the predominating features of the plans offered.

"The freak plans, some of which were submitted in a spirit of levity and others which are sincere, were the first to be received," Heffernan said. "The serious suggestions, many of them showing a great amount of thought and study, have made up the bulk of the later entries."

Entries have been received from persons who favor prohibition and those opposed to it.

Although the contest was restricted to citizens of the United States, plans have been sent in from all parts of the world in a dozen foreign languages.

The committee designated to select the prize winner is composed of these 15 nationally known persons: Miss Jane Addams, William H. GIANNOLA FREED ON $25,000 BOND AS MURDER SUSPECT

Brother of Man Slain in Gang Feud a Year Ago to Appear in Judge Gayer's Court Saturday.

John Giannola, suspected leader of a gang of terrorists and extortionists, who returned to St. Louis a few days ago after an absense of a year and fell into the hands of the police, was released yesterday on bond of $25,000 and booked as "suspected of murder." The bond, returnable in Judge Gayer's Court of Criminal Correction Saturday, was signed by Joseph Sciales, a grocer, and Zeferana Cardelo.

Giannola left St. Louis a year ago and made his home in Alton after his brother, Vito, had been trapped by gunmen in a woman's house in northwest St. Louis and murdered with a machine gun.

298,407 BALLOTS IN TENTH DISTRICT; LARGEST IN STATE

Vote There Is Two and One-Half Times Greater Than in Two Other Congressional Areas of City.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 1.—Herbert Hoover's plurality over Gov. Smith in Missouri was 172,004. Figures given out by the Secretary of State's office two days ago, and published in the Post-Dispatch, made the Smith vote too large and the Hoover plurality too small by 5555. They also showed too large a total for the State vote on presidential candidates. The corrected official figures are:

Hoover, 834,080; Smith, 662,076; Thomas, Socialist, 3739; Reynolds, Socialist Labor, 340. Hoover's plurality, 172,004. Total State vote on presidency, 1,500,235. The total State vote on the governorship was 1,519,136, showing that nearly 19,000 Missouri voters refrained from voting on the presidency, though voting for State candidates.

Official figures on the vote for Representative in Congress, from the 16 Missouri districts, have been completed except for the Third District, where a contest is pending. J. L. Milligan, Democratic incumbent, was re-elected on the face of the returns in the Third. If he is seated, the Republicans will have 10 districts and the Democrats six; if his Republican opponent, H. F. Lawrence, wins, the Republicans will have 11 and the Democrats five.

The official vote for the three St. Louis districts, all of which re-elected incumbents, was:

Tenth, Niedringhaus (Rep), 164,083; Green (Dem.), 134,324; Eleventh, Cochran (Dem.), 44,130; Gray (Rep.), 32,706; Twelfth, Dyer (Rep.), 24,701; McLemore (Dem.), 17,609.

The noticeable thing about these figures is the great size of the Tenth District vote, as compared with the other city districts. The Tenth, which includes wards in the south and west parts of St. Louis and all St. Louis County, cast a total vote of 298,407. The Eleventh District, in comparison, had a vote of 76,836, and the Twelfth, 42,310. The Tenth thus cast two and one-half times the combined vote of the two other St. Louis districts. It exceeds by more than 12,000 the total of the three largest rural districts in Missouri, which are the Seventh, with 98,149 votes; the Fourteenth, with 107,375, and the Fifteenth, with 80,675. The Fifth, the Kansas City district, is next to the Tenth in size, having cast 223,572 votes. All the five largest districts went Republican this year.

The uneven size of the St. Louis districts is not the result of shifting population; they were made that way. The Tenth was designed, by Democratic apportioners in the Missouri Legislature, to contain as many Republicans as possible. It was hoped that, in this way, the Democrats might carry the two other St. Louis districts. They have usually managed to carry the Eleventh, but the Republicans have held the Twelfth for years.

A great decline in the Socialist vote is shown. In 1920 the Missouri vote for Debs, Socialist, was 20,242, and for Cox, Socialist Labor, 2164, a total of 22,406. This year, the corresponding total was 4079. No comparison with 1924 can be made, as the LaFollette candidacy absorbed the Socialist vote that year.

NESTER SWORN AS SHERIFF THOUGH JUDGE IS DOUBTFUL

Calhoun Raises Question of Governor's Right to Make Appointment.

Thomas E. Nester, 2208 North Tenth street, was sworn in yesterday by Circuit Judge Calhoun as Sheriff of St. Louis. Nester was appointed Friday by Gov. Baker to succeed Anton Schuler, who resigned so that he could qualify tomorrow as Public Administrator, an office to which he was elected Nov. 6.

At first Judge Calhoun appeared unwilling to administer the oath to Nester because the State Constitution provides that such a vacancy shall be filled by appointment made by the County Court and authough this city does not possess any such court the Board of Aldermen might be held to take its place. After further reflection, however, the Judge administered the oath, stating he was protected by the commission from the Governor which Nester had with him. It was further pointed out that the Governor acted on an opinion rendered by former Attorney-General Barrett in the case of George W. Strodtman, who was appointed by Gov. Hyde to fill out the unexpired term of the late Charles E. Mohrstadt.

Nester, who is 38 years old, will serve until Dec. 31, when Sheriff-elect Strodtman will take office. As the sheriff's salary is $10,000 a year Nester will get about $800. Formerly he was a deputy sheriff under Schuler, serving as property clerk at $220 a month. It is not expected he will make any change in the office staff.

MAN SAID TO ADMIT AIDING GIRL TO BURN SELF IN FURNACE

Texas Report Said to Confirm Story of Elfrieda Knaak, Who Fatally Scared Herself.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The Chicago Daily Journal today published a purported confession of James Kelley, prisoner in a San Antonio, Tex., hospital, that he helped Elfrieda Knaak burn herself in the furnace of the Lake Bluff police station last month to purify herself of her love of a married man.

Kelley was arrested as a suspected army deserter and his true name is said to be Ezra McVeigh.

"I tried to get her to quit," the Journal quotes Kelley as saying, "but I did help her. I tried to put her into the furnace, but the door was too small." It was for love of Charles W. Hitchcock, a married man and night policeman at Lake Bluff, that the girl braved the flames, Kelley said, confirming Miss Knaak's own story, told before she died. Kelley said he met her at a station in Highland Park and accompanied her to the Lake Bluff police station. There, the Journal said, Kelley and Miss Knaak turned their talk to religion.

Informed by Gen. A. J. Bowley at Fort Sam Houston of the alleged confession, Chief of Police Lester Tiffany of Lake Forest departed tonight for the Texas city to make an investigation.

MINORITY HOLDERS INTERVENE

Petition Defends Wilson and Hyde in International Case.

Federal Judge Faris yesterday granted leave to Charles Kell, H. G. Sellman and F. E. Fischer, minority stockholders of the International Life Insurance Co., to file an intervening petition defending Massey Wilson and State Insurance Commissioner Ben G. Hyde in the suit of majority stockholders to oust them.

The petitioners set forth they own 1000 shares of the stock and made an independent investigation of the charges in the removal proceeding against Wilson and Hyde and found them groundless. No one, their petition states, is so well qualified as Massey Wilson to administer the receivership.

COURT IGNORES STATE, GIVES SLAYER LIFE

Over Prosecutor's Protest Judge Refuses to Impanel Jury and Passes Sentence.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Dec. 1.—Ignoring the protests of the Prosecuting Attorney and refusing to impanel a jury Circuit Judge Charles P. Bock today sentenced Frank Paisley, 28 years old of Missouri to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary for murder, when the defendant pleaded guilty.

Paisley is the confessed murderer of W. O. Bohannon, Evansville attorney. Bohannon was in an automobile parked on a country road when Paisley and Frank Mills approached and attempted to attack a girl in the car with Bohannon. The attorney killed Mills but was himself slain by Paisley.

Prosecutor E. Menzies Lindsey indicated that he might appeal from the judge's decision to the State Supreme Court asserting that it had never been decided whether or not a judge can try a case when the State objects.

The date of Paisley's trial had not been fixed and Judge Bock had asked defense attorney Thomas Lindsey to appear in court and either file a motion for change of venue or have case set for trial here.

As Thomas Lindsey, together with Prosecuting Attorney E. Menzies Lindsey and Ollie Reeves, who also appeared for the State in the case, stood before the bar talking, Thomas Lindsey asked the Judge what sentence would be passed if the defendant should enter a plea of guilty to a charge of first-degree murder. The Judge intimated that he would be given a sentence of life imprisonment.

The Judge then ordered the prisoner into court, ignoring the State's objections. The prosecutor argued with the Judge as to whether he had the right to hear the case over the State's objection. He moved that a jury be impaneled to hear the case. The Judge overruled the motion.

"If the case were venued to Posey, Warrick or Gibson county it will mean a cost of from $2000 to $2500 to the county and would be a question of what a jury would ... the Judge said. "There are many niggers in the woodpile in this case to get a jury to give the death penalty. There are three or four mysteries that have never been cleared up. There is the question of the girl in the case. No one knows whether it was the girl who committed suicide (Norma Feuger) Bohannon's stenographer also, who saw the murder. There were others there.

"Even if the jury did find for a death penalty I would not be bound by the verdict. I would not fix the death penalty in this case."

WEEK'S SALES ON LOCAL EXCHANGE 53,885, RECORD

Large Turnover in Rice-Stix Stock Contributes Largely to Total — Single Session Record Also Made During Week.

The St. Louis Stock Exchange set two sales records during the past week—one for single session and the other for week's trade. While the new weekly record was made on but small gain in number of sales over previous high total, the period was one day short owing to Thanksgiving holiday. The day record showed large increase. There were 63 issues traded in during the week.

Total sales for the week were 53,885 shares, compared with 53,863 recorded in the big week last May. The single session record was broken Monday with 11,938 shares traded in, but this record was shattered 24 hours later when Tuesday's sales reached 17,992 shares. The record previous to this week was 11,279, made May 10 last.

Rice-Stix Leader.

Rice-Stix common stock, which was traded in to extent of 19,728 shares between 23¼ and 27, the latter price representing a maximum range of five points, was the individual feature and was responsible for the record day's trade. On Tuesday, when the large volume of business was transacted, Rice-Stix sales reached 11,074 shares. The net gain was 1¾ points on this turnover. Sales of this stock for the week naturally figured largely in the period's aggregate business, which was more than double the total of preceding week. "It was just too low," was an explanation offered for buying.

International Shoe, Mahoney-Ryan, Moloney Electric, Consolidated Lead, Ely-Walker, Scruggs common and Granite Bimetallic were other shares with large turnovers. Koplar preference sales also were large, all but something less than 100 shares being "crossed" by one house.

Shoe Range Irregular.

International Shoe sales reached 5074 shares as the stock covered an irregular course. It first sold higher and then ranged down several points. Mahoney-Ryan ranged up over 4 points. Moloney Electric sold up more than 2 points. The Consolidated Lead stock opened the week at 9½ and ranged to 12. Ely-Walker sold up. Scruggs was down a fraction. On Friday 1045 shares were taken at 17½ by one house, most of this amount coming from but one brokerage house.

Granite Bimetallic reached the dollar mark, a gain of 45 cents, but did not hold the full gain. Skouras advanced 2 points, selling to 57.

Wagner Electric "Rights" Sell.

Wagner Electric sold ex-rights during the week. The "rights" were traded in at 14 first but at final session ranged down to 13½. Some of the securities that featured the week's business recorded declines at closing session of week.

LITTLE SAID ABOUT GOLD AND BANK RATE

By ARTHUR W. KIDDY.

Copyright by New York Evening Post, Inc.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—That the prolonged and serious drain of gold should be accompanied by so little anxiety concerning the possibilities of a rise in the bank rate indicates a growing belief that the authorities dislike taking action unless compelled to do so. The situation is, however, not helped by the difficulty in following the position in the United States.

It is apparent that in absence of any evident determination by the Federal Reserve Bank to check speculation in Wall street and the slowness of the Bank of England to raise the rate because of gold exports are possibly justified by the facts and sound reasoning. Nevertheless, it would seem to mark a change in policy that the market finds it not altogether easy to follow.

Moreover, the market position in London, as regards the gold drain and foreign exchange, is complicated by continued foreign borrowing, with a likelihood that it will be kept up for some time. It is also felt that Germany and other foreign borrowers are obtaining money too cheaply in London, owing to consenting to large issue houses, and this constitutes another reason for asking whether London should not be imposing higher terms.

In fact, a good many heart burnings are noticeable just now concerning many controversial subjects and the existing unsettled state of French prosperity is being blamed by an attempt to create against England's sound currency and monetary policies.

It is argued, and, of course, is in a sense quite true, that France first obtained a great stimulus to her exports from her depreciated currency and then, after destabilizing, as London did when the pound was slightly valued in foreign currencies, she stabilized the franc at what was under valued. This occasioned a tremendous disturbance to the world trade, which is now supported by her new currency system which, in turn, is buttressed also by huge foreign credits owned by the Bank of France.

In spite of this prosperity, however, France has still paid no indebtedness to America.

Altogether, the sound money party in England, which also favored the prompt funding of Great Britain's debt to the United States, is having a pretty bad time and the changes of the currency and the monetary policy becoming a factor by the next general election are increasing.

WEEK'S METAL MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—With the exception of some improvement on the part of large consuming lines of steel, the automobile industry and builders of railroad cars, reports during the week suggest a falling off in the volume of mill production and that specifications against contracts were also smaller. The market is entering the season of the year when a gradual curtailment of activity usually takes place. Prices in many instances were also easier. Pig iron was firmer with bookings said to have been largely for shipment over the first quarter of the year.

A light improvement in demand from domestic consumers late in the week marked an otherwise quiet copper market. With covering for the next 60 to 90 days, imports of refineries against contracts and are holding at 10 cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley.

Tin was firm, following to a great extent the upward movement of London. Consuming interest was reported as moderate, however.

Lead was strong and the demand from consumers active. Producers were understood to be well sold for December, while there were reports that a good business for January shipment has already been placed. Zinc remained strong, but the volume of business was small, the understanding was slightly unfavorable in foreign currencies, she stabilized the franc in what was under valued. This occasioned a tremendous disturbance to the world trade, which is now supported by her new currency system which, in turn, is buttressed also by huge foreign credits owned by the Bank of France.

In spite of this prosperity, however, France has still paid no indebtedness to America.

Altogether, the sound money party in England, which also favored the prompt funding of Great Britain's debt to the United States, is having a pretty bad time and the changes of the currency and the monetary policy becoming a factor by the next general election are increasing.

WEEK-END ADVANCE IN PRICE OF WHEAT

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Dec. 1.—Higher closings marked the week-end in the grain market, wheat following Chicago where smallness of deliveries excited bullish influence on values. Report that also was factor in domestic grain market, it was said. Comment of indication for bad weather was called a factor in corn trade.

In the cash grain market Saturday, selections of No. 2 red wheat were 1 cent higher. Ordinary characters, weevily and damaged wheat, was in little demand. Offers of No. 2 red was offered as low at $1.45. Hard wheat was up 1 cent. Movement was slow at the advance. No. 1 hard was offered at $1.22 and had $1.20½ bid. Ordinary No. 2 was had selling at $1.28½ and $1.19. There was more firmness shown in corn. White and yellow corn was ½ and 1 cent higher and the mixed was unchanged. Supplies were large. The main buyers were exporters and elevator interests, and there were scattered local and shipping orders, too. Oats were in fair supply and the market was strong with prices 1 cent higher. Local trade and shippers took the oats.

May wheat and May corn sold fractionally higher in the early trade. Winnipeg wheat closed 2c lower on December, ¾d on March and ½d on May. Sold and closed more than a point lower, but March closed only fractionally. Liverpool closed ¼d higher to ½d lower and Buenos Aires quiet, net 7 points higher to 8 points lower. Santos contracts, December, 21.85c; January, 21.16c; March, 20.83c; May, 19.90c; July, 19.40c; September, 19.06c.

SMALL DELIVERIES BULLISH FACTOR IN WHEAT TRADE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Higher prices both for wheat and corn today accompanied scantiness of first deliveries on December contracts, as well as report of Secretary Jardine's annual crop estimating session. Corn price upturns were the sharpest of the day. Indications that there were bad weather in the corn belt and country offerings were rather light, however, whereas corn clearances to seaboard seemed to be assuming large bulk.

Stimulus to wheat buying was unusual on the part of recent speculative sellers quickly anticipated delivery of December contracts by actual delivery of December, preliminary deliveries of December corn, too, totaled 68,000 bu. all told, and with talk of possible farm relief legislation becoming more and more a distinct influence on the market, prices of wheat developed an increasing upward trend, with the close at nearly the day's top level.

Especially in the last hour of trading, aggressive buying took place on the part of speculators who expected to profit from an advance of wheat values. Meanwhile, the chief sellers, but the offerings were of insufficient volume to meet the demand. Word that total deliveries for the day amounted to 475,000 bu of wheat and 735,000 bu of corn was virtually ignored.

Provisions were irregular, but on most part reflected upturns in the value of hogs.

Wheat closed strong, 1¾c to 2 2/2¢ net higher; corn 1c to 1 2/2c net higher; oats unchanged to ½c to ¾c advance, and provisions varying from 22c decline to a rise of 27c.

Secretary Jardine's annual report advocating surplus control legislation was apparently also a bullish factor. Oats showed some advance as well. Corn started in strong, but a decline to ¼@¾c on corn starting at ¼c decline to ¼@¾c and subsequently scoring a general upturn. Provisions inclined downward.

Reports of continued weather in Argentina tended further today to give firmness to the wheat market here. Report also at hand that unofficial estimate of the Buenos Aires surplus of wheat from the 1929 Argentina crop had been reduced 28,000,000 bushels from the latest previous figure.

CANADIAN MARCONI DECLINES TO 11 1-8

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Prices moved irregularly higher on the curb market today, with attention again centered on Canadian Marconi, break in which caused waves of selling on both curb and stock markets and suspension of trading in the issue yesterday.

Week-end profit taking, combined with declining prices on the stock market, brought many issues to lower levels after early gains. However, a number, especially in the automotive, mining, chain store and utility groups, were bought on the strength of favorable trade news developments and closed substantially higher, with many establishing new peak prices.

Trading in Canadian Marconi was begun at the unchanged price of 11 bid, more than an hour after the market opened on the initial sale, was a block of 60,000 shares representing an accumulation of overnight odd-lot selling orders. The commission arrangements had given special instructions regarding odd-lot trading in the issue and it moved up to 12⅜, then broke to close at 11⅛ for a net loss of nearly 7 points on the day. Tur

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"A flurry of 10 per cent call money yesterday when a seasonal pinch left the market temporarily short of funds unsettled stocks momentarily but did not shake the underlying confidence of the country in equity issues. With drawals of funds were large this week in response to the demands for currency in connection with the Thanksgiving holiday, the usual week-end requirements and the end of month settlements. If precedent is a guide it will be another 10 days before the outward flow or currency is offset in the money market by a return flow. But then the aproaching holidays will start another outflow that invariably represents the heaviest currency losses for the year. Since this seasonal movement of currency in anticipation of holiday demands may be counted upon to exert the usual tightening influence on the market it is safe to conclude that money will remain firm for the rest of 1928. Meanwhile the gold movement has been reversed, and the easing tendency of early autumn imports has been largely offset by recent exports.

Not Much Thought to Loans.

"Not much thought has been given by the market to brokers' loans this autumn, but the rapid expansion in these credits will almost certainly receive greater attention with the opening of Congress and the disappearance of late forces for ease. The loan rise has carried the volume of borrowed funds to a high level relative to stock prices and that in the end always attracts attention. For the most part during the last three years loans and stocks have moved closely together. On only two occasions have loans risen higher relatively than stocks. Early in 1926 and again in May this year the loan curve was projected like an arm high above the relative advance in stock prices. In each case the incident was followed promptly by a break in the market. It is interesting that loans for the third time in the last three years stand again at a level relatively higher than that for stocks.

Period of Fat Profits.

"Yet it must be confessed that nothing short of a calamitous reversal in trend during the one month of 1928 still remaining can prevent the year from going down in history as the country's period of fattest profits to date. Corporate net earnings have looked better with each succeeding quarter. One hundred and ninety-five industrial concerns earned 2.5 per cent more in the first quarter of 1928 than in the corresponding period of 1927. They earned 16.3 per cent more in the second quarter, and 38 per cent more in the third quarter. This accelerated pace of improvement is an illusion in the sense that the comparison of third quarter 1928 profits with third quarter 1927 profits is a contrast between a rising and falling trend. But the fact remains that the 1928 prosperity tide not only is running above that for 1927 but above that for the record year, 1926. These profits gains have been broadly distributed among different groups—virtually all industrial groups have earned more this year than last.

Question of Fund Supply.

"With the approach of 1929 some thought should go into the question whether expanding business and rising stock prices will come into serious competition for funds. It is conceivable that the market might absorb so much credit as to penalize business next year. But it can scarcely be argued that this has been the history in 1928. Notwithstanding an unbelievable growth in speculative credit there has been enough money left for business and large corporations themselves have been big lenders on the call market. If industrial concerns need funds they can pull substantial amounts back from the call market. It again is conceivable that in such a case expanding business might check the activity in stocks. That the early months of the new year will throw fresh light on these interesting possibilities is fairly reasonable to suppose but time alone will provide the answer to so important a query.

PROFIT-TAKING HEAVY IN LATE STOCK TRADING

Wide Assortment of Issues Carried Down 2 to 14 Points at Week's Final Session—Trade Slackens.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—An overnight accumulation of bearish developments cast a wet blanket over the fires of speculative enthusiasm in the stock market today. The pace of trading was slackened considerably, and heavy profit-taking in the last hour carried a wide assortment of issues down 2 to 14 points.

The Federal Reserve report after the close yesterday, disclosing that the system's reserve ratio had fallen to the lowest point since August, 1921, and that the recent gold imports had been more than offset by exports and earmarkings, added to yesterday's 10 per cent call money and the bursting of speculative bubble in Canadian Marconi on the curb, gave traders something to think about. Traders who have been growing nervous over the increasing violence of trading decided to lighten their accounts, despite the market's rather remarkable comeback after the midday break yesterday.

The few Saturday morning developments were generally favorable, however. Sears-Roebuck and Montgomery Ward reported increase in sales during November over the month last year, and the weekly trade reviews expressed confidence that the holiday mercantile business would surpass anything yet seen. The insolvency record as reported for November showed a marked decline from October in the number of failures, but a slight increase in the total liabilities involved.

Record Day's Clearings.

The New York Clearing House reported record-breaking clearances today of $2,521,000,000, more than $100,000,000 above the previous record of July 3. Heavy month-end interest and dividend requirements were an important factor in the record volume. Bankers looked for light money next week, as much of it on Dec. 1 payments fail to make their way back to the banks, because of the coming holidays.

Total sales in the day's short session mounted to 2,652,500 shares, which would have been considered a mighty Saturday volume not long ago, but which compares with sales in excess of 3,000,000 shares in the two previous Saturday sessions. The Associated Press average price of 60 industrials was carried down more than three points, and of the 20 rails about a half point.

Montgomery-Ward and Sears-Roebuck, despite the heavy business reported, fell back about 14 and 7 points, respectively. International Nickel shot up more than 3 points, practically recovering yesterday's loss, then fell back 10 points. General Motors, General Electric and Packard Motor declined 2 to 4 points. Graham Paige was a strong spot in the motors, mounting about 8 points, and closing more than 4 points higher. Reo Improved, on report of record November shipments.

Radio Is Down.

Radio, Victor Talking Machine, Wright and Curtiss Aeros, A. M. Byers, Ingersoll Rand and Midland Steel preferred, lost 4 to 7 points. United States Steel was firm in a generally heavy steel group. Coppers also sagged, Greene Cananea and Anaconda yielding 3 points each.

A few rails and oils made fair progress. Tidewater issues went ahead about 3 and 4 points to new peaks, and Standard of New York broke through its previous high. Atlantic Refining, after recording a new low for the year, climbed up about 4 points. Standard of New Jersey lost about 1¾ points.

In the rails, Pennsylvania touched 74½, the highest price in years, while Katy and Boston and Maine broke into new high ground. New York Central, however, lost about 3 points on realizing.

Utilities were quiet and inclined to heaviness, American and foreign Power and American Waterworks losing 2 and 3 points.

Linseed Strong Spot.

American Linseed was the strong point of about a dozen issues which managed to break into new high territory. That issue jumped 10 points on a small ttturnover. Bush Terminal, Certo, General Mills and United Electric Coal went ahead 3 to 5 points to new tops.

Foreign exchanges were generally easy, although Sterling held steady. The Canadian Dollar was again at a slight discount in reflection of the heavy taking of gold from New York.

Stock Market Gyrates Wildly During Week—Heavy Selling Goes on During Period — Spectacular Rises Help.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The stock market gyrated wildly this week, with the bulls, in a battle that was nip and tuck at many points, managing to keep their supremacy over the bears until the last hour of trading today, when rather nervous profit taking caused a general but mild reaction.

"Heavy selling went on throughout the week, although it was well absorbed by bullish enthusiasm whetted during several sessions by spectacular rises in a number of high priced issues in which the floating supply has been sharply diminished. Earnings statements, particularly from the railroads, together with a number of stock split-ups and extra dividends, helped to keep the ball rolling.

The Associated Press average of 20 industrials stood about 3 1-3 points higher at the close of this week than at the close of last, and the average of 20 rails nearly 1½ points higher.

Reserve Ratio Down.

The Federal Reserve statement, coming a day late this week because of the holiday, caused reflection in Wall Street for the first time in weeks. Traders have become accustomed to sharp increases in the total of brokers' loans, but this week's statement, in addition to reporting an increase of $122,000,000, disclosed a loss of gold since Nov. 21 of $47,000,000 in contrast to the $42,000,000 which the country gained earlier in the autumn, and revealed that the system's reserve ratio had fallen to a low mark not experienced since August, 1921.

The market today showed a marked slackening of trading during most of the session, until the last hour, when a flood of profit taking carried a large majority of prices off 1 to 1¼ points for the day.

Commodities Generally Steady.

The commodity markets were generally steady during the week, cotton bounding up $1 a bale and more in successive sessions as result of good trade demand and speculative buying in anticipation that the Government crop report for December will show a sharp drop. Considerable profit taking developed toward the end of the week, however.

Foreign exchanges were marked by the firmness fo sterling, which by the firmness of sterling, which would make further gold imports from London profitable. The Canadian dollar moved up to premium, but fell back to a small discount at the end of the week, as the result of gold imports from New York.

A series of favorable dividends and stock split-up announcements, including the stock offering by the National City Bank; checking of the seasonal decline in steel production and the publication of a long string of October railroad earnings statements, all helped to create bullish enthusiasm.

Call Money 10 Per Cent.

The week also brought forth a series of disquieting developments. These included a rise in call money rates to 10 per cent for the third time this year; the loss of $24,000,000 in gold, bringing the monetary stocks of the nation down $485,000,000 below the high level of May, 1927, and another increase of $122,000,000 in Federal Reserve brokers' loans. Another disturbing factor was the wide-open break in Canadian Marconi stock on the New York Curb Market Friday. It was the drastic decline in Banciitaly stock on the Curb that started the disastrous break in stock prices last June.

The violence of the recent speculation in stocks had caused widespread uneasiness in financial and brokerage circles, as evident by the increasing number of cautionary advices by leading commission houses and the stiffening of margin requirements by both bankers and brokers. So far, the market has been able to absorb an unusually heavy volume of liquidation with little difficulty, and fresh buying power invariably has been supplied on all breaks. The violent advances in many of the high-priced issues has been due, largely to the relatively small floating supply of those stocks and the disinclination of large holders to take profits, either because of taxes on their inability to find other satisfactory sources of investment.

Some Forward Movements.

Elimination of small sales volume from the tape has aided materially in keeping traders better informed as to the trend of prices on the floor, and has reduced the number of complaints. Many brokers are still unable, however, to obtain prompt reports of orders executed on the floor because so many of the specialists are over-worked.

Railroad and public utility shares came to the fore again this week. Steel shares did little all week. Buying of motors was selective in character, with Packard, Nash, Hupp, Mack Trucks and Yellow Trucks in the forefront of the advance, although the last-named turned heavy on Friday on a denial of reports that it would take over the General Motors truck business.

$37,500 NECKLACE LOST; REWARD OF $3500 OFFERED

Woman on Shopping Tour, Nov. 22 When String of 65 Pearls Broke or was Stolen.

The lost of a $37,500 pearl necklace by a young St. Louis woman when on a downtown shopping trip, Nov. 22, became known yesterday when a reward of $3500 was offered for its recovery. It is believed the strand on which the pearls were strung either broke and fell from the owner's neck or was cut and the pearls stolen.

The reward was advertised and announced to the police by Paul J. Bierman, an insurance adjuster representing a company which had insured the necklace for its full value. Since the announcement, Bierman's office in the Railway Exchange Building has been besieged by men and women seeking information so they could join in the search. One man brought in a strand of synthetic pearls he had found.

Loser's Name Kept Secret.

Bierman withheld the loser's name, saying that she was a member of a prominent family and had forbidden him to disclose her identity.

The morning of Nov. 22, Bierman said, the young woman went downtown in a car driven by a private chauffeur. She visited several stores and at 2 p. m. was in a jewelry store where an employe observed the strand of pearls about her neck. At 7 p. m., when she returned home, she discovered the necklace was gone. One pearl still clung to her coat.

The necklace was described as composed of 65 graduated pearls totaling 270.40 grains, the smallest, 14.36 grains, and the largest 101.60 grains. The strand was fastened with a platinum clasp which was adorned with a marquise diamond surrounded by rose diamonds and bore the dog's head trade mark of Boucheron, a French jeweler.

No Clew so Far.

So far no tangible clew to the whereabouts of the necklace has developed. False hope was raised for a few minutes Friday evening when a man who said he was Frank L. Smith of the Mayfair Hotel telephoned Bierman that he had found the necklace. However, the man insisted that the adjuster take the reward in cash to the hotel. Bierman investigated and was told that there was no guest or employe of the hotel by that name.

Bierman is planning to accompany the young woman over the ground of her shopping tour in the hope of throwing some light on the loss.

BACKER OF BLIND TIE SALESMEN NOW SELLING DANCE TICKETS

Jacob K. Karchmer Conducting Telephone Campaign for Christian Volunteer Army Benefit.

Jacob K. Karchmer, who has at odd times backed the sale of neckties by blind men, or tickets for "charity" events—all at a profit to himself—now is conducting a telephone campaign for ticket sales for a dance to be given at the City Club Jan. 31 by the Christian Volunteer Army.

Interviewed yesterday after a representative of the Better Business Bureau had visited his headquarters in the First National Apartments at 108 West Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves, Karchmer declined to say what part of the ticket sales receipts went to him and his telephone salesmen and what to the organization sponsoring the dance. Leo H. Bown of 1213 (rear) South Broadway, head of the Christian Volunteer Army, told investigators he did not know what the financial arrangements were.

144,325 ANTI-PROHIBITION MAJORITY IN NEW ZEALAND

Anglican Primate Says Dry Cause Has Suffered Setback; Urges Half-Way Measures.

By the Associated Press.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Dec. 1.—Final figures of the vote in the recent licensing referendum in New Zealand give a majority of 144,325 against prohibition. The vote was as follows: For continuance of the present licensing system, 374,562; for State control, 64,276; for prohibition, 294,453.

Archbishop Faverill, Primate of the Anglican Church in New Zealand, said: "The best friends of prohibition must realize that the cause has received a serious setback. The indications are that prohibition will not be carried in our generation."

The Archbishop urged that prohibitionists now aim at some halfway mark, suggesting the conversion of bar rooms into open restaurants and the prohibition of spirituous liquor except on medical order.

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Smashing West Point's defenses to bits with a riproaring, bewildering attack that kept up its momentum from start to finish, Stanford put the Army football team to rout today and won the most spectacular intersectional battle of the year by the lopsided score of 26 to 0.

SCHWARZ LOSES WORLD TITLE TO FRENCH BOXER

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Emile "Spider" Pladner of France gave Izzy Schwartz of New York, recognized as the flyweight champion, a thorough beating tonight in a 12-round bout advertised here as a world title affair. Pladner easily gained the decision, after winning eight of the rounds, with two even.

Pladner seemed to have a rather healthy respect for Schwartz's reputation in the first two rounds, boxing timidly. After he had got through those two rounds and found he could more than hold his own, the "Spider" went after Schwartz like a tiger in the third round and retained the upper hand throughout the remainedr of the bout, except for the eighth and ninth rounds, when the New Yorker held him even.

Schwartz was groggy and staggering in the tenth round. Again in the eleventh he was forced to hang on while 20,600 spectators, the largest crowd that ever witnessed indoor boxing in France, clamored for a native son to "finish the American."

Plander weighed 5 ounces over the flyweight limit of 112 pounds. Schwartz weighed 110.

Nurmi Reported To Have Signed as Pro for $10,000

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish runner, has definitely turned professional, says the Helsingfors sport newspaper, "Idrottsbladet." The paper says Nurmi has signed a contract with Tex Rickard and adds that $10,000 as a bonus for signing already has been deposited to Paavo's account in a Finnish bank.

Nurmi, it is said, is soon to leave Finland for the United States to run for the New York promoter under the contract, and will receive additional compensation for each race, the amount to be decided prior to each appearance.

CLYDE VAN DUSEN CAPTURES JOCKEY CLUB STAKES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 1.—Clyde Van Dusen, fleet son of Man O'War, captured the $25,000 added Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes at Churchill Downs here this afternoon for Herbert P. Gardner, leading home some of the best juveniles in the country. Clyde Van Dusen classed as a dark horse, made a show of his opponents, winning by six lengths. He ran the mile in 1:38 4-5 over a track that was termed "good."

R. S. Clark's filly Current, winner of her last four starts, was second, and Frederick M. Grabner's Windy City was third. Dr. Freeland, from the W. R. Coe Stable, was fourth.

Clyde Van Dusen's victory earned $32,800 for the Gardner Stable. It was the largest purse of the fall meeting at Churchill Downs, which came to a close today.

The winner got away to a good start and at no time during the entire race was his leadership in danger. He was sent into a length lead on the first turn and increased his advantage at every stride until he was six lengths in advance of Current at the end of the eight furlongs. Current, the favorite, maintained second position virtually the entire race, although she was closely accom-

Clyde Van Dusen, taken into the lead with a rush, set a fast pace on the slow track, drew away entering stretch and under hustling tactics continued to increase his advantage to the end. Current, a forward factor from the start, responded gamely after three-quarters, but could not menace the winner and began tiring in last sixteenth. Windy City raced prominently with a considerable saving of ground and held on well. Dr. Freeland saved in the first half mile, moved up visibly entering the stretch, but faltered in the drive. Ben Machree finished fast. Nalshanur had no mishaps. Soul of Honor began tiring badly after showing speed for six furlongs.

St. Louis Hockey Team Outfights St. Paul to Win Again, 6 to 5

By W. J. McGoogan

In an exciting match which had a crowd of 3,300 standing up roaring during the greater part of the three periods, the St. Louis ice hockey team won its third successive American Association match last night, defeating St. Paul, 6 to 5, at the Winter Garden.

In addition to the eleven scores there many other thrilling features to the match, which saw the deciding marker banged into the St. Paul net by the veteran Harry Cameron one minute before the final bell sounded after St. Paul had scored twice to tie the count at five all, just two minutes previously.

St. Paul achieved this seemingly impossible feat by throwing defense to the breezes in the final few minutes of play, sending five men down the ice in a swirling, slashing attack on the St. Louis goal. Two goals were needed by the visitors to tie and two goals they made, sending hard shots past Goaltender Anderson, one minute apart.

But there was still a minute to play and this effort seemed to tire the Hawke and St. Louis, attacking vigorously, found an opening and Cameron made good.

Billy Hill, St. Louis wingman, led the scoring with two goals while Des Jardins, leading scorer of the league for the past two seasons, counted one.

There were more penalties last night than in the two games played here previously. All of them were for minor infractions of the rules and were each of two minutes duration—that is, all except one by Taylor of St. Louis another by Wilson of St. Paul, who had an additional two minutes tacked on for talking back to Referee Sills.

At times the penalties worked a decided hardship on the side suffering them. Once St. Louis had only its goaltender and three men on the ice and St. Paul was similarly handicapped at another period.

There was also a peculiar ruling to the most of the fans when Seaborn was awarded a goal, although his shot was cleared by Stark. The reason was that Stark threw his stick at the puck to prevent a score, an illegal act, and

CHICAGO TENPIN FIVE HITS 3222, A NEW RECORD

A new all-time record for five-men bowling teams in tournament competition was set last night when the Duffey five of Chicago totaled 3222 for three games in the Midwest tournament, in progress at the Schaefer Delmar alleys here.

Games of 1046, 1067 and 1109 were chalked up by the Chicagoans in their record-making series, which, of course, put them in first place in the tourney standing.

Hank Marino was high with 239, 221, 256—716. Even in this brilliant performance, one member of the team was under 600.

The team's score, man by man, follows:

Devito	196	215	216	627
Brannon	200	181	186	567
Flieger	242	216	213	672
Krems	168	234	238	640
Marino	239	221	256	716
Totals	1046	1067	1109	3222

Six Other 3000 Totals.

Six other teams rolled 3000 or better before the late squads took the alleys. The Eppings of Louisville took third place in the standings with 3113; the Peoria Life team gained fourth position with 3094, and the Blecke Acmes of Chicago hit 3072 and took fifth place.

Other teams above the 3000 mark and gaining places high up on the list were the Mineralites of Chicago, 3027; Strachans of Chicago, 3010; and Commodore Barry five of Chicago, 3006.

Bowling with the Peoria five, F. Thomas had a 288 game.

Williams Totals 635.

In the doubles G. May and R. Stacer turned in the best effort with a three game count of 1259 while in the singles J. O. Williams rolled 635 and Stacer got 608.

Bowling will start in the tournament this morning at 9 o'clock when a squad of Kansas City and Chicago bowlers roll doubles and singles and continue until 10 o'clock tonight when the last squad in the team event rolls. The tournament will be completed tomorrow morning when a squad of bowlers rolls doubles and singles beginning at 10 a. m.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—Southern California's powerful gridiron guns routed the Ramblers of Notre Dame, 27 to 14, here today. It was the Trojans' first successful encounter in three engagements with the Rocknemen of South Bend.

Spiking the mighty right arm of Johnny Neimic, Notre Dame's halfback aerial sharpshooter, the Trojans unlimbered their mightiest guns from the start, and a crowd of 80,000 saw them score three direct hits on the Rambler's goal posts before the struggle was half over. So bitter were the salvos of the Trojan artiller, that the Rocknemen were on the retreat through most of the first two periods.

Chevigny Runs 51 Yards.

But the Notre Dame troops which had routed both the Navy and Army in the East, were not utterly demoralized. They launched a powerful counterattack in the third period that beat back the Trojans to the center of the battlefield and then sent the brilliant John Chevigny away on a 51-yard dash to score. Again, as the battle neared its end, they battered down Troy's wall and marched to a second touchdown.

Fast and powerful, the Southern California squad jumped into action from the opening kick-off; smeared several of Neimic's long shots, and began a march on its own 36-yard line that ground the Rocknemen before them.

Their own aerial attack helpless before the uncanny ability of Southern California's pass interferers; their line buffeted by thunderbolt blows and a rain of passes from the air, the Ramblers could not help but retreat before the Trojans in the first half, which ended 20—0 in favor of the Western team.

The figures tell the tale:

Notre Dame.	Southern California.
5 First downs	10
112 Yards from scrimmage	205
21 Yards from passes	121
133 Total yardage	326
2 Passes completed	8
8 Passes incompleted	4
1 Passes intercepted	5
7 Number of punts	3
29 Punting average	40
1 Number of penalties	4
5 Yardage lost from penalties	30
2 Number of fumbles	1

Notre Dame—Chevigny 72, Mullins 48.

Southern California—Williams, 124; Saunders, 55.

Framed in Southern California's victory was the flashing figure of the Trojans' dynamic leader, Don Williams. His spectacular dashes, fine passing and generalship of the winning squad was inspiring.

Carried Off on Stretcher.

When he was carried off the field on a stretcher in the final quarter, a victim of his own hard playing, the dense throng gave a rousing send-off to the man who played his last college game today.

Starred in Notre Dame's gallant but unavailing stand, was the play of a substitute quarterback, little Frank Carideo. Taking the place of the regular, Jack Brady, when the latter was injured, Carideo was the shining light of the drives that gave the Ramblers their two scores.

Others had outstanding roles in the battle. For Southern California, Capt. Jesse Hibbs, tackle; the two ends, Francis Tappan, and Lowry McCaslin, and Lloyd Thomas, halfback, turned in stellar performances. John Chevigny and Jack Neimic, Notre Dame's fleet halfbacks, co-starred in what offensive the Midwestern team could muster.

The score was 27 to 14.

Following Notre Dame's kickoff, neither team could make yardage. Notre Dame's center, Moynihan, went out early with a broken wrist.

After exchanging punts the Trojans suffered a bad break when a bad pass rolled to their 11-yard zone. Williams recovered the ball.

Punts were exchanged, then Williams made Troy's rooters howl with a twisting run, gaining 10 yards. Williams then fumbled and Vezie recovered 27 yards from the Trojan goal. The Trojan defense against the Ramblers' aerial attack was airtight and U. S. C. took the oval.

Saunders Goes Over.

Toward the end of the first period the Trojans blocked a punt, recovered near midfield, then marched to a touchdown, Williams and Saunders alternating with steady gains. Hibbs failed to score the extra point after Saunders had taken the ball over on a buck.

Tappaan kicked off, then promptly intercepted Neimic's pass, and the Trojans rammed, passed and sprinted 38 yards, but Brady intercepted Williams' pass on the goal line and ran out 11 yards.

Passes swept the Trojans over Notre Dame's line at once after the short defensive punt. Hibbs kicked goal after Aspit scored on an 18-yard pass.

Righ after the kickoff, Steponovitch blocked a Rambler pass, snared the ball and raced for another toutchdown. Hibbs again added the extra point.

Troy played a defensive game for the remainder of the first half, which ended, Notre Dame 0, Southern California 20.

Early in the third period Notre Dame won another break when Miller recovered Neimic's punt after Saunders had fumbled on Troy's 46-yard line. Thomas intercepted Neimic's pass to even

By Herman Wecke.

The winter baseball season will be on in full force this week, when the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues is held in Toronto, Canada, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Following this, there will be the annual winter meetings of the majors, the National at New York, Dec. 11, and the American at Chicago, the same day. The joint meeting is set for Dec. 13 at Chicago.

St. Louis will be well represented. Manager Dan Howley and Business Manager Bill Friel will represent the Browns at the minor and the major league meetings. Branch Rickey will be at Toronto in the interest of the Cardinals and the various farms, while President Sam Breadon will go to New York for the National League session.

Both St. Louis teams will try to strengthen their clubs. The Cardinals won the pennant in 1928, but Owner Breadon will be ready to make trades. Assets which will help the team always are desirable. While there has been no mention from the Cardinal office of probable deals, officials have said that they are not satisfied with the club as it stands at present. This despite the fact that such star youngsters as Charley Gelbert and Carey Selph, infielders and Herman Bell and Bill Hallahan, pitchers, will be added to the roster.

Thus there is a possibility that Rickey will lay the foundation for trades while he is mixing with the minor league leaders in Toronto. And then Branch will have other duties. For instance an effort will without a doubt be made to straighten out the Houston tangle. This class A farm of the St. Louis Nationals at present is without a manager, inasmuch as Frank Snyder resigned.

The same situation holds true with the Browns. Dan Howley brought his club home in third place in 1928 and proved the "miracle man" of the campaign. But Dan admitted freely that some new talent was needed in various spots. The Brownies have brought in many recruits, but they will be on the look-out for new talent. Howley will be on the lookout for an experienced outfielder, who can hit, to fill in with Heine Manush and Fritz Schulte. Another first-class pitcher to go along with Sam Gray and Alvin Crowder will not be passed up.

Thus from all appearances the winter meetings will be lively places as far as the officials of the two St. Louis clubs are concerned.

Draft Problem Important.

However, the chief fight at the minor league gathering will be concerning the draft. The majors do not like the present form. The war has been on for seven years, or since Commissioner Landis took charge in 1921, and it is expected that the issue will be fought to a finish when the majors and minors get together.

Two definite courses are left open to the "little fellows." One would bring absolute peace and the other would sever relations between the warring factions. The majors will offer an amendment to the present selective draft law. If the minors accept, all well and good. If they refuse, well the "big fellows" have served notice that they will close their books to the minors. This, however, will apply only to the three class AA leagues. It will leave them free to deal with the Class A clubs and teams in the circuits of lower classification.

Major League Magnates Will Offer Amendment to Selective Draft Law

The new amendment is a twin-sister which has been proposed every year the past few campaigns. It has eight salient features, each dealing directly with the financial and player obligations of the majors and minors.

Minor Leagues Not in Accord.

Several minor leagues at their annual meetings have already voted against the measure. This is true of the Pacific Coast, while President Tom Hickey of the American Association recently said that he doubted whether the minors would agree to the proposals. The Southern Association has added its vote in favor of the measure.

The eight features of the new draft proposal follow:

1. Draft price for Class AA players raised to $7500; Class A players to $5500; Class B players to $3500.

2. Major league clubs must pay consideration in full at time of draft. Heretofore major league clubs were obligated to pay but half of draft price upon delivery of player.

3. Number of major league optional agreements with minors raised from eight to 12.

4. Major league player limit raised to 40 players, including those out on option. Heretofore it has been 35.

5. Only one player of any Class AA or A club subject to draft by majors. In classes B, C and D number unrestricted.

6. Class AA players who have never served in majors not subject to draft until they have completed four years of service in minors. In Class A this service is limited to three years and in Class B two years.

7. Major league clubs permitted to draft players until midnight of the fifth day following selective draft meeting.

8. Major league clubs must pay $75,000 for right to establish teams in Class AA cities, in addition to the price of the club after an appraisal of the assets. Formerly the price was $50,000.

The new major-minor agreement as proposed also places strict limitations upon player limits. The limits include all suspended players, but exclude non-playing managers, coaches, ineligible and voluntary retired athletes. The numbers follow:

Majors 40; players, which number must be reduced to 25 active between June 15 and Aug. 31.

Class AA: 35, which number must be reduced to 25 active players from 30 days after opening of season to Aug. 30.

Class A: 30 players, which number must be reduced to 23 active players from 20 days after opening until Aug. 25.

Class B: 25 players, which number must be reduced to 16 players from 30 days after opening until Aug. 25.

Class C and D: 14 players from 20 days after opening of league's season until Aug. 25; 20 players from Aug. 26 to Jan. 1; unlimited from Jan. 2 until 20 days after opening of league's season.

Novel Doubles Event Tonight.

A handicap draw-for-partner mixed doubles contest will be held tonight at the Rogers alleys, with the entry list open to all men and women bowlers in the city who have established averages in nine or more games of league play. Squads will be rolled at 8 and 9 o'clock and entry can be made at the alleys or by telephoning GArfield 8779. The women will draw for the partners before the start of each squad.

matters but the Trojans lost 15 yards for holding, and kicked.

Chevigny fooled the Trojans with a spinner and dashed 51 yards to score, bowling over two tacklers and rolling the last five yards after being knocked off his feet. Carideo added the extra point.

Williams' surprise punt after Notre Dame's kickoff, gained 71 yards, putting Rockne's Ramblers in a hole 11 yards from their goal. Nelmic punted out and the game surged about midfield.

Williams brought the spectators to their feet with a scintillating 28-yard dash around right end. A pass and buck made it first down 24 yards from the Ramblers' goal. The invasion was set back 10 yards when the Ramblers dumped Williams as he tried to pass. Score end third period—Notre Dame 7, Southern California 20.

As the fourth period started, the Trojans passed and plugged for two first downs. They went twice to the one-yard zone but the Ramblers' wall turned to stone and they took the pigskin two yards from the goal line. Carideo kicked out of bounds on his 42-yard line. Hibbs, Troy's captain, was carried from the field injured.

Williams tossed a long pass to Edelson, who was dumped seven yards from a score. Then Williams passed to McCaslin for the Trojans' fourth touchdown and Carideo returned Williams' kickoff 14 yards to his 39-yard line. Mullins got away for a flashing run of 20 yards, but Troy raised a defensive wall and took the ball.

Carideo took Williams' punt on the Rumblers' 23-yard mark and raced 52 yards, the longest run of the day.

Elder and Mullins hammered out a first down. Troy lost five yards for offside. Mullins criss-crossed for four and Gebert went over on a quarterback sneak from the six-yard zone. His kick was good for the extra point.

Williams was hurt soon after the kickoff and was carried off the field while the 80,000 stood cheering. The gun popped the end of the classic shortly afterward, the third straight victory of the west over the east chalked up for 1928 intersectional football. Final score: Notre Dame, 14; Southern California, 27.

CORNELL TEAMS' FAILURES CAUSE INVESTIGATION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Cornell Alumni Corporation decided today to name a committee to confer with Cornell's athletic council on the subject of athletic conditions, but at the same time officials of the organization denied rumors of the ousting of "Gloomy Gil" Dobie because of the poor showing in recent years of the football teams he has coached.

Nevertheless, some of those attending indicated they wished something could be done to improve Cornell's athletic standing. The resolution providing for a conference committee was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Twenty-five college presidents answered the question sent out by alumni:

"What should a university expect from its alumni?"

"Alumni can be most helpful by reducing their emphasis on the side shows," said Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University.

Most of the answers subscribed to this theory, declaring that alumni were placing too much emphasis on winning footballe teams and not enough on the educational standards and equipment of their colleges.

South Broadway Club Seeks Permit For Bouts Dec. 13

With the expiration yesterday of the suspension imposed by the Western Amateur Athletic Union for alleged violations of the rules governing the registration of amateur boxers, the South Broadway A. C. has been restored to good standing in the Western District organization and officials of the club have applied for a sanction to hold an interclub fistic tourney on Thursday night, Dec. 13.

Matchmaker Willie Miller announced last night that he has a squad of 12 South Broadway boxers in training for the tournament and that he plans to send at least two of the organization's ring representatives into special events. The candidates for special matches are George West, senior featherweight champion of the Western District, and Cliff Doetzel, the senior flyweight title holder.

Stanford Stops Cagle, Defeats Army, 26-0

country today. The Cardinals had everything—a great line with super-stars forming the keystone in Heinecke at center and Robesky and Post, and a deceptive attack that alternately featured Hoffman, Sims and Frentrup, as well as Wilton and Lewis, all fast and shifty.

"Holes Big Enough for Trucks."

This attack constantly was punching holes through the army defense big enough for a truck. The backs were continually out "in the clear" in a succession of long gains. The Army's counter efforts were gallant and effective enough to stop Stanford's drives on five occasions, with the ball anywhere from West Point's one-yard line to the 20-yard line, but this sturdy defense couldn't stop them all. Reinforcements were rushed into the soldier line by the dozen but to little avail.

Stanford outrushed the Army by the one sided margin of 372 yards to 113, totalling 26 first downs to only eight for the cadets. The Cardinal aerial attack, engineered by Hoffman, added 124 yards while the tosses of Cagle and Hutchinson netted 102.

The game was less than three minutes old when Stanford launched its first drive into Army territory, sweeping 66 yards on a combination of passes and short dashes by Wilton, Sims and Hoffman before it was checked on the one-yard line. West Point might have escaped trouble had Murrell's punting been more effective but poor kicks gave the Cardinals two more chances, the last of which Hoffman capitalized by catapulating through the line for a touchdown to end a 28-yard drive.

Cagel's Spectacular Pass Wasted.

After stopping another Stanford advance on their nine-yard mark, the Cadets started the second quarter with their most spectacular counter attack. Cagle twice figured in two of the game's most thrilling plays but the Army chances vanished when his pass to the goal line was ruled incomplete because of the anxiety of too many Army men to grab the ball. On this play, Cagle started an end run, whirled as he was boxed, dashed backward and finally passed the ball on the dead run, as he was forced to do several times.

Shortly afterward, Cagle got loose on a long, spinning dash, side-stepping and stiff-arming at least half the Stanford team as he fought his way forward some 40 yards. His head gear was grabbed off and he was upset once but regained his feet to plunge forward in a whirl of would-be tacklers. Nearly half of his gain went for naught, however, when it was ruled he had stepped out of bounds after 22 yards. Stanford rallied to break up the Army threat and pound again at the West Point goal as the half ended.

Murrel and Cagle combined to lead the last Army offensive in the third quarter. It bogged down on the Cardinal 10-yard line when Lewis broke up a pass and Stanford broke loose gain. Lewis featured an 80-yard march which ended when Army took the ball on downs on its 7-yard line, but Hoffman and Sims combined to put over a touchdown soon afterward, the Cardinal Captain carrying the ball over on a short buck ending a drive of 44 yards.

The third Stanford touchdown was tallied by Sims early in the final quarter after an advance of 66 yards that had only one interruption. Cagle intercepted a pass deep in his own territory, but Piper, substitute Cadet back, fumbled on the 12-yard line. Frentrup whirled eight yards and Sims the remaining five.

Runs 64 Yards to Score.

Standford broke up every early attempt of the Army to advance through the air in the closing moments of the game, with Heinecke, Sims and Lewis doing especially alert defensive duty. After intercepting one heave well in Stanford territory, Frentrup was shaken loose off tackle, dodged his way past the Army secondary and ran 64 yards for touchdown with the finest individual dash of the game.

Hoffman, whose fine kicking and passing buttressed the tricky Stanford running game, successfully booted two placement kicks for extra points in four attempts.

BOSTON COLLEGE USES PASS TO WIN, 19-0, FROM HOLY CROSS TEAM

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Joe McKenney, the youngest college football coach in the business, ended his first season undefeated and untied here today when his Boston College eleven crushed Holy Cross, its ancient Jesuit rival, 19 to 0, because he had taught his Eagles how to handle forward passes correctly.

Cleo O'Donnell's purple clad players lost because their secondary defense men permitted the opposing halfbacks to beat them in the race down the field on aerials.

Al Weston, the Boston triple threat, was on the throwing end of two perfectly executed long tosses which Paddy Creedon and Murphy caught for touchdowns in unprotected areas. The third Eagles' score resulted from a 35-yard end run by Mirley.

These old-time rivals, when they clashed today for the twenty-sixth time, were so evenly matched during the opening period that a kicking duel resulted, with Clancy the Purple fullback, putting Dixon, Weston and Creedon, the Boston kickers, to shame. The Purple line held as firmly as the Boston forwards, but McKenney's backs refused to muff anything.

Weston Launches the Attack.

During the second period Weston launched McKenney's passing attack, most of which started on reverse plays. After Boston had been penalized for holding, Weston dropped back to midfield and tossed a 50-yard pass to Creedon, who caught the ball after beating Clancy, the Purple fullback, down the field to his goal line by two steps. Late in the period Weston completed enough short passes to advance his team from midfield to the Purple's 20-yard line.

Then he completed another pass to Murphy in the end zone. Colbert replaced Weston after the play and Plabe had kicked the extra point.

An over-anxious Holy Cross back paved the way for the Eagles' third score in the final period. When Dixon punted from his 45-yard line, his back was detected holding and the ball went to Boston College on the spot. Weston made three yards at right tackle, then gained 15 through the left side. Smith carried the ball for a gain around left end and then Mirley took the ball on a reverse play, which was probably aided by the gathering darkness, and broke clear for his 35-yard run and the final score.

But One Scoring Chance.

Holy Cross had but one scoring chance, in the third period, when its 70-yard advance was stopped on Boston's two-yard line, when with the goal line to go, Meegan playing in Dowling's halfback position, caught a pass and allowed himself to be tackled before he could take a step.

The chart indicated that Holy Cross, when Weston's passes and Mirley's run were eliminated, put up a gruelling struggle against defeat. The Purple backs made 13 first downs to Boston's eight, gained 125 yards against 70 on forward passes and advanced the ball 125 yards by rushing. The Eagles made 194 yards on rushes, but 130 of them came in the fourth period.

Pro Basket Game Called Off; Home Schedule Dropped

The scheduled game between the St. Louis Americans, local professional basketball team, and the Chicago Bruins was called off at the St. Louis University Gymnasium last night and spectators were refunded $80 received at the gate when the Chicago team refused to take the floor until it had been paid for its previous appearance on Friday.

The Bruins said they were given a written guarantee of $800 for two games here by Walter Beatley, manager of the local team, and Captain Russell of the visitors said the only money paid them was a $16 hotel bill.

Beatley stated after the game had been postponed that the schedule of home games would be cancelled but that an attempt would be made to play the out-of-town engagements. The original plan was to have teams playing on the road and at home.

The St. Louis team had played two games previously, defeating Springfield and losing to the Bruins on Friday. Each contest was attended by fewer than 200 persons.

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—A flashing, battling halfback, in the person of Capt. Tom Connell, playing his last game for the University of Detroit, made a runway of the territory outside Georgetown University's ends, raced to three touchdowns and inspired his mates to their finest football of the season, as the Hill-Toppers were crushed 33 to 13 here today.

The victory kept Detroit in that select group of elevens which have not met defeat this season, and earned it the right to claim national ranking. Not since Notre Dame downed the Titans in 1927, has Detroit been beaten and it has won 15 games.

Only in the first period when they scored 13 points and took the lead, did the Hill-Toppers threaten, although they held Detroit even in the second session. The last two periods were nothing but Detroit.

Connell clinched the right to be rated with the best backs of the country by his performance. He grabbed the first kickoff and outsped the entire Georgetown team for 96 yards and a touchdown. He was in the going throughout the game, and in the final period furnished a dazzling display by scoring two more touchdowns.

Connell was liberally aided by a line that charged fast and hard and backfield mates who cleared his path around the ends in beautiful style. Neither Lloyd Brazil nor Ed Maloney can be overlooked. Brazil handled the punting and his forward passing was the instrument that made the Titan offense too much for Georgetown to fathom. He whipped his heaves to Goodnow and Maloney for long advances and his running was a constant threat.

Visitors Not Stage Struck.

After Connell had shocked Georgetown by his quick score as the game opened, the Hill-toppers came right back and assumed the upper hand. Starting near midfield, with Scalci tossing an occasional pass, and Hudak and Dwyer making substantial gains through the line, Georgetown quickly evened the count. Dwyer carried the ball over on a short dash off tackle and Jim Mooney kicked goal. Their momentum undimished the Hill-toppers again crossed the Titan goal line. This time it was a perfectly executed forward pass from Scalci to Hudak, which ended the journey.

Mooney failed to make the extra point and Georgetown led 13 to 7. Detroit recovered somewhat in the second period, but a penalty with the ball near the Georgetown goal line ruined the only scoring chance.

The Titans appeared to be a difficult group of football player as they entered the third period. Maloney smashed through the line and Connell and Brazil slashed around the ends to carry the ball within the 15-yard line. Here Brazil tossed a pass to Goodnow who received the ball on the Georgetown goal line and stepped over for the score.

Connell placed Detroit in the lead by kicking the extra point. The cheering had hardly quieted before another march carried the ball to the Georgetown 4-yard line, from where Maloney dragged four enemy players over the final chalk mark. The final period was all Connell. The Titan leader carried the ball often and seldom was he checked. His second score came about the middle of the session when Maloney and Brazil cleared a path around right end. His second was the result of a delayed play which worked so perfectly that Georgetown players did not know who had the ball until Connell had scored.

Jim Mooney Powerful in Defeat.

The Hill-toppers were outplayed, but never outfought and they never stopped battling. Dwyer, Hudak, Leary and Hannigan in the backfield made gains but could not make them consistently enough to accomplish a score. The line, led by Jim Mooney, played desperately.

More than 25,000 persons witnessed the triumph.

OUR HOCKEY KNIGHTS IN ARMOR: They Need It, and How!

St. Louis Hockey Team Wins Third Straight Game

St. Louis Scores First.

St. Louis took the lead shortly after the contest opened when Curly Headley, defense man, dribbled the puck down the ice, evaded the St. Paul defense men and drove hard into the net. Then Goyer made it two for the locals when he counted from a scrimmage in front of the visitor's goal.

That made it look as if the contest was to be an easy one for Alex Irvin's men, but St. Paul got started shortly thereafter and Des Jardins, their star forward, banged his team's first soore into the net nearly twelve minutes after the first period had opened.

Less than two minutes later, Ingram tied the score when he dribbled down the right wing and shot for the goal from a difficult angle. The puck landed squarely in the middle of the net and it appeared as if Goaltender Anderson had failed to see it from the time it left the shooter's stick. There was some argument by the goalie and other St. Louis men, who claimed the puck had gone through the netting, but this view was overruled by the goal judge and the referee.

Billy Hill again put St. Louis ahead by one goal when he scored his first shot shortly after the opening of the second period and the locals protected this margin until the session closed.

Scoring Chances Missed.

St. Louis had other opportunities to score but Goaltender Stark was too good. He kicked several attempts away with his skates, caught others with his gloves and still others on his shin guards. Cameron, for instance, had a clear shot at the net but he had to hurry a bit and his effort was high and wide.

The St. Louis goalie was no less effective in defending his net, turning aside effort after effort. Anderson has no end of courage and never fails to throw himself head foremost on the ice when he thinks such an act will prevent a score by the opposition.

Soon after the opening of the final round, Breen tied the count at three all by scoring after Anderson had been pulled away from the net in clearing a previous shot.

A Five-Man Defense.

St. Paul then began to use a five-man defense and when Seaborn got control of the puck, he had clear sailing for a straight shot. Goaltender Stark threw his stick at the puck and cleared it, but the goal was awarded for this illegal act and St. Louis was ahead, five to three.

Still fighting, St. Paul threw disregarded all caution evidently figured that it would be just as well to lose, 10 to 3 as 5 to 3, or to take a chance on tying it up.

For the next few minutes, play was so fast and furious that it was extremely difficult to follow. The St. Paul men are beautiful skaters and they flew around the ice.

Their efforts were fruitful, for in two minutes they had scored the necessary two goals to tie it up at five all. But Cameron's goal followed immediately thereafter and then the final bell, which sent the spectators home hoarse but still talking to themselves about the exciting match.

St. Paul will pjlay here again Monday night, after which the St. Louis team takes to the road.

Cyl Acaster, the new forward obtained by Coach Irvin did not get into last night's game, for it developed that he was slightly injured before coming here and Irvin didn't want to take any chances with him.

Capt. Jim Seaborn did not play as much as usual, for he is suffering from a cold and took things a bit easy.

St. Paul wears red and white uniforms, the blouses being starling red and white checks. There are several excellent players on the St. Paul team and the club seems vastly superior to the Minneapolis team.

Des Jardins is a tricky forward, a wonderful skater and is an excellent shot.

Speaking of carrying coals to Newcastle, President Coolidge took his cook along when he went to Waynesboro, Va., for Thanksgiving dinner.

WE greet you, Mr. President,
Come in, hang up your hat;
Although you're not a resident
You're not to blame for that.
While the degree of F. F. V.
To you has been denied,
We're proud to meet you, Mr. C.,
But leave your cook outside.

The culinary art of Chloe
Leaves naught to be desired;
In short it always seems as though

So at the turkey and the pie,
You'll need no second look
To understand the reason why

The turkey stuffed with dressing rich,
A noble bird in sooth;
You'll find it quite the best in which
You ever sank a tooth.
For in the culinary art
We've always stood alone;
So let your fancy chef depart—
Virginia cooks her own!

ST. LOUIS U. TO LOSE ONLY FOUR FOOTBALL STARS

By Gerald Holland

The renewal of Heartly Anderson's contract as head football coach at St. Louis University will be discussed at a meeting of the athletic board to be held late next week, it became known at the Billiken gymnasium yesterday. The date of the meeting is indefinite, since several members of the board are out of the city at present.

Those in touch with St. Louis University athletics are confident that Anderson will be retained next season because of the general satisfaction over the improvement of the Billiken eleven this season. The team finished the season with a record of four victories, four defeats and one tie game, but in only one contest, the 38-0 victory of the Detroit Titans, was it really outclassed.

St. Louis, however, made no progress financially and the 1928 schedule failed to net the Billikens a profit. Anderson stated recently that an attempt would be made to book several out-of-town games for next season with stronger teams. That policy would protect the Billikens against losses and give them an opportunity to build up interest by good showings against recognized elevens.

In view of the consistent improvement in the Billiken football team this season, there appears to be every reason to expect a stronger eleven next year. Anderson was handicapped this year by a lack of reserve material, but all but four members of the 1928 varsity will be available in 1929 and a large freshman squad will supply good backfield talent and much-needed weight in the line.

Entire Basketball Team of Last Season Is Back.

The St. Louis U. basketball team will open its season next Saturday night at the Billiken gymnasium in a game with Southern Illinois Normal. The squad, now at its full strength through the addition of players from the football team, will be sent through a week of strenuous practice by Ray Dahman, former Notre Dame star, who is the new coach.

A small squad has been working out for a month and Dahman will draw his starting lineup for Saturday's game from that group. Last year's varsity is intact and will be reinforced by the members of the freshman quintet, which won the Municipal League championship last year.

After meeting Southern Illinois, the Billikens will oppose Drake and Grinnell on the first of two road campaigns on Dec. 12 and 13.

NIEHOFF RETIRES AS ATLANTA MANAGER

ATLANTA, Dec. 1.—Bert Niehoff, for five years pilot of the Atlanta Crackers in the Southern Association, announced late today that he would not be with the local club when it starts its 1929 pennant chase.

Niehoff's announcement merely said: "I have severed my connections with th eAtlanta baseball club."

BLACK HAWKS ARE TOO CLEVER FOR PITTSBURG TEAM

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 1.—The Chicago Blackhawks won their first National Hockey League game here tonight at the expense of Benny Leonard's Pirates by a 3-2 score. Outplayed in every department of the game, the locals staged a belated rally in the final stanza which fell one short of knotting the count.

The Pirate defense awry. Time and again the Blackhawk skaters got by the final brace of defense men to have open shots at the goal. The game was fast and at times exceedingly rough. Penalties were few, however, the officials contending themselves with the more flagrant violations.

In the final period the Leonard colors came close to flying from the top of the mast, but one goal, practically a gift, and scored by Arbour, gave Chicago the edge.

Team Plays Under Protest and Loses.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 1. — The New York Americans suffered their first defeat of the National Hockey League season tonight when they were trounced by the Toronto Maple Leafs, 3 to 0.

The game was played under protest by the New York club, Manager Tommy Gorman claiming lack of ice markings defining the playing areas. Without the services of a regular goalie, the Americans went down fighting. Novie Hines, recruited from the center position, donned the pads and took over the net-minding job.

Freshmen Are Ready to Join Bears' Varsity

By Jerry Bernoudy.

Dr. Al Sharpe, athletic director at Washington University, departed for the east yesterday morning to finish out his term as director at the Ithaca School of Physical Education which does not expire until September, 1929. In his absence, Dr. Frank Ewerhardt will assume the duties of athletic director at the hilltop institution. Owing to his previous and conflicting contract at Ithaca it was impossible for Dr. Sharpe to take over active control at Washington for the entire scholastic year of 1928-29, but it was stated at the gymnasium yesterday that following his return to St. Louis next fall he would devote full time to his job at the local university.

Dr. Sharpe attended a meeting of the athletic council Friday night at which it was decided to award 21 letters to this season's football squad. The athletes to receive the "W's" include Lee Scheib, George Coover, Paul Paris, Harvey Jablonsky, Jerry Hoffman, Cecil Drake, Ralph Kurz, John Duncan, Theis Lohrding, Theodore Whittler, Charles Glazer, Scott Hornsby, Rolla Stocke, Clarence Butz, Clarence Ax, Richard Rawdon, Russel Bollinger, Russel Doerner, Robert Berlinger and Carl Bickel, and in addition Student Manager Isadore Shapiro. Elwood Hamsher and Frank Bush were appointed managers for next season at the meeting.

1929 Outlook Gloomy.

Graduation of five regulars and the possible ineligibility of two more players is going to cause next season's Bear eleven to present right side of the Bruins' forward wall including Kurz, end; Drake, tackle, and Hoffman, guard, played their final game against the Billikens on Thanksgiving Day, and the adequate replacement of these men will be one of the gravest problems confronting Dr. Sharpe and Gale Bullman next year.

Freshmen Promising.

This freshmen squad during the past season, although characterized by a large number of star backfield candidates, also had a number of athletes who were given favorable mention by Mike Walker as potential varsity linemen. Among these players, V. G. Anderson, a center, Louis Heinrichs, a guard, Alfred Lane and D. W. Whitehouse, ends, and Ike Vandover and John Litchenfeld, tackles, were praised particularly by the freshmen mentor.

It is in the backfield, however, that this year's freshmen squad is expected to add the most strength to the 1929 Bear eleven, and to anyone that viewed the locals in action this season, this is the department of the team most in need of reinforcement. Bickel, Whittier, and possibly Duncan played their last game for the Bears this year, but with five backs on the freshmen team coming up from the yearling team that displayed outstanding ability, it is to be expected that next year's backfield will carry considerable more offensive ability than was displayed by the Bruins this year.

The big difficulty out at Washington in the past, however, has been the inability of such men to retain their eligibility, and as Walker remarked yesterday, "it is that feature which we are most intimately concerned with at the present time."

Wray's COLUMN

Shattered Idols.

"TUFFY" GRIFFITHS and Jimmy McLarnin, two fighters who had won the confidence and enthusiastic support or ring fans, were snuffed out via the knockout, Friday, to the intense surprise of the fight world.

Both men in their respective classes had seemed to be zooming up toward the rarified atmosphere of championship regions. Yet men of little note knocked out both. McLarnin succumbed to Ray Miller and Griffiths to James J. Braddock.

Neither of the winners has dented the record book very heavily. Miller is not mentioned in either of the major boxing guides, of the present year, while Braddock figures in one.

It all sums up to the fact that, in the fight game, unknowns are no respecters of chins; it therefore behooves even champions to avoid unnecessary exposure of the same to an opponent of any class.

A Real "Chip" Shot.

HISTORY is dotted with mistakes of this kind. An outstanding instance was in the case of the middleweight champion George Chip. George was quite a lad, as fighters go. He could hit hard and was game.

But when he stepped into the ring one day to meet a supposed "pushover" in one Al McCoy, he advanced in high-hat fashion, with an indulgent smile and an exposed "button."

Thirty seconds later they picked up George from the canvas a former champion, while the gang hailed the new king, Al McCoy.

Chip had forgotten to keep his chin out of the way.

The Case of Ketchel.

A MUCH more interesting case and one more excusable, from the victim's standpoint was presented in the first fight between Ketchel and Billy Papke, for the same crown—the middleweight championship.

Ketchel stepped out to the middle of the ring, head up, hand out, and eyes smiling—forgetting that the handshake had been dispensed with!

Reeling and dazed, he rose from the knockdown blow that Papke had swung over his outstretched arm. He clinched to save himself for the round. But the effect of the punch did not wear out and he went down for the count in the eleventh.

It behooves the great, the near great and those who would be great, to tuck their chins on their chests at all times and put little faith in an opponent's weakness.

You never can tell from what point the lightning may strike.

About Mr. Braddock.

JIM BRADDOCK is a figure worth investigating. Even though "Tuffy" Griffith, may have been incautious in getting himself floored for the first time in his life and defeated for the first time in 55 fights (his entire career), a knocker-out always is worth investigating.

Braddock first attracted national attention when he was sentenced to help train Tom Heeney. Jim will be 23 years old next Thursday and this is his third year as a fighter. He has fought 34 bouts, knocked out seventeen opponents.

These knockouts are interesting. They resemble Dempsey's string of early victories. It required Jim a total of only 25 rounds to finish the list of 17 kayo victims—which is finding the target with speed and accuracy.

None of the bouts was won from an opponent of great promise, with the possible exception of that with Griffiths. This may be accounted for by the fact that his fame did not warrant pitting him against a foe of real drawing power.

The fact remains that Braddock has fisted his foes in a manner that will earn his considerable attention and a lot of money, in the near future. The world has been waiting for a man who could match Dempsey in mightiness of wallop. Some day they will find one. It may be Braddock. But his physical development does not indicate it, photographs show.

Reigh Count Departs.

NOT many American horse owners in the past have dared to risk the prestige of their equine prides by sending them to England to compete against British contenders.

History records only a very few horses sent abroad and almost no successes, achieved by American owners, except in the steeplechases.

But John Hertz, owner of Reigh Count, the year's 3-year-old standout, is not afraid to try his fortune. The offspring of Sun Reigh-Contessa was shipped yesterday and is entered in eight stakes abroad, including the two and one-half mile Ascot Cup, one of the greatest of all endurance tests.

The odds are against the American racer. The vastly different climate may not suit him. Change of water and food, of course, probably can be adjusted during the long preliminary stay.

One thing Reigh Count will have to overcome is racing to the RIGHT, instead of to the LEFT. Horses that have become accustomed to "propping" on left-handed turns have frequently been thrown out of their tride when attempting the reverse turns.

The weights may work against Reigh Count and the chances of his coming through with performances that rank with those of America are rather worse than even. The turf courses also may militate against him.

Reigh Count a "Stayer."

HOWEVER, a horse of this one's caliber and consistency can hardly fail to show to advantage, even under adverse conditions. He has shown class at every distance from one-half mile to two miles. He can go on the wet or dry track and he can carry weight fairly well. As a 3-year-old he won every race but one, and subsequently he defeated the winner of his only losing race. Seven times he flashed first, beating horses of his own age and older, giving weight practically to all.

The Belmont Gold Cup at two miles, the Lawrence Realization Stakes at one and five-eighths miles and the Saratoga Cup at one and three-quarters miles are examples of his liking for a long distance race.

Reigh Count has won $168,000 and he will add both glory and money to his record during his stay abroad. As stated, however, the odds are against him.

Perhaps the unluckiest adventure of any American horse across the water was that of the great 3-year-old Colin, sire of Our Watch and other good ones. Colin was unbeaten in his entire racing career, but in training for his British invasion he was injured and ruined for life as a racer.

SAILORS WIN AND BREAK HOLD OF MARINES ON PRESIDENT'S CUP

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Quantico Marines' three-year hold on the President's Cup, emblematic of the championship among service football teams, was broken today by a sturdy eleven from the Newport (R. I.) Naval Training Station, which vanquished the Leathernecks, 10 to 0, before a yelling crowd of enlisted men, officers and civilian officials of the Government.

The game marked the first defeat for the Marine eleven in 19 starts. The victors, with Ensign Tom Hamilton, former Annapolis star, as their major weapon, were a little more crafty and wide awake than the Marines.

Among those looking on from the sidelines were Secretary of the Navy Wilbur and Major-General John A. Le Jeune, the Marine Corps commandant.

Longworth Presents Cup.

Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House, presented the cup to J. G. Ponchak, quarterback-captain of the winning squad. Other dignitaries present included Senator Hale of Maine and Representative Britten of Illinois, chairmen of the Senate and House Naval Committee; former Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby and Representative French, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of navy appropriations.

The scores were registered early in the first and second periods and thereafter the Navy resisted the Devil Dogs' attacks by adding an alert defense to the Marines' costly errors. Levey, shifty Marine quarterback, contributed frequent bursts of brilliant running but passes from Shapley and Woods, Marine backs, frequently were intercepted by the watchful Sailors.

Sailors Score Early.

Two plays with Hamilton and Halfback Edwards carrying the ball around the Marine wingmen, brought the play from the Navy 30-yard line to the Marines' 18-yard mark, before the game was five minutes old. Edwards then took a lateral pass from Hamilton and swung around left end to a first down on the five-yard line. Three plays later Edwards went over for a touchdown on a reverse play. Hamilton kicked the extra point.

Forward passes proved disastrous to the Marines in the second quarter. One from Shapley was intercepted by Conlon, Navy tackle, and Hamilton shortly after the kick-off, tossed one to Penczenick, Navy end, which was good for 35 yards. The Marines held and punted out of immediate danger but a 15-yard Marine penalty placed the ball on the 20-yard line and Hamilton booted a drop kick.

Score by periods:

Navy scoring—Touchdown, Edwards. Point after touchdown, Hamilton. Field goal, Hamilton.

LILLIAN T. CAPTURES CARROLLTON PURSE AT NEW ORLEANS

GRAND PRINCE IS SECOND BY HALF A LENGTH; MARCONI WINS

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 1.—Pueblo Stable's Lillian T. sprung a surprise here today when she led home a good field of sprinters in the Carrollton Purse, a five and one-half furlong dash for 2-year-olds at Jefferson Park. She was ridden by J. Leyland and paid $23.20 for a $2 ticket. Grand Prince was second and Minotaur, odds-on favorite, third.

The start was poor, several of the horses not being ready. Lillian T. and Captain J. S. were away on their toes and they made the best of it. Minotaur was not ready and was lengths back. Lillian T. and Captain J. S. cut out a fast pace but Captain J. S. was the first to crack. Lillian T. then took the lead and held on to win by half a length from Grand Prince. Minotaur was third, three lengths back.

Goldblatt Saddles Winner.

Mose Goldblatt scored his first success of the season when Marconi won the fifth event. Genuine was second and Duelist third. Genuine quickly ran into the lead but in the final furlong Marconi came fast and won in a drive by a head. Genuine took the place by three lengths.

C. H. Knelbelkamp's silks were first in the sixth race, when McGonigle landed the event in a drive by a head from Blind Hills, with Baritone third. It was a stretch duel between McGonigle and Blind Hills with the former gaining the purse by a head.

Favorites Win.

The Jones Stock Farm's Senator Seth managed to gain the purse in the opening event, a scramble over the six furlongs. He was clear of all interference and won easily. Strongheart landed second place with Old Bill third. There was a lot of crowding in this race in which Strongheart and Aviator were both badly interfered with and their winning chances were ruined. Senator Seth broke fast and making all the pace, won by a length and a half. Strongheart gained the place by three lengths.

Phil Reuter's Gotham, odds-on favorite, had no contention in the second and he won in a common gallop. He broke slow but Shropshire who had the mount, worked the colt up on the outside, took the lead at the far turn and from there to the finish he drew away to win by five lengths. Dante came along in the stretch and took the place by a length and a half from Hesitation.

Mrs. J. H. Busch's Golden Mac, paying $20.60 for a $2 ticket was winner of the third race in a driving finish. Eleven Sixty landed second money with William Penn third. The latter was a hot favorite and after showing good speed for a mile, ran out on the stretch turn and was beaten by several lengths. Golden Mac came through on the inside in the final quarter, closed fast and won by half a length. Eleven Sixty took the place by three lengths from

REIGH COUNT IS NOMINATED FOR 8 RACES ABROAD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Reigh Count, winner of the Kentucky Derby and acknowledged king of American 3-year-olds, was aboard the steamship Minnewaska today bound for England.

Mrs. John D. Hertz of Chicago, owner of Reigh Count, has nominated the great son of Sun Reigh and Contessina for eight of the greatest of English turf classics next spring and summer. He will be pointed in particular for the Ascot Gold Cup race at two miles and a half. Insurance totaling $250,000 has been taken out on the thoroughbred, which met only one defeat during the past season. Petee Wrack beat the Hertz colt in the Travers Midsummer Derby, but Reigh Count avenged that setback in the Lawrence Realization, which he won while Petee Wrack was finishing fifth.

In England, Reigh Count will be taken to Newmarket, where he will be under the care temporarily of Ted Leader, English horseman. He will be ridden in England by Chick Lang, who had the mount on him in all his American starts this year.

KAISER TRAINS LIGHTLY TO SAVE STRENGTH FOR BOUT WITH WILSON

LOCAL FIGHTER SAYS STRENUOUS WORK PUTS HIM IN RING STALE

By Dent McSkimming

The return meeting of John "Peewee" Kaiser and Claude Wilson, the Birmingham flash, in a 10-round bout at the Coliseum Monday night calls attention to the peculiarly erratic work of the local boy. Wilson outpointed Kaiser here last spring.

Any fan, or student of boxing, who saw Kaiser make mince meat of Milton Manguna several weeks ago will tell you that the St. Louis boy is capable of beating any featherweight in the world. But if this same observer chanced to see the same Kaiser take a mauling from Claude Wilson or Denver Kid, he would necessarily have to revise his opinion. At least, he would qualify it.

Because this very striking difference in workmanship has become a characteristic of Kaiser's work, the writer asked him recently for an explanation.

Champion or Dub.

"To be truthful," said John, as he removed a big black cigar from his mouth, "I'm as likely to beat the world's champion as I am to take a beating from a dub. It all depends upon how I feel when the bout starts."

"Give us further details. What do you mean?" he was asked.

"I mean that if I feel strong when I enter the ring, I know I'm going to lick the other fellow, and I don't care who he is. But there have been times when I have crawled through the ropes as weak as a kitten, scarcely able to lift my arms.

"Then, if the other fellow is any good at all he has no trouble making me look bad. That's the way I felt when I fought Denver Kid, and also when I met Claude Wilson." After making a miserable showing against the Denver Kid for nine rounds, Kaiser summoned all his strength and whipped a right to the Kid's chin, knocking him stiff. He hit Wilson with the same kind of punch in the last round but Claude weathered it, with his eyes floating in the back of his head.

"Why is it that you feel strong for one bout and weak at another time?" Kaiser was asked.

"I have concluded it must be training and diet. I know I was stale and overtrained when I met Wilson. On the other hand, I did very little training when I met Manguna. It seems that too much work in the gymnasium burns me up."

Lighter Training Henceforth.

Kaiser, according to his manager, Jack Callahan, will give stricter attention to the amount and severity of training in the future. It is true that he has worked very lightly for his present engagement. The weight agreement is 128 pounds, giving Johnny plenty of latitude, for he has been fighting at 126.

The Kaiser-Wilson bout will be only one of three featherweight features. Unusual interest attaches to the appearance here of Willy Michel, the Belgian champion who is making his American debut against Harry Forbes of Chicago. Michel has an impressive record covering a three-year period during which he fought the outstanding 126-pounders in Belgium, France and England. He lost only two bouts during that period. Gus Wilson, former trainer of Georges Carpentier and Jack Dempsey, is managing Michel. His opponent, Forbes, has met most of the leading featherweights with fair success.

Kansas City vs. Springfield.

Joe Rivers, a clever son of Old Mexico, who makes Kansas City his home, will probably have his hands full in trying to subdue Dugan Layton of Springfield, Mo. Layton won from Milton Manguna two weeks ago, displaying a good two-fisted attack and a fair defense.

The card will be presented under the auspices of the Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion. Jack Tippett is the matchmaker.

Referee—Oscar Mossman. Linesmen—Pat Kelley and Len Zarschel. Time of halves—35 minutes. First game starts at 3:30 o'clock.

The undefeated Madison soccer team, leading the St. Louis professional league race by one-half game, will oppose their most serious rivals, the Wellstons, in the second game of the weekly double-header at Sportsman's Park this afternoon.

It is generally believed that the Madisons' sensational spurt has been made possible by the dry fields which have prevailed all season. Their forwards, excepting Grenon, are comparatively slight in stature, the center halfback, Eddie Burke, is probably the smallest man in the league, and both fullbacks are under the average size of backs. This lack of weight is accompanied, naturally, by an unusual degree of speed. Now, light men, however fast, are usually handicapped on a muddy field. However, the method of play employed by the Madisons and the ability of the individuals composing the team provide assurance enough that the Clark brothers' team will play good football, no matter what the condition of the field.

Whether the Wellstons will be able to displace the Madisons as the league leaders depends largely on whether Tate Brady's team is functioning at its best. When the Wellstons are hitting on all cylinders it takes more than an ordinary football team to prevent them from scoring four goals.

The Ben Millers, out in search of their first victory of the season, will oppose the Tablers in the opening game.

DAVISCOURT AND LUTZE TO MEET ON MAT DEC. 12

Nick Lutze, with four local mat victories to his credit, has been paired with Dick Daviscourt, California heavyweight, for a one-fall bout on the Coliseum wrestling card for Dec. 11. The match was announced last night by Promoter Tom Packs.

Lutze's most impressive local triumph came last Monday night when he defeated Jack Washburn, a California mat veteran, who outweighed him 18 pounds. In other engagements here in the last year Lutze won over John Maxos, Scotty McDougal and George Hills, while he held Roy Steele to a draw in a 45-minute tussle.

Daviscourt was beaten by Dick Shikat, German heavyweight champion, in the feature attraction of last week's show. The Californian is seeking a return match with Shikat, according to Packs.

Packs plans to schedule a return bout between Paul Harper of Texas, and Roy Steele, the Seattle headlock artist, as the main event of his coming card, placing Daviscourt and Lutze in the semi-windup position. Harper was awarded a decision over Steele last Monday night when Referee Voepel disqualified the Seattle grappler for employing a "strangle" hold to pin his opponent.

Steele has agreed to refrain from using illegal grips in the return encounter with the Texan.

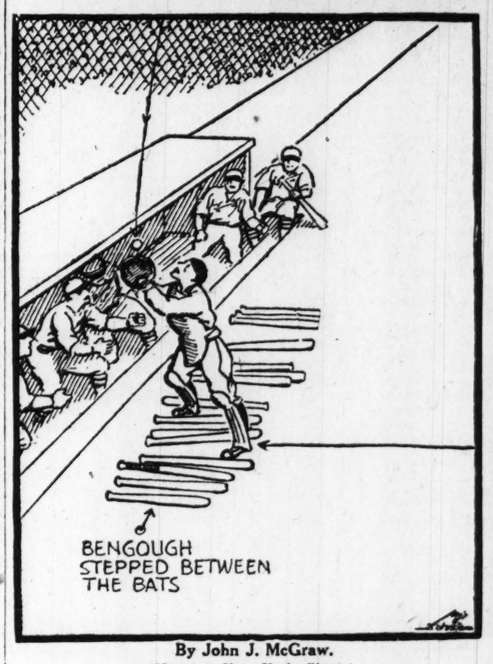
Bengough's Catch of Foul Star Play of Third Game Of Series, McGraw Says



By John J. McGraw.
(Manager New York Giants)
ARTICLE IV.

(Copyright, 1928.)

THE catching in this last world series was of a very high trying order on both teams. Bengough proved himself a far better backstop than many baseball people had imagined. Though slow on bases, he was quick as a cat around the plate and can get the jump on a foul fly as snappily as any man in the game.

In the very first game Bengough convinced the fans that Huggins had picked the right man for the catching job by making several brilliant plays. One of these, the catch of a foul fly by Taylor Douthit in the third inning, was easily one of the great plays of the series. It was great for its gameness as well as its accuracy.

The play was not what they call crucial because it was the third out and the bases were empty. Still, many bad situations develop after two are out.

When Douthit fouled the ball, it started toward the St. Louis dugout. In a flash Bengough threw off his mask and in one glance figured the play. The Cardinals had their bats laid out in front of their bench and Bengough knew the ball would fall among them. Many catchers would have given up a play like that on account of the danger and also because two were out. That didn't stop Benny, though. Calculating the distance and the location of the bats as he ran, he almost got under the ball and then by stepping in between two of the bats reached out and grabbed the ball. His footwork was so clean that he didn't even stumble, though several players had reached out to catch him.

It would be hard to imagine a more perfectly executed play and it should go down in history as an outstanding one of the series.

GEORGIA CAPTAIN IS DOWN WITH THE FLU

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 1.—Glenn Lautzenhizer, tackle and co-captain of the University of Georgia football team, has been taken to the University infirmary, it was announced today, suffering from an attack of influenza. He was stricken soon after he arrived here with the team yesterday from Birmingham after the game with Alabama.

ANGELICAS TO MEET SCHULZES IN MUNY GAME

Andy Frederick's theory that veteran soccer players who have, in some cases, passed the peak of their usefulness are more effective than untried but talented youngsters may be proved or disproved today when his Angelica team opposes the Schulz club in the feature game of the Fairground group of the Municipal Soccer League. In past seasons, Andy's teams have been dominated by youngsters, but when he lost hisg stars, Jim Crowhen he lost his stars, Jim Crotum and Fullback Fink, all taken by the professional teams, he was forced to fill his depleted ranks with discarded veterans. As a result, the Angelicas are not enjoying the unbroken string of successes which marked their play of the past three years. The Schulz team is leading the Group Two race and the Angelicas are second, half a game behind.

Although many interesting games are scheduled today, the league leadership in the various groups is not at stake. At Sherman Park the leading Finans are expected to overcome the Y. M. H. A. team, and the Kolsters should score over the Squadrons.

The schedule:

Fairground Park No. 2—Russell vs. Shreve Avenue Business men, 2; Angelica vs. Schulze, 3:30. Referee, Thomas Lyster.

Fairground Park No. 3 and No. 4, at Fairground No. 3—Pals vs. A. C. Bauer, 2; Hartman vs. Palermo, 3:30. Referee, L. Robbins. At Fairground No. 4—Salisbury Street Business Men vs. Benjamin Petty, 2. Referee, H. Donovan.

Sherman Park—Finan vs Y. M. H. A., 2; Squadrons vs. Kolsters, 3:30. Referee, V. Walsh.

Carondelet Park No. 1—South Side vs. German Sport Club No. 1, 2; St. Thomas of Aquin vs. La Sociedad Espanola, 3:30. Referee, W. Brady.

Carondelet Park No. 2—Trumbull vs. German Sport Club No. 2, 2; Garrett vs. Benton Park Recreation, 3:30. Referee, O. Miller.

Forest Park—Union Electric vs. Cook A. C., 2; Academy A. C., vs. Missouri Pacific Lines, 3:30. Referee, J. Cradock.

Nerves in Golf.

OF all ways in which nerves are manifested in golf the strongest malady is that which seems to paralyze the player to an extent which makes it virtually impossible for him to start his swing. Whatever the sensation is—fear, uncertainty, or lack of determination—once a man is caught in its grip he appears to be hypnotized upon sight of the ball.

The affliction is somewhat akin to what is known to the hunter or trapshooter as "flinching." I have had the trouble many times when handling a shotgun, especially when attempting to break clay targets, or when drawing a bead upon a target with an army rifle at 600 yards. Probably the shotgun is a more apt illustration, for in my inexpert hands, a rifle appears to wave across a distant target so that I must hit the mark as its goes by. There are really so few opportunities for me to pull, that a failing of indecision is not to be wondered at.

But when the clay "bird" comes sailing out, and you are reasonably sure that your load will cover it, and you try to be just a little surer, and the targets keeps moving away, until you finally let fly in desperation and miss it by yards; that is "flinching." Hesitating to pull when you think you are on it, it then becomes impossible to fire at all.

Players Become "Frozen."

SO in golf, often on a simple shot, the player waggles his club and looks at the hole and the ball, until all his powers are required to move his club backward. Cyril Walker, after he had won the open championship in 1924, fell a victim to this strange hypnosis. No one ever tried harder than Cyril to speed up his play for he realized that his slowness, in addition to affecting his own game, was a bother to his partners and opponents. "But," he confessed, "even when playing an apparently simple chip, I get to waggling and thinking about the shot, until I become absolutely frozen."

Sandy Herd, the famous Scot, has had the trouble all his life. It is said that Sandy has been known to employ as many as 41 waggles preliminary to an ordinary iron shot. I watched him on one occasion, playing the second shot on the first hole at St. Andrews when he must have used 15.

Apart from other considerations an affliction or habit of that kind ruins the shot, for by the time the waggling is over, tense nerves are frayed and every muscle is as taut as a steel band. There is no place left for freedom and rhythm. After one or two such experiences the player begins "fighting" the ball, approaching it in anything but a complacent frame of mind.

Eliminate Waste Energy.

MERELY to play quickly in order that the agony may be speedily ended will do little good. Indeed, such procedure is probably worse than to waggle indefinitely. But a player should form a habit of playing promptly, eliminating all waste energy and unnecessary strain. There is always more ease, grace, and rhythm in the swing that begins with one or two leisurely regulated waggles, and proceeds without hurry and without hesitation. In this respect George Duncan is very pleasing to watch. There is no fussing with the feet, no twisting of the clubface, no uncertainty about the position of the hands. George falls immediately in position over the ball, then with one look and one waggle, he starts it on the way. He has thought out the shot before he addresses the ball. After that there is nothing left but to hit it. He has no time for anxiety.

Betrothals of Marie Reine Fusz And Sister, Elizabeth, Announced

News of Prospective Double Wedding Told at Bridge Luncheon—Joseph Cabell Breckinridge of Lexington, Ky., and John Brownrigg of St. Louis to Be Bridegrooms.

THE most interesting and surprising news of the week in the younger set was disclosed yesterday afternoon when the betrothals of Miss Marie Reine Fusz and Joseph Cabell Breckinridge of Lexington, Ky., and that of her sister Miss Elizabeth Fusz, and John Brownrigg of St. Louis, were announced at a bridge luncheon which Miss Marie Reine Fusz gave at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Fusz, 6925 Delmar boulevard, in honor of her sister, an attractive debutante of the season. The romances will culminate in a double wedding late in the winter.

The news of Miss Marie Reine Fusz's engagement to Mr. Breckinridge was told in imitation tabloid newspapers, in which the announcement was printed in startling headlines and illustrated by pictures of the prospective bride and bridegroom. They were distributed by Josephine and Louis Fusz, small sister and brother of the prospective brides, impersonating newsboys. Miss Fusz is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Fusz and was graduated at Trinity College, Washington, D. C. She attended Bryn Mawr College, and was presented to society at a tea last season, which her mother gave at their home. She served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball during her debut year and has spent the last two summers in European travel.

Mr. Breckinridge is the son of Mrs. Ethelbert Ludlow Dudley Breckinridge of Lexington, Ky., and the late Capt. Breskinridge. Mrs. Breckinridge will be remembered as Miss Genevieve Mattingly, a belle of Washington, D. C. The prospective bridegroom attended Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., and is associated with the Lexington Herald of which his uncle, Desha Breckinridge, is owner and publisher.

The second announcement of the afternoon came at the end of the luncheon, when the guests gathered in the dining room, where coffee was served. The centerpiece was composed of 24 corsage bouquets of violets, roses and pom poms, concealing heart-shaped cards upon which were written the names of Miss Elizabeth Fusz and Mr. Brownrigg. Miss Fusz, the first bud to make he bow this season, incidentally is the first debutante to announce her engagement. She was introduced to society at a tea which he mother gave at their home early in October, and she was a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball. She attended the Convent of the Sacred Heart and finished her education at Man-

Nancy Skinker Weds Lieut. J. B. Howat

AN informal wedding took place at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when Miss Nancy Selden Skinker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rives Skinker of Denver, Colo., became the bride of Lieut. James Bowcott Howat, Sixth Infantry, U. S. A., at Graham Memorial Chapel at Washington University, the Rev. Dr. Carl Block officiating. The national colors were suggested in the use of white chrysanthemums and red roses against a drapery of blue velvet, to adorn the chapel. Relatives and close friends of the bride and bridegroom were present.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an afternoon costume of

Debut Ball for Medora Steedman By Candle-Light

CANDLE light, its soft gleam promising enchantment to all who should gather beneath its rays, beckoned society to the St. Louis Country Club Thanksgiving eve for the much heralded debut ball of Miss Medora Steedman, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Fox Steedman, 34 Westmoreland place, at which their niece, Miss Almira Steedman, herself a feted bud of the winter, shared the honors.

As one entered the driveway of the clubhouse and paused under the porte cochere, the entire building seemed to be glowing with tiny lights, made iridescent by the mist on the window panes. Upon entering, the glow became brighter until the rooms seemed to blaze into a candle lighted fairy land.

As one became accustomed to the lighting effect he discovered dozens of giant candelabra with inverted triangular tops each holding perhaps 20 tall white tapers, which lined the wall which were festooned with gilded smilax.

As the guests paused on their way to the lounge to greet their host and hostess and the guests of honor, and gazed for a moment down the length of the dining rooms, they saw candle-lighted dining tables. Here the white tapers were poised delicately upon marble like arched bases, each holding three, and between their gilded baskets in lieu of horns of plenty, overflowing with crimson pomegranates, golden kumquats and purple grapes.

The orchestra was seated in a raised recess

Three engagement announcements of much interest socially were the high lights on the society news of last week.

Notes sent to her friends carried news of the engagement of Miss Anne Louise Hunt, daughter of Mrs. Wilson P. Hunt of Normandy, and John Mason Frier, son of Col. James H. Frier, U. S. A., retired, of the Big Bend road.

Miss Hunt attended the Sacred Heart Convent and Miss Eoff's School, and made her

Two Royal Parties Visit New York

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—New York entertained two royal parties here this week. Monday, Count Folke Bernadotte and the party attending him at his wedding yesterday to Miss Estelle Manville, arrived. Then came the royal party headed by the Infante Alfonso, cousin of the King of Spain, and his wife, Infanta Donna Beatrix.

The Benefit performance of "La Traviata" at the Metropolitan Opera House Tuesday evening found society dividing its attention between Lucrezia Bori's "Violetta" and the Spanish royal party. During intermissions a battery of opera glasses was turned on Box No. 1 where the Infante and Infanta sat as guests of Brigadier-General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. The Infanta, a sister of Queen Marie of Rumania, wore a gown of silver sequins made with a close-fitting bodice and flared skirt, and completed her costume with a tiara of diamonds and a chinchilla wrap.

Mrs Graham Fair Vanderbilt, chairman of the benefit, which was given to aid the fund for founding a university city in Madrid, Spain, occupied a box near by. Mrs. Vanderbilt, attired in flesh-colored sequins and a wrap of rose metal cloth, had as her guests Prince de Ligne, Belgian Ambassador to the United States, and the Princess de Ligne. After the performance she entertained at a reception and supper at her home in honor of the Infante and Infanta.

The party which Conde Nast gave at his home in honor of Miss Charlotte Brown, fiancee of his son, Coudert, was the next festivity visited by the royal parties. The dance was held in the conservatory hung with Harding blue lace and showered with silver smilax. Miniature blue lights produced a tropical sky effect over sprays of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums and growing orange trees. Tables for the royal parties were decorated in the Swedish and the Spanish national colors.

The wedding of Miss Estelle Manville to Count Folke Bernadotte drew royalty to Pleasantville, N. Y., this afternoon for one of the most brilliant ceremonies of the season. A bridal veil of Brussels lace, the gift of Queen Sophia of Sweden to the groom's family, was worn by Miss Manville. The veil was held by a coronet of silver and crystals recently made by the Swedish court jeweler. Three wedding marches—Lohengrin's, Mendelssohn's and Soderman's Swedish wedding march—marked the ceremonies, which were followed by a reception at the country estate of the bride's father.

Debutantes, thrust into the background by entertainments for visiting celebrities, came into their own Thanksgiving day when many distinctive parties were given in their honor. Miss Jane Shonnard was introduced to society by her mother that evening at a supper dance where hundreds of yellow chrysanthemums formed the decoration scheme against a forest of oak trees. A Thanksgiving supper completed the festivities.

Miss Grace Ruggles Lane, who made her bow at a reception given by her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Meyerw Johnson at the Colony Club, is among the season's debutantes who have departed from the traditional white coming-out frock. Miss Lane made her debut in a shell pink velvet gown with a seed pearl bodice. She carried pink and yellow roses.

A bear owned by Patrica Ziegfeld, a Pekinese dog belonging to Fannie Hurst, and twin tiger kittens, the property of Cissie Loftus, were among entries for the popularity contest held at the Waldorf in aid of the New York Women's League for animals. Miss Ethel Barrymore, Mrs. Fritz Kreisler and Miss Eva La Gallienne were among patronesses of the show.

Betrothal of The Misses Fusz

hattanville College of the Sacred Heart, New York. Miss Fusz spent last summer in Europe with her sister.

Mr. Brownrigg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Brownrigg of 4515 Lindell boulevard and was educated at Spring Hill College, Mobile, Ala.

The spacious Fusz home was decorated in baskets and bouquets of rose and chrysanthemums against a background of greenery. The luncheon tables, each seating eight guests, were spread in white drawing room and the living room, and were adorned with butterfly roses. The place cards bore the interpretation of the handwriting of the guests done by an analyst.

The guests included Miss Isabelle Brooks Bond, Miss Mary Scudder Hallett, Miss Elizabeth Gemop, Miss Janet Lawton, Miss Isabell Kirkpatrick, Miss Betty Niles, Miss Elizabeth Burdeau, Miss Virginia Schreiner, Miss Janet Orthwein, Miss Mary Elizabeth Lumaghi, Miss Martha Dyer, Miss Janet Blanke, Mrs. Charles Coyle, Miss Lucille Bell, Mrs. Robert Endres Meyer Jr., Miss Helen Fusz, Miss Jane Walker of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Charles Huttig, Miss Virginia Brauer, Mrs. Ellis Crawford, Miss Dorothy Green, Miss Louise Rumsey, Miss Elizabeth Ferguson and Miss Grace Moulton.

Mr. Breckinridge is the guest for the week-end of his fiancee and her parents.

Spanish Royalty Visits Washington

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 31.

THE Capital had a glimpse of Spanish royalty this week in the person of the Infante Don Alfonso, cousin of the King of Spain, his wife the Infanta Dona Beatrix, and their son, the Infante Don Alvaro of Orleans.

The three came here for a few hours some days ago to be presented to the President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House. They remained for a dinner at the Spanish Embassy while they were here, the President and Mrs. Coolidge were visiting in Virginia, and the very democratic Vice President assumed the important role of dining with them at the Spanish Embassy. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Kellogg also were there, but for the most the company was made up of ranking diplomats.

The reception at the Embassy was attended by more than 150 guests, many of them diplomats. Among those who came from New York were Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt. There was a fine show of splendid evening dress and jewels, and the diplomats wore court uniforms.

Prince Adolphus of Sweden at least will take time to look at the Washington monument when he comes to the Capital within a day or two to meet the President and Mrs. Coolidge, who will entertain him at luncheon Monday. Following the dinner at the Swedish Legation, there will be a reception.

The Vice President and Mrs. Dawes had just time to take off their wraps and don evening attire before receiving the President and Mrs. Coolidge and a few other guests at dinner Tuesday night. The Scott residence leased by Mr. and Mrs. Dawes sits on a hill. There is no better or more extensive view of Washington than that from the windows

There is always a fly in the social ointment of life in the Capital, and this is the season when diplomats and their money are soon parted. One thinks of the long series of brilliant benefit balls with Ambassadors and Ministers and their wives as patrons or sponsors without ever taking into account the financial cost to these often under-paid temporary citizens. One chatelaine of the home of a Latin-American diplomat confesses to having dispensed with several really necessary servants in order to buy boxes and tickets for these events that are to benefit purely local charities. Every mail brings its bunch of tickets for balls, musicals, lectures and concerts, and even the church bazars turn in their plea for something in the way of a doll, a piece of bricabrac or some of the handiwork of the women and children of their countries. The drain is heavy and incessant, especially when one considers that pleas for help to them come also from their own countries.

The first lady of the land recently received an unexpected but nevertheless welcome addition to her collection of autographed photographs. Mrs. Coolidge has a large collection of bed spreads, ranging from the hand-knit variety and the no less intricate patch work of bygone days. It was a patchwork quilt sent to her by an 80-year-old lady from a remote section that touched Mrs. Coolidge to the point of writing a letter of thanks and autographing one of her photographs for the donor. There shortly came back a letter of thanks and a photograph of the grateful donor of the quilt, also autographed.

debut several seasons ago at a ball at the Hunt country home in Normandy. She is a descendant of the old Lucas family, which figures prominently in the social life of early St. Louis, and her wedding will take place in February in St. Ann's Church in Normandy, the gift of her great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Anne Lucas Hunt, a grand dame of the early days.

Mr. Frier is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and is at present engaged in business. His mother was a Miss Hewitt of an old Fairfield, Conn., family, and his grandfather was the late Henry Frier of Bowling Green, Mo.

A second engagement, announced Thanksgiving afternoon, was that of Miss Eleanor Filley Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Richards of 5272 Washington boulevard, and William Hugh Cunliff, son of Mrs. Charles Cunliff of 15 Windemere place. The wedding will take place this winter.

Miss Richards is a graduate of Mary Institute and the Finch School in New York. She made her debut at a reception given for her by her grandmother, Mrs. Ellen Filley Richards, a few seasons ago, and became a member of the Junior League and the former Imperial.

Mr. Cunliff attended Washington University, and left it to become a lieutenant in the aviation corps during the war. He is a member of the University Club.

On Thanksgiving night at a buffet supper given for her by Mrs. Josephine Drake Boyd of Kirkwood, announcement was made of one of last year's debutantes, Miss Virginia May Brauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Brauer of "Brauerhurst," Webster Groves, and Southwood Bell Morse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Boardman Morse, 6219 Westminster place.

Miss Brauer is a graduate of Mary Institute and Washington University. She served as a maid of honor at her debut ball last season.

Mr. Morse is a former student of the University of Pennsylvania.

William Reaney Peugnet has arrived from his home in New York to spend a three weeks' vacation with his aunts, the Misses Berthold, 4482 Lindell boulevard.

Miss Jane Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Scott Porter of the Forest Park Hotel, and Miss Irene Crouch Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Williams, will be guests of honor at a tea dance to be given at Glen Echo Country Club, Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 26, from 2 to 4 o'clock. The cards which will be sent out early this week are in the names of Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Albert D. Nortoni of 4404 Lindell boulevard. Several hundred of the school set will be invited.

The Alliance Francaise will hold its annual reunion at the home of Mrs. Oscar Johnson, 38 Portland place, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mme. Vadime Netchvolodoff will explain three Russian operas with illustrations on the piano by Mrs. Sarah Worcester. Mrs. Worcester will be assisted by two Russian musicians, Igor Geffen, cellist, and Edward Shalett, violinist.

'THUMB BOX' EXHIBITION ON VIEW TODAY FOR LAST TIME

Collection at City Museum Contains 100 Paintings by About 50 St. Louis Artists.

Today is the last Sunday for the "Thumb-box" Exhibition of small pictures by St. Louis artists at the City Art Museum. The collection of about 100 paintings, made up from the Art League's annual event and installed in gallery 31 for an advance showing, provides the opportunity to view the work of about 50 painters of this city in compact and attractive installation, and presents an idea of the variety and charm of the art produced in this city.

The general aspect of the gallery reminds one that St. Louis has the oldest art school offering a sound foundation for technique, in the middle west.

The small pictures will be taken down from the Museum walls tomorrow and will be merged with the complete Art League Exhibition opening the following Monday, Dec. 10, at the League galleries, Locust and Fourth streets.

HOW POLICEMEN HONORED BY CITY LOST THEIR LIVES

Of 96 Whose Names Are on Memorial Tablet at Headquarters 62 Were Shot, Hunting Criminals.

TWO KILLED IN 1927 TORNADO

Three Beaten to Death and Remaining 29 Met With Fatal Accidents in Line of Duty.

Classification by the Post-Dispatch of circumstances under which 96 St. Louis policemen have been killed in line of duty in the last 65 years shows 62 were shot to death in contact with criminals or persons suspected of crime; three were beaten to death; two met death in a tornado and the others were accidentally killed by automobiles, motorcycles, street cars, railroad trains, horses or live wires.

A bronze plaque honoring the members of the department who were killed in line of duty was installed last week in the new Police Headquarters Building at Twelfth street and Clark avenue.

That death lurks in the most unexpected places for policemen he disclosed in the case of two officers who were electrocuted when they came in contact with an exposed wire when telephoning from the same police patrol box on the same day in 1900. The men were John Looney and Nicholas F. Beckman.

Another policeman, Lemuel Boyce, was shot to death in 1907 after he had resigned from the force and was serving overtime. He was killed by a Negro burglar he sought to arrest.

First Recorded Victim in '63.

Back in 1863, when policemen were known as "guards," John Sturdy was killed in the discharge of his duty, but the manner is not stated in the record. His is the first such fatality of record now, although undoubtedly many agents of the law were killed here before that time.

Policemen now must be on the alert for gangsters and machine guns in speeding automobiles. Formerly the combination of hoodlums on a corner was deadly. John Cummings, a policeman, was clubbed to death by ruffians at Jefferson avenue and Morgan street in 1875.

In present-day strikes, "pineapples" and stench bombs are directed at business establishments. Formerly the policeman was the object of strike violence. During the street car strike in 1900, Officer Dennis Crane was shot and killed by a strike sympathizer.

Most policemen meet their death alone, but there have been occasions when two and even three policemen have been killed in fights with criminals. In 1904 Detectives Thomas Dwyer, John J. Shea and James J. McCluskey were shot and killed by Bruce Morris when they sought to capture Morris and Albert Rosenauer, train robbers in a Pine street rooming house.

Lewis Brothers Killed Two.

The notorious Louis brothers, now in prison, shot and killed Officer John F. McKenna in 1916 when he caught them at a filling station with stolen goods and on the same day they beat Policeman William Dillon to death when he came upon them in a garage.

Detective William A. Moller and Preston Ansyln were shot and killed by two robbery suspects they stopped on the street in 1920. Policemen Michael O'Connor and Bernard C. Mengel were shot to death by payroll robbers they intercepted at the Morris Packing Co. plant on South Broadway in 1922. Two of the robbers were subsequently hanged.

Others on Honor Roll.

Other policemen shot to death were: John H. Skinner, 1868; John S. White, 1877; Charles Seitz, 1879; Michael Walsh, 1880; Patrick Doran, 1881; Fellie M. Jenks, 1883; Louis M. Wilmers, James Brady, 1890 (Harrison Duncan, the slayer, was hanged); L. A. Boone, 1893; Nicholas Hunt, 1897; Thomas J. Bolin, 1900; Richard E. Delaney, 1901; Michael Reedy, 1902; Frank Ahern, 1904; Zeno Fults, 1908; Cornelius O'Keefe, 1911; Louis Schman, A. H. Huddleston, 1912; William H. Shaiper, 1914; Michael F. Gibbons, Edward Spitzer, Leo Krueger, Charles F. Barmeier, 1915; Louis G. Robers, 1916; Isaac Kidwell, Julius Petering, 1917; William F. Hayes, Thomas Ward, William J. Smith, Louis H. Niederschulte, 1919, James M. King, Terrence McFarland, George E. Geisler, Charles Daly, 1920; Michael J. Finn, John J. McGrath, 1921; Patrick Stapleton, Bernard T. Cook, Harry W. Lemkemeier, 1922 (Lemkemeier's slayer, Lou Trider, subsequently was trapped and killed by police); William C. Carroll, accidentally shot and killed by his partner when chasing a burglar, and Edward W. Griffin, killed by gangsters, 1923; William H. Anderson, Sidney E. Sears, Bernard Early, Robert E. Woody, Fred W. Benz, 1924; Charles B. Craggett, Rudolph Hartung, John H. Grogan, James H. Mateer, 1925; Eugene M. Lovely, 1926; Edward J. Lally, 1927.

Kick Proved Fatal.

A kick by a prisoner caused the death of Frank H. Kohring in 1926. Edward Schaaf and Douglas Chamblin were killed by the tornado of last year when a car barn collapsed.

Those who were killed in accidents of various sorts when walking their beats, chasing speeders or responding to emergency calls were: Michael Gannon, 1894; T. J. Donnelly, 1902; William J. Boka, 1903; Humphrey O'Leary, 1906; Martin Kilroy, 1913; Charles J. Benderoth, Henry S. Smith, 1914; Charles B. Redmond, 1917; Andrew Lawrence, August Schwind, 1918; Edward Dwyer, Frank O Roese, 1920; Joseph Staten, Michael Haggerty, Edward Kuehnel, John Flaherty, 1923; Roger J. Harty, 1924; John H. ARTISTS' GUILD EXHIBITION OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

100 PAINTINGS IN OILS ARE SHOWN

The sixteenth annual show of the Artists' Guild—a representative array of canvases, water-colors, and sculptures by artists of the St. Louis district—opened last night with a private view for Guild members. The exhibition will be opened to the public this afternoon at the Guild building, 812 Union boulevard.

One hundred paintings in oils, some by men known nationally; more than 50 water-colors, and 25 pieces of sculpture have been placed in competition for the $1250 in prizes, which will be awarded by an out-of-town jury next Saturday night. The largest unrestricted prize is offered by the Artists' Guild—$300 "for the best work of art in the show."

Two new prizes are offered this year for modern paintings. Frank P. Crunden offers the Frederick Morgan Crunden prize of $100 for a modern painting, and Mrs. Erma K. Stix, a prize of $50 for a modern painting. There are also the Ives prize of $100 for landscape, offered by W. K. Bixby; the Brown prize of $50 for figure painting, offered by Mrs. George Warren Brown; the Williams prize of $100 for decoration, offered by Mrs. Letticia Parker Williams; the Mallinckrodt portrait prize of $100 offered by Edward Mallinckrodt Jr.; the Sylvester prize of $50 for sculpture offered by W. K. Bixby; the Noonan & Kocian prize of $50 for the most "popular" work of art as determined by vote; and the Chamber of Commerce (Purchase) prize of $350 for the best industrial painting of St. Louis or vicinity.

Few 'Modernistic Works.'

The exhibition will continue until Jan. 15, being open to the public daily and on Sunday.

It is an art show not overburdened with modernism. Canvases showing unconventional treatment are rare. Among the more striking is the powerful "Primitive Garden" of E. Ohcar Tholinger, who has compounded a synthetic landscape of simplified mountain, forest, meadow masses that appears to challenge any other canvas on view for sheer drama of coloring. He models boldly and pointedly with umbered reds and golds, glowing purples and browns.

In another canvas, this artist tries his hand at the Crucifixion and achieves a startling effect. He paints the Crucifixion, on a small scale, against an overwhelming natural background of those same umbered reds and golds, glowing purples and browns of his "Primitive Garden." The three crucified figures are almost painted out in smoke-blue. The men and women grouped at the foot of the central cross, on the other hand, are clad in brilliant colors like the mountain sides and the rolling meadows of the foreground.

Other Striking Canvases.

Valentine Vogel has a modernistic portrait called "Juslent," the study of a rather sombre young woman. The artist has sought obviously to make paint tell something more than surface. Its treatment makes it unique in the show.

Other pieces that will hold the eye of the visitor on his first round of the galleries and possibly thereafter, are Stanley B. Warner's bold and simple canvas, "The Road to the Open;" O. E. Berninghaus' large study of an old Indian amidst superbly painted birch trees; Tom Barnett's study of Gloucester Bay, with ships washed in sunlight—a terra cotta Madonna with red hair and a red-haired child by Shiela Burlingame; D. Crockwell's canvas, showing the influence of Puvis de Chavannes, called "The Diggers;" C. K. Gleeson's competent canvas showing truckers at work in the shadow of Eads Bridge; Lillian Glaser's delightful decoration, in which a blooming pear tree, a white ox, a swan, a white turkey, a goat and a few other things are blended into a spring landscape; two color poems from the brush of Fred Carpenter; two color poems from the extremely different brush of E. H. Wuerpel; the New York water-front piece by Gustav Goetsch, entitled "The Heralds of Apollo," by which is meant, it seems, tugboats; Kajiwara's study in contrast of a wrinkled old man and a young child; a portrait by Kajiwara that has an almost Lazlo-like sheen; a study of a mother and a nude child called "Trying the Sandal," by Charles F. Galt, which has an arresting note of reality; a canvas showing a town of gaily colored houses, by J. J. Eppensteiner; the study called "Jean and Jane," by Mabel Meeker Edsall, which is strongly reminiscent of Freisecke; sketches for play sets by Alexandra Korsakoff; the charming posters of Gisella Loeffler.

Among the Exhibitors.

Money Contributed Will Go to Child Welfare Work Not Provided for in Budget.

The St. Louis Christmas Carols Association has organized for the coming Christmas Eve festival, when hundreds of groups of singers will go from house to house, stopping to sing wherever a lighted window invites them. Churches, schools, clubs and neighborhood groups will take part in the Christmas Eve singing, and there will also be carolers in the hotels and restaurants at noon Dec. 21 and 22.

The money contributed to the singers will go for child welfare work not provided for in the regular budgets of several agencies. Leaders for groups are wanted, and any one willing to volunteer for this is asked to notify Miss Agnes Sturgis, executive secretary of the Carols Association, 316 North Eighth street. The county also has been organized.

HOW TO PROTECT PLANTS IN WINTER

Missouri Botanical Garden Points Out That Some Types Can't Stand St. Louis Cold.

Instructions for protecting garden plants and shrubs during the winter months are contained in the current bulletin of the Missouri Botanical Garden. The comment is made that much of the winter protection given plants in this locality is "time wasted and money thrown away, because attempts are made to winter tender plants that cannot stand our zero spells. Other plants are protected so heavily that they rot during warm spells or start to grow too early in the spring and are frozen back."

"For most trees and shrubs a mulch is not necessary unless they are newly planted," the bulletin says. "Native roses, as well as many of the hardy Chinese kinds need no covering, but the hybrid types will not stand our winters unless protection is offered. The climbers are seldom injured except during unusually severe winters.

"Experience at the Garden has shown that the method of pegging down the flowering canes of these climbers and covering them with soil is not to be recommended for St. Louis. Loose straw, or corn stalks tied about the rose canes to break the wind and shut off the sun, are suggested.

"Tender rose bushes should be protected by hilling loose soil about each plant to a depth of six to eight inches and covering the entire bed with straw. Oak leaves may be used if they are covered with something that will shed water, otherwise they will become too soggy during wet weather."

"Winter overcoats," the bulletin says, generally should be placed about rose gardens in the latter part of November. It suggests that young herbaceous perennials and pansies are best wintered in coldframes.

BABY PENGUINS EXPECTED TO HATCH OUT THIS WEEK

They Will Be the First at Forest Park Zoo; Python "Star Performer" at Reptile House.

Three baby penguins are expected at the Zoo this week and, if the arrival is as expected, the penguins will be the first hatched here. There are 15 adult penguins at the Zoo. Two birds have been sitting on eggs, which are expected to hatch this week following an incubation period of 42 days.

Those who went to the reptile house yesterday witnessed the unusual activity of the largest of living giant constrictors, the 23-foot reticulated python, which Supt. Vierheller said "was the star performer of the afternoon."

In the jungle setting, as depicted by Frank Nuderscher, St. Louis, typical of India, where large trees and bamboo abound in tropical abundance, the snake, patched with iridescent purple and reddish brown diamonds on a yellow-green background, writhed and reared six feet in the air to flash a thin forked tongue against the glass of his spacious prison by way of friendly greeting to the visitors outside the iron railing.

The Zoological Board of Survey, which met in the reptile house Friday, took under consideration a new building program.

U. S. Suit Filed to Compel Destruction of Shipment.

A suit to compel the destruction of 29 barrels of dressed turkeys, shipped to St. Louis from Dallas, Tex., on Nov. 22 and now held in the Booth Cold Storage Plant, was filed by the Government in Federal Court yesterday.

E. R. Smith, chief Government food inspector, said his department had found these turkeys slightly decomposed under improper refrigeration in transit. The consignment was shipped here by American Railway Express from S. A. Christian of Dallas. The 29 barrels averages about 225 pounds each and, with turkey selling at 40 cents a pound, represent a total value of about $2,600.

BOYS TO DELIVER PHONE BOOKS

Scouts of Suburban District to Make Delivery Next Week.

Boy scouts have been employed to distribute the directories in the county for the last three years.

Gleanings, Spiced With Native Wit, From Collection of His Cousin, "Doctor Jim," That Is Now at Jefferson Memorial.

IN A HANDFUL of faded notes, cards and letters which Samuel Langhorne Clemens wrote to his cousin, "Doctor Jim," during the last 13 years of his life, is a vivid record of the friendship and affection of the Missouri humorist for his younger cousin, Dr. James Ross Clemens, a St. Louis physician, and an intimate revelation of the genial Mark Twain's attitude toward his own none too happy life.

Under glass in the east wing of the Jefferson Memorial, where the Missouri Historical Society has set up an exhibition of Mark Twain relics, the letters appear unimposing and disconnected. But arranged and analyzed, they prove to be, not the common prizes of a collector, but a fascinating history of joy and sadness, failure and success, spiced with the homely wit which made Mark Twain an enduring name.

Dr. Clemens, now living in California, saved the precious correspondence from the first letter in 1897 when his famous cousin, then living in retirement in London, wrote that "we should greatly like to know you," to the last melancholy note to the doctor's wife, Mrs. Katherine Boland Clemens, a few weeks before the author died in March, 1910. There are about 20 items in the collection, now the property of Dr. Clemens' son, Cyril Clemens of Webster Groves, who is president of the Mark Twain Society.

THE Mark Twain bust by Louis Potter which has been lent by the Wadsworth Atheneum and Morgan Memorial of Hartford, Conn., to the Missouri Historical Society for its exhibition of letters and relics of the Missouri author.

"Doctor Jim's" First Contact.

"Doctor Jim," as Clemens affectionately called his cousin, had been studying medicine on the continent and had stopped for a while in London early in 1897. How he established communication with Mark Twain is not revealed by the letters but apparently he wrote to the author seeking the acquaintance.

At any rate, on March 5, 1897, Mark Twain wrote the physician:

"I am hard at work on a book and the proceeds will go to the payment of debts contracted for me by others. But the rest is an error. My wife has a modest income (but sufficient) which she inherited from her father, and so we do not have to live in a lodging house.

"We have suffered a deep bereavement in the loss of our eldest daughter last August and for this reason we are hermits and keep our address a secret. I disclose it to you privately for we should greatly like to know you and we hope you can and will drop in on Monday and take a cup of tea with us. I believe you are the only blood relation I have in Europe except Frau Von Versen. The address is 23 Tedworth Square, Chelsea, S. W."

Invitation to Theater.

Evidently Dr. Clemens did drop in, for another six months found Mark Twain jotting him a hasty note on a card. "Will you meet me at the box office of the Adelphi Theater, Strand, tomorrow evening, Thursday, at 8 or 8:05, and help me see Gillette's play 'Secret Service?'" And the same day a second card, "If you can't go tomorrow, will you name another day?"

Late in the same year Clemens moved his family to Vienna, whence he wrote: "This strikes me as the right place for a surgeon to finish his studies in. The next time I make arrangements for you to have a good time, I hope you will be more considerate and see to it that I don't bring suffering and disappointment upon myself in consequence. Such experiences make me lose confidence in the human race."

Whatever it was that caused Mark Twain to chide his cousin, it was forgotten in the following two years of prosperity, during which the author paid his debts and recovered his spirit and kindly humor. From Vienna, on March 5, 1899,—he was 64 years old at the time,—Mark Twain wrote:

"We are plodding along about as usual. Jean studies Russian and other devilish things, and Clara forsook the piano four months ago and has devoted herself industriously to singing ever since under a competent master.

"Mrs. Clemens takes care of the flat and has her hands full and I superintend. As soon as I got well enough off to do without working I laid aside my tools and retired from business. I am one of the few wise men left in the world but am not depressed by the lonesomeness of my condition.

"P. S.—I am not opposed to that mustache of yours, but the rest of the family are. They wish it removed. But if I were you I would pay no attention to them. You are entitled to your rights and should resist every attempt of unauthorized people to interfere with them."

Before the month was out, on March 29, 1899, Mrs. Clemens wrote to "Doctor Jim's bride-to-be": "I believe you have done, or are about to do, wisely. I found marrying a Clemens the very best and happiest thing that I ever did."

And Mark Twain indorsed the following bit of his inimitable humor on his wife's note: "I have never married a Clemens myself, and should think twice before I ventured such a thing. Still, less particular people have taken the risk and found them well enough, as a change. In your case, Miss Boland, I am hoping the best, hoping the best. I like my relative Jim very much and as a Clemens, he averages away up."

A liqueur set, Mark Twain's wedding gift to "relative Jim," and preserved intact through the years, graces the current exhibition of his letters.

During 1900, when Mark Twain was back in London, several letters were written about the merits of "the best Indian cigars I have ever smoked outside of Calcutta."

"Confined to My Nightshirt."

"Since you were here," Mark Twain wrote, "I have attended to little else than the gout and am still confined to my nightshirt. This is why I have not thanked you for taking trouble for me in the matter of the cigars. I beg to do it now.

"Also, I want you to do me this added favor: Give me the name of the cigars you brought here with you the other day, so that I can order them through Whiteley. The shape is thus (and Twain sketched it); not thus (another sketch, square-ended).

"The box that came are the old-fashioned double-butt-enders like No. 2 as above, but yours of the No. 1 pattern are much better. I am sorry to give you trouble, but what is a body to do? I've got to have the cigars; otherwise I might get well and come in and scare Muriel."

A Visit to Missouri.

In May, 1902, Twain was at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, planning a trip to Florida, Mo., his birthplace; to Hannibal, where he spent his childhood and lived many of the adventures that were to become part of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn," and to Columbia, Mo., for a lecture.

"Doctor Jim," he wrote, "I leave here by New York Central at 9:20 p. m., May 27. Am due in St. Louis (at the Planters) at 7:30 a. m., the 29th (or maybe its 10:30). I leave Columbia the 5th for St. Louis and then am clear of duties and formal engagements and ready for a rest in the society of all the Clemenses we can get hold of.

"I shall hope to see you at the Painters the 29th; you can't be more than half a dozen blocks from there. I don't go there to sleep but only to wash. Bring some soap with you, and a towel."

Another month and he was at "The Pines," York Harbor, Maine, writing: "I do admire Katherine's courage. I hope I shall never have a baby, for I know I should dread it so that everyone would be ashamed of me."

His Wife's Illness.

In September he wrote from York to "Dear Cousin Katherine," describing Mrs. Clemens' illness in the manner of a storyteller.

"Livy was very low on Sunday night and on Monday and Tuesday, and our hope passed away. Then we got a great physician from Boston and he said, 'Do you mean to say that this patient has been allowed to lie here six weeks in this condition without a trained nurse?'

"'But she wouldn't allow one.'

"'I am not asking what she would allow. She has nothing to do with the matter, and nothing to say about it. Go and telephone Miss So-and-So in Boston and say she must be here by the next train.'

Concerning Trained Nurses.

"He banished us all—me out of the house entirely. Since then Livy has lived in the solitude of the nurse's society and has prospered to a miracle.

"We have had four doctors and they have constantly recommended trained nursing. But at last we got hold of a man—well, you see the results. Those four physicians should be expelled from the business.

"Tell Doctor Jim to command. It is his duty. With love to you all."

And in October, a month later, a sharp complaint against trained nurses, from Riverdale, N. Y.:

"Dear Dr. Jim: The pipes came and I hope to have a good and satisfactory time with them.

"We brought Mrs. Clemens through successfully eight days ago in an invalid car which had but one defect—the bed should have been suspended from the roof, hammock fashion, then there would have been no motion. It is the jarring and jolting that wears the patient. By having a special train at the ends of the journey, we cut the regular time down by four hours and pulled through in daylight and without having to get up early.

"Clara discharged the first trained nurse and took another. I discharged this second one and installed No. 3.

"Damn these creatures, they don't seem to have any sense. No. 2 objected to receiving the doctor's orders at second-hand from Clara and when I said she must, she went

Premier Mussolini Writes on Coolidge's Armistice Speech

By BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Premier of Italy.

ROME, Dec. 1.

THE United States has it within her grasp to be the potential dictator of world policy. If she wished, she could impose her will almost wherever she choose, and settle for her own unselfish aims the destiny of mankind. She has power to build fleets which could police the world; she could train armies that would surpass in magnitude, fearfulness and destructive power anything hitherto dreamed; she could darken the skies with flying monsters which for perfection, mechanical technique and efficiency in spreading ruin, cause dread at the thought. But she is doing none of these or even is thinking of doing them, but is rather turned the other way, though she carefully guards what, with her dynamic energy, she has constructed. And when President Coolidge on Armistice day proclaimed America's duty to herself in that she must defend her glorious status as a nation, he was but sounding a watchword, wise and far-seeing statesman that he is, zealous for the great things that a great nation means and the great contributions she has made to the world. There can be no wrong in such an exhortation for the country's good; it was firm but not harsh. If it was meant as a benevolent whipping for Europe, it was well deserved.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI.

Says Nation Must Have Right of Self-Defense to Exist.

If the United States as a great nation is to live, she cannot in this world of today deny herself defense of national body and soul. She has a priceless heritage of a short but glorious history, history which in a brief span of 150 years attributes to her rise from a barely organized state to that of the nation with the most potential greatness of modern times; she has a heritage in institutions, traditions, in principles of right; she has produced geniuses in varied fields of endeavor, developed the modern mechanical steel age to a point beyond that of the older nations of the world.

These things are worth defending, else America would lose her fighting edge and forego the spirit which made her great, and sink into oblivion with the traces of her civilization absorbed and exploited by ravishing exploiting conquerors.

And President Coolidge has asked for no more than the defense of these priceless national possessions. There are indeed certain minimum limits and he has almost reached these limits with the aim in mind that the great national complexus might remain intact to perform its great destiny. America could well afford great armaments, better could she bear the burden of them than any other nation in the world, but he has not asked for them. That which he asked for was the preservation and integrity of the United States.

Praise for Efforts of U. S. to Promote World Peace.

There is ample proof that America does not dash around the world with a drawn sword. The efforts of American statesmen to promote world peace are too well known to need defense for her building program. The United States can create big armaments easier than any country, but she asks that nations limit their armaments to the lowest possible figure consistent with national defense. In this she has taken the lead and has given ample proof of her sincerity by meeting the requirements of the pacts already stipulated.

The United States has rightly interested herself in Europe because it is important for her to feel the trend of European currents, for no nation today can live indifferent to the courses which her neighbors have mapped out. Commerce, culture, civilization itself, now are world encircling, so that should one great power be sufficient unto itself in resources and territory, it cannot free itself completely from the influence of other great Powers because they and what they do has a direct bearing on its own policy. Isolation cannot be practiced today and the United States must interest herself in Europe, and Europe must ever be cognizant of the policy of United States.

In 10 years since the war, the United States has practiced a benevolent spirit towards Europe. The debt settlements she accepted sincerely, admitting the principle of ability of the debtors to pay. She granted loans to help Europe toward its own rehabilitation and made it possible for Germany to resume her industrial and financial organization and she helped Europe regain her feet more rapidly.

Urges Disarmament in All Three Branches of Service.

In naval disarmament, the United States has been zealous indeed in the endeavor to arrive at some basis on which all Powers could reduce their naval armaments. Much success has been obtained, especially at the Washington conference. But I am one who believes that naval disarmament is not all that is to be discussed. If we wish to arrive at real, effective disarmament, we must consider all kinds of armament—for it is only by a complete settlement of all three on the part of all great Powers that the real spirit of disarmament is brought into play, in fact, the very substance of disarmament would be lost entirely if the spirit is lacking. This spirit can only find its true and real expression in a disarmament policy on all three branches.

President Coolidge has justly admitted that disarmament should "apply to land and sea" but that inasmuch as land disarmament is "largely a European question, we have wished the countries most interested to take the lead in deciding this amongst themselves."

Praises Attitude of America as Favoring Disarmament in Spirit as Well as in Fact, While Having Resources Which Would Give It First Rank as Military Power.

This is quite natural and it would seem that the lead for land disarmament must be undertaken by some European Power, as the United States has such a small standing army. It was therefore with the idea of encouraging the discussion of land armaments that I recently announced that Italy was willing to accept the lowest figures offered for its own standing army, provided these figures were not surpassed by those of any other continental Power. This can be taken only as genuine proof of Italy's support of disarmament principle, and we are ready to enter any disarmament discussion on this basis.

Favors Fixing of Naval Strength by Net Tonnage.

In naval disarmament, we have favored the fixing in general the amount of tonnage rather than limitation by categories. We favor general figures because it leaves to each nation freedom in choosing those craft which are better adapted to its own defense. Inasmuch as the conditions of defense differ radically for each nation, we can see no other effective way of meeting the problem than by a general figure for each country. Thus a rich nation can choose the number of capital ships and cruisers suited to its purpose and the small nation can place its defense in smaller craft adapted to coast defense.

In no way can effective disarmament be reached by separate agreements. Separate agreements can only renew the old pre-war principle of "the balance of power." The problem is more than anything else a problem of straight dealing and sincere and common faith in the great aim of peace, faith which in itself produces the spirit of peace. Powers in formulating offers of disarmament must subordinate their feelings to this great fundamental before the great aim can be successfully accomplished.

Considers Franco-British Fiasco a Blow to Progress.

President Coolidge must have had this thought when he called the recent movements for disarmament "discouraging." The Franco-British offer did result in a setback for disarmament. The United States was more greatly affected by this than was Italy, on the basis of the terms agreed to by the two Powers, but there was above all for Italy that discouraging feature that two nations alone were getting together to plan the course for their own particular interests, while those of the other Powers were kept emphatically in the background. For the good of the general principle, such actions are difficult obstacles surmountable only after a new calming of minds and a new infusion of faith.

The President of the United States was right in again reiterating his country's position. Without pompous display of his nation's power, he stated there were minimum international principles which all nations recognized, though there were great differences in race, customs and concepts. Again America through him announced herself ready to participate in the laudable movement for armament limitation based on the principle which the United States has given proof of possessing, namely of disarming in spirit as well as in fact.

Naval Expansion, Kellogg Treaty, Boulder Dam and Farm Relief In Short Session of Congress

World Court, "Lame Duck" and Muscle Shoals Legislation Unlikely in Face of Press of Other Business.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.

ANOTHER "lame duck" session of Congress—one of the variety that the proposed Norris constitutional amendment would abolish—will begin next Monday and continue until March 4, when it will expire by constitutional limitation. This will be the second and final session of the Seventieth Congress.

Nine Senators who will serve in this session, including six who were defeated either in primaries or the general election, will not be members of the Seventy-first Congress. In the House of Representatives, 65 members who were not re-elected in November will continue to serve as law makers for three months while their successors wait. The unusual number of "lame ducks" in the House, owing to the sweeping character of the national Republican victory, probably will lead to another effort in the next Congress to put through the Norris amendment.

It is not likely to be brought up in the short session. The amendment has been approved by the Senate four times by large majorities, but failed to receive the required two-thirds majority on the only occasion when it came to a vote in the House.

How the Parties Stand.

In the coming short session the position of the Republicans in the Senate will be slightly improved over that of the first session, when the count stood: Republicans, 47; Democrats, 46; Farmer-Labor, 1. The shortage was due to the refusal of the Senate to seat Smith of Illinois and Vare of Pennsylvania. The short session will see the Republicans with a majority of three. This has been brought about by the election of Glenn of Illinois to fill the Smith seat and the defeat of Senator Locher, Democrat, by Burton, Republican, for the unexpired term of the late Senator Willis in Ohio. The line-up will be: Republicans, 49 (assuming that Vare will continue on the outside); Democrats, 45; Farmer-Labor, 1. The Republican majority in the next Senate will be increased to 15—or to 16 if Vare or some other Republican from Pennsylvania is seated.

In the House, the present strength of the parties is as follows: Republicans, 235; Democrats, 193; Farmer-Labor, 2; Socialist, 1. There are four vacancies. The Republicans have an absolute majority of 39, which will be increased in the first session of the next Congress to 99.

Big Four of Session's Bills

On the calendar of the coming three months, in addition to the regular supply bills, are four matters of prime importance: The pending naval expansion bill, which President Coolidge sought to further in his armistice day speech; the Kellogg multilateral treaty; the Boulder Dam bill, and the whole question of farm relief. The last named is important not only in itself, but because upon its disposition depends the attitude of the incoming administration toward the calling of an extra session of the Seventy-first Congress after March 4.

The Naval bill, which already has been passed by the House by a five to one majority, provides for the building of 15 10,000-ton cruisers (the maximum size permitted under the Washington limitation treaty), and one airplane carrier. It was favorably reported to the Senate at the last session, but action on it was prevented by the filibuster against the Boulder Dam bill.

Chairman Britten of the House Naval Affairs Committee has announced that passage of the bill will be followed by an effort to obtain an initial grant of at least $50,000,000 for the authorized construction. This is to be spread over three years, at a total estimated cost of $274,000,000. The bill is a substitute for the original administration proposal of a 74-ship program, to cost $740,000,000.

Kellogg Treaty.

The Kellogg multilateral treaty, with which the Senate alone is concerned, has not yet been submitted to that body. When submitted, it will go to the Foreign Relations Committee, of which Senator Borah is chairman, and may be made the subject of hearings. Borah is strongly for the treaty. The administration is asking for its ratification without qualification or reservations.

The treaty renounces war as an instrument of national policy. It has been declared by the President the most effective agency for peace ever devised. Fifteen nations signed it at Paris and 44 others have declared their intention of so doing.

It is never safe to predict what the Senate will do with any treaty. Doubt has been expressed by some Senators as to the meaning of the Kellogg treaty and of the reservations expressed or implied by the signatories during its negotiation. Long debate in the Senate, therefore, seems certain, and it is possible that ratification may go over to a future session. The other original signatories have indicated that they will withhold final approval pending action by the American Senate.

There will be a session of the Senate immediately after inauguration day to ratify appointments by the incoming President. It will be possible for the Senate, if the multilateral treaty is not disposed of before March 4, to continue its discussion in this special session.

The treaty will be linked in Senate discussion with the 16-ship bill. Opponents of this bill are stressing what they assert is the inconsistency of the administration in asking for more warships while promoting a treaty against war. To this the reply is made that the new cruisers are necessary to replace outworn vessels and represent no competitive shipbuilding effort on the part of the United States. President Coolidge expressed this view in his armistice day speech and is expected to restate it in his message to Congress.

Boulder Dam Heads Calendar.

The much-debated Boulder Dam bill remains at the top of the Senate calendar as the unfinished business left over from the last session. It was passed by the House in the spring, but was prevented from coming to a vote in the Senate by a determined filibuster led by the Arizona and Utah Senators, who asserted that the rights of their States had not been safeguarded. These Senators had the support, tacit or otherwise, of the group opposed to Governmental development of power projects.

What will happen to the bill in the coming session is wholly problematical. Apparently it would have commanded a majority last May if Senator Johnson of California, its chief sponsor, could have forced it to a vote. In reconsidering the bill, however, the Senate will have before it the report of a special commission created in pursuance of a joint resolution adopted on the last day of the last session. This commission was appointed by Secretary of the Interior Work, with the approval of the President, and was instructed under the terms of the resolution to inquire into "the safety, the economic and engineering feasi-

Dr. Davenport's Thesis.

THE thesis of Dr. C. B. Davenport, read before the National Academy of Science at Schenectady, N. Y., in which he states as a scientific fact that "the white and Negro races are not created equal in mental aptitude"—that is an old argument that has been ridden to death.

Every race that has held another race in subjugation has found it to be very easy and convenient periodically to declare that race inferior. The Romans called the Greeks, who were their teachers, inferior. The Angles and Saxons, when carried to Rome naked as slaves, were also inferior. The Britons were inferior to the Normans when they were compelled to wear an iron collar with the name of their Norman master engraved upon it.

Dr. Boaz, eminent anthropologist of Columbia University, disproves this idea of superiority of race. Dr. John Langdon Davies, noted English scholar and sociologist of South Africa, says: "Race superiority is a myth." J. Finot denies its existence in his very comprehensive treatise on "Race Prejudice." There is a voluminous amount of demonstrated examples of accomplishment by full-blooded Africans or men of African descent to give any unbiased mind a different viewpoint.

Was Toussaint L'Ouverture inferior to Napoleon? Did not Henri Christophe show more ingenuity and foresight than his European contemporaries? The annals of modern art and literature are filled with the names of black men and women, without a trace of white blood in their veins, whose accomplishments are remarkable.

Paul Laurence Dunbar, one of the world's greatest bards, overcame the handicaps of poverty, discrimination and a slave ancestry and wrote his name among the stars. Robert Russa Moton, president of Tuskegee Institute, whose father was an African prince, ranks as one of the world's best thinkers on industrial education today. Rene Martin, the winner of the Prix Goncourt prize, is of pure African descent.

HENRY W. WHEELER

"The American Peacock."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I MUST thank the Post-Dispatch for quoting, in its issue of Nov. 25, an editorial from the Detroit News entitled "The American Peacock." It is a concise statement of the causes which got this country into the great war and the motives which actuated us (the people) in supporting it.

We would not have fought for the benefit of bankers and munition makers had we known it. But the administration fooled us with its racket about democracy, liberty and humanity till we felt that we were fighting in a holy cause.

Now that the war is in the past and the trick has been exposed, why can we not have the courage to admit the facts? But many of us still insist that the motives of our Government were ideal and unselfish. We still delight in such high-sounding phrases as Mr. Coolidge used when he spoke of "spiritual values" and the "drum beats of a new destiny."

So long as we maintain this attitude we cannot profit by our experience or learn the lesson we should have learned, that wars are waged for greed and selfishness and not for ideals.

A READER.

In Defense of Southern Speech.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

REPLYING to "Dry Voter" in a recent issue of your paper: I am a Southern woman, born and reared in Dixie land, but have spent quite sometime in the North and East, and I assure you that their accent, etc., is just as amusing to me as mine is to them.

I think that Mr. Dry Voter is unfair, or possibly he does not know that it has been conceded by the best educators that the purest English in the U. S. A. is spoken south of the Mason-Dixon line.

It is not my intention or desire to enter into a controversy, but simply state facts.

The "Grammarless (?) Sirens" no doubt say (and correctly) "you-all," but never when addressing an individual.

You-all, as used by the Southern people, is grammatically correct, and I challenge Mr. D. V. or anyone else to contradict my statement.

True, we do not trill our "R's" and that nasal sound when speaking is never heard in the South unless imported by some Eastern visitor.

We never say "Youse come to see us," as they say in this part of the country.

We never drink "watter," as our Northern cousins do, nor do we swim in a "crick" (Ouch! I abhor "cricks.")

We have never been known to climb a "tray" or sip from a "spun," and we never get "ohf" or "ohn" a train—and so on—ad infinitum.

TARIFF AND THE FARMER.

Fortunately for the farmer, the plight in which he finds himself can now be dispassionately debated and those political quarters in which he reposes his confidence can consider remedies without fear of either those taunts or denials which enlivened the campaign.

Congressman Tilson, Republican leader in the House, is first in the field with a program. He wants a special session of Congress immediately after the inauguration of Mr. Hoover, and he would have that Congress bring to the aid of agriculture, in as many bills as are necessary, whatever promises or assures relief. He disagrees with Mr. Longworth, the Speaker, that the subject can hope for justice at the short session which begins next week.

And what is it Mr. Tilson thinks can be done? He agrees with Mr. Hoover that the tariff must be the basis of all farm relief. It has not been easy for the country to understand just how this can be so, particularly when there is already an import duty on foreign wheat that is now fixed at 42 cents a bushel and is as nearly prohibitive as an import duty very well could be. Nevertheless, some hard wheat is imported into the country from Canada, the reason, as given by the Canadians, being that their hard wheat is essential to successful milling in the United States. If that is true, an even higher import duty on Canadian wheat might not keep it out of the country and therefore out of competition with home-grown wheat.

Mr. Tilson does not say that in addition to other things the new tariff bill which he proposes might lessen the burden upon the farmer by lowering the tariff upon some of the things he buys. He admits that the present tariff law is now seven years old and cannot satisfactorily meet every present-day condition. However, he does not say that any of the respects in which the present tariff law is deficient are those which farmers particularly have in mind. It was a commonplace of the late campaign that the farmer sells in an unprotected market and buys in a protected market. Does Mr. Tilson have in mind that the degree to which the farmer buys in a protected market might be considerably less? If so, he is careful not to say that this is what he means.

What the country will no doubt feel about it is that Republicans ought to apply their tariff theory as quickly as they can get about it. It is a theory which was put forth initially by their candidate for the presidency, and as between it and the theory of the McNary-Haugen bill, which the Democrats virtually espoused, the decision of the people was unmistakable. The Republicans possess Congress utterly. Their majority in both houses is emphatic. Whatever danger they may be in from the Republican progressives in the Senate is minimized by farm relief. Not one of the progressives will vote against any plan of relief in which the majority believes.

Therefore, the country, we believe, will say in substance: "Gentlemen, the way is yours. You convinced the farmer that the tariff can be his salvation. You hold Congress, and you have the White House. Very well. Make the tariff do what you say it can do."

METEOR SHOWERS AND STATISTICS.

This is the season of meteor showers and statistical bombardments. Here are a few broadsides of the latter type that have appeared recently in the news:

The earth is 592 quintillion tons heavier than was formerly supposed. Instead of weighing only six sextillion tons, a figure computed 30 years ago, it is now said to weigh six sextillion, 592 quintillion tons.

The center of the visible universe is 47,000 light years, or 266,297,112,000,000,000 miles, distant from the earth. The fastest airplane developed to date, traveling 219.57 miles an hour, might reach this point in 94,901,227,170 years.

In the year 10,000,000 A. D. man will look essentially as he does today, with few minor changes. However, Chinese will think and act as Americans, Hottentots like Scandinavians and Igorotes like Tasmanians.

In this exciting era when the earth gains 592 quintillion tons in 30 years and the diplodocus eggs of the horse-car age turn out to be the gallstones of a crocodile, it is comforting to the defenseless newspaper reader to reflect that today's meteors are tomorrow's museum oddities.

Portes Gil, Mexico's new President, pronounces his name "heel," which is another obstacle to perfect understanding between Mexico and the United States.

MR. NOYES ATTACKS A TINKER.

It having become the fashion for the great modern literary lights to demonstrate how silly our ancestors were in their choice of reading matter, it is not astonishing to find Alfred Noyes taking the cudgels to a Bedfordshire tinker who lived 300 years ago and who whiled away some of the years he spent in prison by writing a book. Mr. Noyes includes an element of timeliness in his attack, since the world is just now celebrating the 300th anniversary of the misguided tinker, John Bunyan, and the 250th anniversary of his book, "Pilgrim's Progress."

The work, says Mr. Noyes, "displays not a single gleam of original thought," and is "one of those piously repulsive books which in former generations were used to fill the minds of little children with hideous ideas of hell fire."

Even so, most authorities consider "Pilgrim's Progress" original enough to be hailed as the ancestor of the modern novel. It was the first book of any consequence to be written for the humbler classes, then as now too poor and too busy to be patrons of the arts. The cottagers of Bunyan's day were pleasantly surprised to find a book about their kind of people, and in the simple, direct language they understood. They read it both as a fascinating novel and as a religious treatise. Bunyan knew few books and was inspired only by his sincerity and his Testament.

Few people seem to read "Pilgrim's Progress" nowadays, but the names of distinguished writers and statesmen of the past who mention it as one of the profound influences on their diction and their lives in general form an impressive roll. Agreeing or not with its teachings, few have risen to contradict Bunyan's power to tell a story simply and dramatically in his allegory novel, with page after page in which scarcely a word of more than two syllables appears. In it Roosevelt found his "muckraker," Thackeray his "Vanity Fair," Kipling his "Greatheart," and so on.

The main trouble seems to be that "Pilgrim's Progress" now has gone out of style, a weakness which lays it open at once to the attack of modern literary lights. Any work written in the current language of its period may be expected to "date," but "Pilgrim's Progress" has managed to live to the extent of several thousand editions since its first appearance 250 years ago, and still ranks in circulation second only to the Bible. Its manner of religious teaching and its simple language may be outmoded, but the Bedfordshire tinker's work has lasted far longer than its critics and may be expected to survive even the onslaught of Mr. Noyes.

TAMING THE MISSOURI.

One of the severe tasks to which development of the inland waterways has addressed itself is taming the Missouri. This is not, despite all that was said of it by the pioneers who drove steamboats as far up on the river as Fort Benton, Mont., or even what is commonly said of it in our own time, an insuperable engineering problem.

The Missouri, or the Big Muddy, as the Indians called it, is what it is because of the loose soils through which it flows. The slight resistance which they make to flood, or to the merest whim of the river, has made the Missouri the most meandering and wasteful of streams. In a bottom that is 17 miles wide at Sioux City, Ia., and varying in width for 1000 miles from three miles up to that, the river has at last become a series of bends. It is the sharpness of these bends, which are a series of recoils into the soft and sandy soils from the rock bluffs, that makes improvement of the river difficult. The engineers have learned, for instance, that no conceivable structure will repel a head-on thrust by so great and so swift a stream. They are therefore lessening the angles at the bends. These will all ultimately be less than 35 degrees. It is not something that is particularly hard to do. Rather, it is a matter of money. To expend little sums of money on so great a task, as Senator Reed of Missouri has often pointed out, is only to make seem impossible what is not merely possible but readily practicable. Fortunately, Congress is not now dealing with the Missouri on its formerly parsimonious plan.

There is one feature of Missouri River development that is attractive beyond its meaning to agriculture and the development of the Mississippi Valley. It is the prediction that when the Missouri is improved neither it nor the Lower Mississippi will be so muddy as they are now. The Missouri contributes the mud. Above the junction of the two rivers the Mississippi is a much clearer and cleaner stream than it is below the junction. The Missouri gathers this silt at the innumerable sharp bends, where erosion is constant. It, too, is a clean river before it begins this meandering process. Once the bends are broadened and riprapped the erosion will cease. When the erosion ceases the river will begin to clear up. So will the Mississippi at St. Louis.

A VERY SIMPLE THING.

It was President Harding who coined the aphorism, "Government, after all, is a very simple thing." But it is Mussolini who exemplifies it. Is the Italian farm population shifting to the cities to the country's detriment? Very well. Mussolini will fix it. A fiat is issued, with many carbon copies, to be distributed to Governors, Prefects and police. It contains a quick and certain remedy for the problem. No farmer may go to the city to take permanent residence without written permission. All floaters, vagabonds, deserters from the plow who are now in the cities are to be shipped forthwith back to the soil. Don't they like it? They can lump it. The Fascist idea that the State is greater than the individual will not brook any defiance of Il Duce's solution of the agricultural problem.

How simple all this is! Italy has a problem. Presto! snaps an idea from the Great Man Mussolini's mind and the problem is gone. How utterly awkward must seem to him the methods with which democracies attack their problems. That slow process of discussion, argument, debate, followed by trial and error, must impress Il Duce as utterly senseless. Or, perhaps, he attributes it to our lack in the United States of a mind so all-seeking and all-knowing as his. As for the penchant we have for reserving certain rights to individuals, of respecting a man's choice of home and livelihood, that is unthinkable to a Fascist. For example, Fascism is now calling for government action on a new problem. We quote from a dispatch from Rome:

> A cry of alarm has been sounded repeatedly by the Fascist press ever since it became known that Italy's birth rate declined by 2 per cent during the current year.

THE HITCH-RACK ISSUE.

It is regrettable that a continuance has been found necessary in the celebrated Neosho, Mo., hitch rack case. This is a case that should be disposed of, one way or another, so that other towns with hitch racks on their hands will know what to do.

Neosho had a hitch rack that dated from the day when farmers teamed to town Saturday afternoons to do their buying. It was then indispensable, the hallmark of the town's hospitality. But the times have changed. Fords have taken the place of teams and Fords stand without hitching. So a demand arose for the eradication of the hitching rack. Not a unanimous demand, however. Some thought it ought to stay. It became an issue. The town was divided into pros and cons. Feeling ran high.

One July morning when the town awoke and looked for the hitching rack it wasn't there. The cons had come in the night and sawed it off and carried it away. There was great rejoicing on the part of the cons and great indignation on the part of the pros. There was talk of a special grand jury and a special term of court, but calmer counsels prevailed. There was an investigation, however, and charges were filed in a justice court against three men. They took a change of venue to Cassville. When the case was called the other day two of the defendants were unable to appear and a continuance was granted.

Meantime the feud still rages in Neosho. The County Court, which seems to be pro, refused to let the merchants have their annual harvest show on the 20-foot strip where the hitch rack used to be. But everybody hopes that when the case is settled feeling will die down and business will be resumed. And then there are the other towns, here and there, that still have hitching racks and don't know what to do with them.

It is reported that automobile production is off 20 per cent from last month. But does this mean that the saturation point has been reached? Hardly. It is said to mean only that many factories are being made over for a larger production capacity.

Technology's Influence on Politics

The battle for economic self-sufficiency has been at the source of most of the world's troubles; technology, by replacing the exchange of natural raw materials by the manufacture of artificial raw materials, can relieve friction and conflict among nations.

By DR. FRIEDRICH BERGIUS

Translated from the Revue Mondiale, Paris Social and Scientific Monthly, by the Living Age.

RECENT history has provided the human race with two forcible demonstrations of the fact that it is an indivisible economic whole. The first was provided by the continental blockades attempted during the Napoleonic wars; the second by the World War, which brutally compelled the nations to realize that the conditions of modern technical civilization make amicable international relations a necessity and that these relations cannot be severed without disaster.

There are only two ways for a modern nation to deal with the situation that nature has created by her capricious distribution of natural monopolies here and there about the political map. A nation must either become economically self-sufficient, or it must reach a complete understanding with those who control the raw materials beyond its boundaries.

The International Economic Commission at Geneva has absolutely proved that every effort to arrive at a strictly nationalistic economic policy will inevitably fail, unless the natural resources, economic system, and geographic situation of the nation in question are specially adapted to it. If nations, aware of this fact, nevertheless feel it necessary to make sacrifices to maintain their political independence and are willing to pay the price in such lower standards of living as will insure their economic systems against foreign competition, it becomes clear that it is not possible to reconcile national liberty with national well-being.

To attack the very root of this evil by putting an end to the existence of natural monopolies, by replacing the exchange of natural raw materials by the manufacture of artificial raw materials, seems to me the admirable and useful task of modern industrial technique. It alone is able to establish a national economy on a natural rather than an artificial basis, relying, not on protective tariffs and similar devices, but on genuine productive achievements.

The results already attained in the chemical transformation of coal into oil show clearly how pure scientific research and applied technology can unite to accomplish results in the realm of international relations. The ability to make oil out of coal enables many countries which have no natural oil deposits to remedy that lack by making use of the other raw materials and the labor supply that do exist within their own frontiers. True, it will be a long time before any European country can transform its factory equipment sufficiently to make all its own oil supply, but the immediate political results of the new process may be the same as if this equipment already existed. It is only necessary that each country shall understand that it is technically possible to make its own oil and shall have confidence in its own economic capacities. This will in itself be sufficient to prevent a large part of the political tension that has hitherto resulted from economic questions.

COMMERCIAL legislation and needlessly severe tariffs—especially protective tariffs laid on commodities which are badly needed—discourage friendly international relations. But this state of mind disappears the moment a nation knows that it can manufacture for itself the raw materials which it needs and for which it has previously had to depend on foreign lands.

To expand and improve political relationships by means of technical progress still remains a distant ideal, especially when one considers the present state of politics, the modern social structure, and the lessons of history. If we are ever to do so, we must get rid of certain prejudices which are deeply rooted in human nature. Not only must we increase technical knowledge, we must also spread the economic ideas here expressed if we are to increase the political security which results from the potential economic autonomy which technology promises. We must make sure that the idea is firmly grasped by the various nations.

The effectiveness of technical progress in this respect depends largely on politics and on an improvement of general culture. Scientists and technical men must not forget, therefore, the close relationship that exists between politics and economics. They are likely to do so because they frequently become specialists so early in life that they lose all capacity for seeing a problem in its entirety. And this brings us back to our point of departure.

To learn how to free international relations from the burden of national monopolies in raw materials; to persuade nations not to compete for new materials but merely to make sure of their own independence so far as raw materials are concerned—this is, as we have seen, in large measure a matter of intellectual training.

There is no need to exalt technology at the expense of history. Neither is there any need to exaggerate the importance of material considerations at the expense of spiritual considerations. In fact, there could be no worse mistake. What we are asking, on the contrary, is that technology should take on certain intellectual aspects in order that it may become conscious of its share, not only in industry, but also in world politics. Technology must always remain more or less material because it produces concrete material results. The very fact that technology does produce tangible results is what gives it its popular value and its value for propaganda purposes. Every idea demands visible symbols. The German nation, which, at the time of its greatest power, looked with pride at its glittering arms, must today have other symbols before its eyes if it is to believe in its own future.

The development of humanity will increase general culture. Human development will be completed by technical achievements, and technical achievements will also be completed by human development. We Germans love to hear ourselves called a people of poets and thinkers. But we must not forget that our greatest genius, Goethe, though he was filled with the spirit of ancient civilization, devoted his vast learning to the task of developing his country industrially, thereby showing how the politics of even a little German state could receive the imprint of the minds and culture of its leaders.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.

PRESIDENTS come and go, but Rudolph Forster, happily for all concerned, remains.

Forster knows more about the routine of the President's job than anybody else; when he tells them to sign on the dotted line, they sign. He entered the White House under McKinley as a stenographer in March, 1897, and he has been there without a break ever since. For a long time he has been the executive clerk—a modest title in no way commensurate with the importance of the office.—

The official directories rank him just under the President's secretary. Short of actually taking over the duties which the Constitution devolves upon the President, Forster can do anything that needs to be done in the executive offices. He has even been known to double for the President.

Once a waterway delegation from the Mississippi Valley called to see the President. They had a lengthy memorial to present, and the spokesman, a St. Louisan, had a long speech in his system. Neither the President nor his secretary was available. Forster stepped into the breach. Holding the memorial in his hand the spokesman began his speech. Every now and then he seemed to come to an end and Forster would reach for the document. The speaker would pull it back and go on. He told Forster all about the principal products of the great Mississippi Valley and its waterway needs. Forster heard him with grave courtesy, and at the end thanked the delegation and assured them that their request would receive due attention.

It is unsafe to predict the next Cabinet, but this you can bank on—Mr. Hoover will keep Rudolph Forster.—

MEN and women who served with Herbert Hoover in Europe during and after the war are planning to hold a reunion in Washington March 3 and 4. Needless to say, the climax of their meeting will be when "the chief" as he was always called by these workers, is inaugurated.

For the past several years these Hoover veterans have had reunions of what was originally known as the A. R. A. Association, composed of men and women who served in the Commission for Relief in Belgium and the American Relief Administration.

The reunion next March will be attended by members of the A. R. A. Association and by persons who worked overseas with the United States Food Administration, the United State Grain Corporation or the United States Sugar Equalization Board, or who served as European technical advisers.

LIKE the President, Senator Borah now has his regular press conferences, established at the request of the newspaper men themselves. They are unlike the White House affairs in that questions don't have to be submitted in writing.

Fully 25 men confronted the Senator at a recent session. "I see," he grinned, "that there is no news anywhere else in town today."

SENATOR Borah's favorite pastime is riding alone in Rock Creek Park. He also goes to the movies.

SUES FOR TITLE TO SITE ON WEST PINE AND GRAND

E. H. Engelmann Alleges He Has Contract With Methudy Co. For $150,000 Deal.

Suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by E. H. Engelmann to compel the Methudy Tire & Rubber Co., 3401 Olive street, to execute a title to him for realty at the southwest corner of Grand and West Pine boulevards, which was the former residence of the late A. H. Handlan and in more recent years the home of the Jefferson Club.

Engelmann alleges that on Nov. 29, 1927, the Methudy Co. signed a contract agreeing to sell the property to him for a consideration of $150,000, the deal to be closed when the company could perfect its title. Engelmann says he is willing to accept what title the company can give him and that he made an earnest money deposit of $5000, but the Methudy Co. has notified him it will no longer pursue its efforts to get a clear title and it proposes after Dec. 1 to sell its interest to another party.

The Methudy Co. purchased the property about two years ago from the trustees of the Handlan estate. Owing to litigation involving that estate the trustees have not been able to give a clear title to the purchaser. The consideration offered the Handlan heirs was approximately $130,000.

Marion C. Early, attorney for the Methudy Co., said that recently his client tendered a deed to Engelmann but he would not accept it because the company demanded the same rate of interest it had become obligated to pay the Handlan estate in event the trustees of that estate furnish a clear title.

FARM PRODUCTS 12 PER CENT BELOW VALUE OF 1909-14

Purchasing Power in Terms of Other Commodities Less Than Pre-War Average.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. — The purchasing power of farm products in terms of other commodities today was reported "within 12 per cent of the 1909-1914 pre-war average," by the Department of Agriculture.

The Bureau's report declared total crop production this year was 7.6 per cent above the average of the last 10 years. Production per capita was one-half of one per cent below the 10-year average, but the Bureau noted that gradual decrease of the rate of population increase should "temper agricultural expansion."

The potential demand for corn, the Bureau declared, appears to be about as great as that of last season, adding, "the crop this year was about 120,000,000 bushels more than last year's crop. The carry-over of 1927 crop," is continued, "was practically exhausted by last month so that there is not a great deal more corn on hand now than a year ago. Livestock industries have been a large factor in sustaining the general price level of farm products this fall."

Issues to Come Before Short Session of Congress

bility, and adequacy" of the proposed project. Its report has been given to the President and will be sent to Congress at the beginning of the session.

Farm Relief Troublesome.

Debates upon farm relief, of course, will consume much time; whether they will result in a bill freeing Hoover from his promise to call a special session if an adequate relief measure is not enacted, remains to be seen. The leaders in Congress are divided as to the desirability of a special session. Senator Borah, for example, believes that one is imperative, while Senator McNary, co-author of the McNary-Haugen bill, hopes that it can be avoided. Some are in favor of an extra session in the spring or fall, even though the short session may devise an acceptable farm relief measure, in order that early attention may be given to an upward tariff revision.

Senator McNary has prepared a bill providing for the creation of a Federal Farm Board to assist in the orderly marketing of farm crops through Government loans to co-operative associations. The bill, he says, carries out the idea of Hoover expressed in his campaign speeches, and if passed would make an extra session unnecessary. The bill is virtually the old McNary-Haugen bill with the equalization fee sections omitted. The equalization fee is generally regarded as dead, though Senator Brookhart of Iowa and Representative Dickinson of Iowa, prominent members of the farm bloc have announced that an effort will be made to attach the fee to any relief bill that may be offered.

As always, there is material for no end of a row over the farm question. When, moreover, the amount of other business before the short session is considered, together with the fact that about 70 Senators and Representatives will be singing their "swan songs," the difficulty of dealing with the problem in any way approaching the adequacy desired by Hoover and demanded by Senator Borah becomes increasingly evident. The difficulty can only be surmounted by a much greater degree of unanimity among the leaders than is now apparent.

No Action Likely on World Court.

The World Court probably will be the topic of fresh discussion in the Senate, but no new action is likely. There is pending in the Foreign Relations Committee a resolution, offered by Senator Gillett of Massachusetts suggesting to the President the advisability of consulting with the signatories to the court protocol, with a view of adjusting the differences over the Senate reservations. The Senate, it will be recalled, voted in 1926 to adhere to the court protocol, but with a series of reservations. One of these—No. 5—would have forbidden the Court, without consent of the United States to entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching "any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest." The foreign Powers who are members of the Court accepted the other reservations, but balked at this one.

It now appears that the object of the Gillett resolution—that of reopening with Europe the question of our adherence—is being realized. In effect, it has been explained that the President desires to clear his desk of he World Court question before he goes out of office. There is no prospect that the administration will ask the Senate to change its reservations, nor any present likelihood that the Senate would do so even if urged.

Muscle Shoals.

The Muscle Shoals question is seemingly as far from solution as ever. Senator Norris, author of the Government operation bill passed by Congress last May, regards it as futile to attempt to pass the bill over the pocket veto given it by the President. Norris holds that the President's action, or inaction, did not kill the bill, but that in fact it is now a law. It is his contention that a pocket veto can be given only at the end of the final session of Congress and not at the end of any earlier session. This question is now on the way to the Supreme Court for determination in another case. Norris is awaiting the court's decision before initiating any new action in relation to the Shoals. President Coolidge, who always has opposed Government operation of the project, has indicated that he would like to see the short session authorize its leasing to private interests. The opposition to all previous leasing bills leaves no room for doubt that any such proposal, so far as the present Congress is concerned, would be doomed to failure. What the next administration will be able to obtain from a Congress more "regular" in both branches is another question.

Other Legislation.

Numerous other legislative questions of wide interest will be up for decision. Proposed waterway legislation will include supplemental flood control measures, the biennial rivers and harbors bill and an appropriation of $4,000,000 for the purchase of additional equipment for the government's Inland Waterways Corporation. Bills relating to unemployment and the use of injunctions in labor disputes will be considered, but so complex are the problems involved, it is likely that all the important proposals of this character will be passed along to the next Congress.

The Parker-Fess bill, designed to facilitate voluntary railroad consolidations, will again be pressed, and its authors express confidence that it will be passed in the short session. This is the most important railroad measure now before Congress.

Some additional radio legislation is likely, as most of the Federal Radio Commission's powers, under present law, are due to pass automatically to the Department of Commerce on March 16. It is expected there will be a temporary extension of the Radio Commission's authority, in order that the whole question of radio control may be left to the new administration and the new Congress.

Mascagni Rates Verdi First.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Pietro Mascagni, author of "Cavaleria Rusticana," calls Verdi the greatest composer the world has ever known. "Verdi's simplicity, the spontaneous melody of his works," says Mascagni, "make him the master of modern Italian music. I believe there has never existed a greater composer." He rated famous composers in this order: Verdi, Beethoven, Liszt and Wagner.

Mark Twain As Seen in His Letters to the doctor and asked him to annul my requirement. It didn't seem to occur to her that if she should get supreme authority safely lodged in the doctor there would still be a weak spot, because I could discharge the doctor.

"Mrs. Clemens is getting along pretty well and is very cheerful. She does not know that she is not expected to be up and around for months. But she probably suspects it, for Clara says she is intolerably bright and smart and divines most things that are going on."

The subsequent letters are few in number and with one or two exceptions extremely brief. They are addressed mostly to "Doctor Jim," and are signed variously "S. L. Clemens," or simply "SLC," once "Mark" and occasionally "The Old Doctor."

On Aug. 31, 1905, he wrote to "Dear Madame Katherine," from Dublin, N. H.: "I am just back from a gout-smitten three weeks' visit to Clara in her rest cure in Norfolk, Conn., and short as the distance is I find the traveling worse than the gout. I shall take no more journeys."

The Last Letter.

And then a last poignant letter, written on March 24, 1910, from Bermuda, after his wife, Olivia, and two daughters had died. "Dear Cousin Katherine," he wrote, "I am grateful for the prayers of those good nuns, and for yours. They have already answered themselves in giving me a deep pleasure.

"I have lost that dear Jean, and my sorrow lies heavy upon me—but I would not bring her back if I could. Nor Livy, nor Susy. Death is the most precious of all the gifts that life has for us—and it is theirs. Peace to their sacred ashes.

"About a month hence I shall be homeward bound, after half a year's sojourn in these Islands of the Blest."

In less than a month, Mark Twain was "homeward bound," for on April 21, 1910, he died.

Memorial Service Tuesday.

The ninety-third anniversary of the author's birth occurred Friday and the opening ceremonies at the Jefferson Memorial Tuesday evening will be in the nature of a birthday observance. Edgar Curtis Taylor, assistant professor of English at Washington University, will speak on "Mark Twain's Place in American Literature," and the Rev. C. J. Armstrong, pastor of the First Christian Church, Hannibal, Mo., will discuss the many years he has devoted to searching out and transcribing Mark Twain anecdotes and history.

Besides the "Doctor Jim" letters the exhibition includes acceptances of honorary office in the Mark Twain Society, autographed with such noted names as Hamsun, Frost, Shaw, Lagerlof, Dunsany, Von Luckner, Amundsen, Sothern, Gosse, Kipling, Drinkwater, Housman and Stephen Leacock.

The letter of Romain Rolland, who characteristically stated that he was immeasurably honored but could not accept an office in the same group with Mussolini, and George Bernard Shaw's description of two brief meetings with the famous American, are of particular interest.

Bernard Shaw's Recollection.

After telling of a hurried first encounter at a railway station, Shaw continued: "Some days later he walked into our flat in Adelphi terrace. Our parlor maid, though she did not know who he was, was so overwhelmed by his personality that she admitted him unquestioned and unannounced, like the statue of the Commandant.

"He had a complete gift of intimacy which enabled us to treat one another as though we had known one another all our lives, as indeed I had known him through his early books, which I had read and reveled in before I was 12 years old.

"As to what impression he made on me, all I can say is that he was himself and exactly what I expected. We go on together perfectly."

Other items in the exhibition, which will continue through February, include a copy of a river pilot's license issued to Samuel Clemens, on April 9, 1859, before the young author had adopted the leadsman's cry, "Mark Twain!" for a pen-name; Clemens' letter accepting honorary membership in the Missouri Historical Society, dated 1903; a collection of 75 volumes of first editions, loaned by American and British publishers, and a bust of the author by Louis Potter, loaned by the Wadsworth Atheneum and Morgan Memorial of Hartford, Conn.

Other Relics.

There are also many newspaper clippings and photographs of places which have assumed the nature of shrines because of Mark Twain's one-time presence there. There are several photographic reminders of his sojourn in California where he created the famous "Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" as a young man, and an amusing dinner menu prepared especially for a gathering at the old Lick House in San Francisco, May 16, 1868.

"A grand banquet," says the imposing inscription, "given by Messrs. Clemens and Pierson at the expense of the proprietors of the hotel to their customary dinner companions." The diagram of a table is printed below with places marked with the names of eight persons, including the hosts.

Croatian Liquor Tax Successful.

ZAGREB, Jugo-Slavia, Dec. 1.—A tax on alcoholic drinks to improve educational facilities has been successful in Croatia. The municipal council received a report of the building of new schools out of funds raised by taxing wines and spirits. It is planned to construct fifty new buildings during the next year. Steven Raditch, before his death, informed his countrymen that there were 20,000 Croatian children without school facilities of any kind and urged immediate action.

SEEKS $50,000 FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Bookkeeper Charges Springfield, Mo., Salesman Refused to Wed Her After Several Delays.

Suit for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise to marry has been filed in Circuit Court by Miss LaVerne Foresman, a bookkeeper, of 3862 Washington boulevard, against George L. Smith, traveling salesman for a cereal concern, who resides at Springfield, Mo.

The petition states Miss Foresman met Smith in November, 1927, that he proposed marriage a short time later, and subsequently gave her a diamond engagement ring. The marriage date was postponed several times at Smith's instance, according to Miss Foresman, and last September he informed her he had no intention of marrying her.

Miss Foresman states in her suit that the resulting humiliation affected her health. She alleges he owns property at Springfield valued at $100,000.

Smith failed for the thrid time yesterday to appear at the office of L. M. Feigenbaum, attorney for Miss Foresman, to give his deposition. Feighenbaum plans to have Smith cited for contempt and have him brought here from Springfield to testify.

Feigenbaum says he has as evidence a score of letters written by Smith to Miss Foresman, in which she is addressed as "Dear Wife." Several of the letters mention plans for a home and all contain terms of endearment. Feigenbaum also has a report from a detective agency describing Smith as being "about 45 years old and married." Smith is not charged with having been married at the time he proposed to Miss Foresman in her petition, as this information was gained later, according to Feigenbaum.

FOLEY DENIES COUNTY INDICTMENTS ARE VALID

His Appeal to Supreme Court Holds Up His Trial for Gambling.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 1.—An attack upon legality of the proceedings of the special grand jury convened in St. Louis County to investigate gambling and other law violations, which, if successful, would invalidate all indictments returned by the grand jury, was begun today in the State Supreme Court by attorneys for Tony Foley, gambling house operator, and Thomas Whitelaw.

They filed an application for a writ of prohibition to restrain Circuit Judge Kiskaddon from proceeding with the trial of Foley and Whitelaw upon a charge of operating gambling devices, on the ground the grand jury was convened illegally and that its proceedings were not carried on legally.

The Supreme Court sent a telegraphic notice to Judge Kiskaddon to take no action in the case until the higher court had disposed of the application.

It is contended in the application that the action of Circuit Judge Mulloy in appointing an elisor of the court to summon the grand jury, after he had disqualified Sheriff Wilmas and Coroner Bopp, was not legal. It is asserted that under Section 6614 of the revised statues, the Circuit Judge must designate the County Court to impanel a grand jury, if the Sheriff and Coroner have been disqualified.

The appointment of John A. Nolan as a special prosecutor, to assist the grand jury, also is attacked, and it is contended that the presence of Nolan in the grand jury room invalidated the proceedings. If these contentions are sustained the indictments are void. The application was filed by Jesse L. England and Philip A. Foley, attorneys for Tony Foley and Whitelaw. Until the grand jury began its inquiry Foley conducted the Los Angeles Club on the Manchester road and another gambling house in Wellston.

REFORMATORY FUGITIVE WHO SHOT PHONE GIRL RETAKEN

Edward Burleson, Serving 10-Year Term, and Youth Escaped From Boonville Wednesday Night.

Edward Burleson, 22 years old, of St. Louis County, who escaped Wednesday with a youth from the Boonville reformatory, where he is serving 10 years for shooting Miss Mildred Boyd, 20, 2907 Kossuth avenue, a telephone operator, last December, when she refused to marry him, was captured Friday and returned to the reformatory.

Burleson and Arthur Owens, a delinquent youth of St. Joseph, Mo., walked away from the reformatory green house, where they were employed, Wednesday night. They were caught by reformatory officers while walking on Highway No. 40, about 30 miles west of Boonville. As a result of the escape both prisoners will lose their easy jobs in the greenhouse and will be sent to the rock quarry, Superintendent Harrison announced.

Miss Boyd, who was shot in the head, recovered, and Burleson was permitted to plead guilty to assault to kill before Circuit Judge Mulloy at Clayton last July. He was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary, but was sent to the reformatory instead because of the crowded condition of the prison.

Burleson shot Miss Boyd in an automobile near Spanish Lake and threw her in a ditch, where she was found by passersby. He has served a previous prison sentence for assault to kill, growing out of the shooting of a youth, and was sentenced to prison at Benton, Ill., in 1922 for burglary, and paroled because of his youth.

POLICE CAMPAIGN AGAINST FRUIT CAKE PUNCHBOARDS

Four Arrests as Probationary Officers Play Boards, Incidentally Winning Two Cakes.

The combined gambling and liquor squads of the Police Department launched a pre-Christmas campaign Friday against operators of punchboard offering fruit cakes as prizes. The liquor group joined the other merely to stop the gambling and not on the theory that brandy was an ingredient of the cakes.

Probationary policemen were sent into stores to punch the boards and arrest the persons in charge. At the end of the day, four boards had been punched, several dollars had been spent, two cakes had been won and four proprietors and clerks had been taken in custody.

Those arrested were Benjamin L. Gregory, 3908 Blair avenue; Frank Lowery, 4001 North Twenty-second street; Erwin Wycoff, 1126 Montgomery street, Luther Hale, 1926 Hickory street.

FLEES FROM FIRE, BREAKS ARM

William Purcell Feared Home Would Catch, but It Did Not.

William Purcell's left arm was fractured when he stumbled and fell in his haste to leave his home, which was threatened by fire that destroyed a public garage across the road at Ellisville, St. Louis County, at 3 a. m. yesterday.

The garage and its contents, including two automobiles belonging to Carl Bauer, the proprietor, were destroyed with a loss of $10,000, partly insured. The fire did not reach Purcell's home. The cause of the fire was not determined.

ALEXANDER M. LEWIS FUNERAL TOMORROW

Services for Assistant Vice President of Liberty Central Trust at 10:30 A. M.

Alexander M. Lewis, 62 years old, assistant vice president of the Liberty Central Trust Co., died at St. Luke's Hospital early yesterday of septic pneumonia, which followed an abdominal operation.

The body will be at an undertaking establishment at 3621 Olive street until tomorrow morning, when funeral services will be held from the Lewis home, 533 Clara avenue, at 10:30 o'clock. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mr. Lewis was a witness in the grand jury investigation in 1926 of a $10,000 fund that had been placed in escrow with him pending Circuit Judge Ittner's decision in favor of slot machines. Judge Ittner's part in this case was a factor in his recent defeat when he sought re-election.

For 20 years Mr. Lewis was employed at the old courthouse. At one time he served as Marshal of the St. Louis Court of Appeals and later he became a deputy under his father, who was Circuit Clerk. He continued for years in this position, principally as a courtroom clerk, and was made chief deputy under the administration of Circuit Clerk Fred H. Kreismann. He was well liked by lawyers, reporters and the public generally.

Twelve years ago he became an officer of the old Central Bank, which was later merged into the present Liberty Central. His health began to fail early this year, but he did not enter the hospital until Sunday. An operation for the removal of stomach ulcers was performed Tuesday.

Mr. Lewis was a expert fisherman, usually spending his summers at Northern lake resorts. Years ago he was a champion bicycle racer.

Seevral months ago Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were awakened one night and captured a burglar who was hiding in their house. They let him go after giving him a lecture and exacting a promise to reform.

Mr. Lewis is survived by his widow, Mrs. May Cumming Lewis, and two sons, Monroe C. (Pete) Lewis, former Washington University football star, and John G. Lewis.

Edgar Guest to Speak.

Edgar A. Guest, "The People's Poet," and author of such works as "Heap O' Livin," will address the Chamber of Commerce and the City Club at the City Club dining room at 1 p. m. Tuesday.

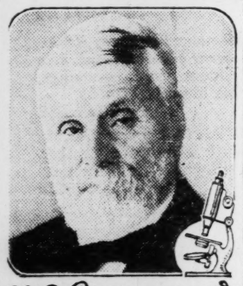
Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy



W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit-forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation. It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person.

Get a bottle today, at any drug store and observe these three rules of health. Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just use special coupon below:

TUBERCULOSIS RELIEF EXPANSION ADVOCATED

Doctor's Report to Society Urges More Beds at Koch Hospital, Additional Nurses.

Recommendations for increased facilities in the city to cope with tuberculosis—the addition of 467 beds at Koch Hospital, more doctors for tuberculosis clinics and the addition of nurses to the municipal staff trained for this disease—were outlined in a report read yesterday before the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis by Dr. Howard H. Bell, director of tuberculosis relief in the city.

The increase in beds recommended for Koch Hospital, Dr. Bell said, would provide for the 150 patients now on the waiting list and would relieve the present overcrowded condition of the hospital. There are 117 more patients at the Koch institution, Dr. Bell pointed out, than the buildings were designed to accommodate.

Need at City Hospitals.

"It is highly imperative to have wards also at the city hospitals for advanced and terminal cases of tuberculosis, a need which should hold first place in extension programs," he said. "Adequate provision in this connection would lessen the demands for beds at Koch Hospital. City Hospitals No. 1 and No. 2 each should have at least 100 beds for tuberculosis patients."

Of the 21 tuberculosis clinics conducted each week by the City Health Department, Dr. Bell said: "These clinics have been overcrowded, with the result that two additional weekly clinics will be opened in December, but the need for further expansion is urgent. They have been effective in discovering early cases of tuberculosis.

"The American Public Health survey made recently in St. Louis exposed the need for more nurses, with an associated increase in home visits. Since the survey, 24 municipal nurses have been added to the staff, eight or whom are financed by the Tuberculosis and Health Society, making a total of 77 nurses. Home visits have more than doubled. It is imperative, however, that the nursing personnel be increased each year until we reach a minimum of one to every 8000 population."

Training in Diagnosis.

Other recommendations made by Dr. Bell were vocational training instead of occupational therapy for tuberculosis patients in hospitals and provision at Koch Hospital for Negro internes to have training in the diagnosis of tuberculosis.

The death rate for the Negro population, the report showed, is five times that of the white population. A total of 790 deaths was recorded for 1927, the death rate for whites being 65.4 per 100,000, while that of the Negro population was 333.3 per 100,000. A reduction of more than one-half has been noted in the tuberculosis death rate here since 1910, Dr. Bell said.

'Fire Insurance Rate Computation.'

"Fire Insurance Rate Computation" will be the subject of an address by W. Ayton Cox, insurance rate expert with the Missouri Inspection Bureau, before the Traffic Club at a luncheon at the City Club tomorrow.

Queenie Smith

Comes back to the American in "Hit the Deck."

A Week of Musical Comedy

Ed Wynn Brings His "Manhattan Mary" to the Shubert and the American Presents a Return Engagement of the Tuneful "Hit the Deck" With Queenie Smith as the Star—The Case Of Barbara Stanwyck, a Star in the Making.

BY H. H. NIEMEYER

BOTH the American and Shubert swing back into musical comedy tonight with the latter house presenting Ed Wynn in "Manhattan Mary" and the downtown theater offering a return engagement of the popular "Hit the Deck" with Queenie Smith and Charles Purcell again in the leading roles. "Manhattan Mary" comes here intact from a run of one full year in New York and four months in Chicago. Along with the New York and Chicago company it brings, incidentally, the admission price of $4.40, a figure not likely to prove as pleasing to St. Louis audiences as some of the others on the program.

Wynn plays the role of Crickets, a waiter in a Broadway night club, who through an unusually funny chain of circumstance, becomes the leader of the Hudson Dusters, a gang of crooks. How the tortoise-shelled humorist utilizes these hard-boiled citizens to further a love affair makes the story of the piece. The book and lyrics are by B. G. De Sylva, Lew Brown, Ray Henderson, William K. Wells, and George White.

THE story of the nautical "Hit the Deck" is thoroughly familiar to local audiences for the musical play did a tremendous business here on the occasion of its previous visit. Then, as now, Queenie Smith headed the cast. Little Miss Smith hails from Texas, which may be the wide open spaces to a man's man but, to a young woman with stage aspirations its limits are somewhat too definitely confining.

As a child prodigy, Queenie was a big attraction at the community functions. Vaudeville and the movies had already eradicated the spoken drama from the metropolises of the Lone Star State and Mother Smith decided that if her offspring must cast her rays to the far reaches of the theatrical horizon that Broadway was the true object of her ambitious lariat.

So when Queenie was fourteen she and her mother found themselves in New York and lost no time in visiting the Metropolitan Opera House where the girl was apprenticed to the ballet ranks. There she so developed her talent for dancing that at the end of three years she was given an opportunity to appear in "Aida" and carried off her assignment with honors. Later she rather creditably replaced the beautiful Rosina Galli, imported premier danseuse.

But the spirit of fun that causes the comedienne to love her job with "Hit the Deck" would not be downed and it was then that Miss Smith started to reverse. She accepted an offer to appear in "Roly Boly Eyes" and the verdict was a repetition of that of the Diamond Horseshoe patrons of the Metropolitan Opera. Came then another musical comedy, "Just Because" after which she tripped her lightest fantastic in "Orange Blossoms," where Edward Royce discovered her comedy value. Next was "Helen of Troy, N. Y.," after which followed "Tip Toes" and then "Hit the Deck."

ST. LOUIS audiences had an opportunity to see last week, for the first time within their recollection, in Barbara Stanwyck, a young woman who seems destined to become the leading dramatic actress of the times. Barring accidents—and the movies—she will become the successor of the few and fading women stars of the legitimate stage today almost beyond a doubt for she has everything demanded by playgoers in addition to an ability which was born with her, for she has had no training or teaching to fit her for the place she has made for herself. Her appearance here in "Burlesque" during the past week was not really her introduction to St. Louis. Three seasons ago she was one of the show girls in Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" with nothing to do but look pretty, a task which she accomplished without any difficulty. Before that time she had worked in cabaret shows in New York, singing and dancing. Year before last Willard Mack, somehow, got the impression that she could act and he gave her a part in a drama of his own called "The Noose." It was one of those plays which everyone liked and nobody went to see and after a few weeks' struggle it gave up the ghost. Among the few who did witness a performance of "The Noose," however, was another New York producer, Arthur Hopkins. When he was preparing to put "Burlesque" on the stage he needed a woman who could dance, sing after a fashion, and, at the same time, be able to portray a tensely dramatic role. Miss Stanwyck seemed to fill the bill and was given the part. She was an instantaneous hit and next season is to find her as a star in her own name in a new drama.

There is the IF of the movies to be taken into account. The new-fangled talking cinema is reaching out for actresses who can talk and already the coast magnates are after her with tempting offers which, so far, she has turned down. The movies mean a great deal of money—Warner Brothers offered her $60,000 to make a single picture—but the opportunity for triumphs on the legitimate stage are so bright at this particular time that this young woman of less than 21 years will, in all probability, remain where she is and take her place among the really fine stars of the dramatic stage.

W. U. Little Theater To Give Buchanan's "A Woman's Way"

THE LITTLE THEATER of Washington University will present "A Woman's Way," by Thompson Buchanan at the Artists' Guild on Dec. 6 and 7. This is the sixth semiannual play of the organization, all of which have been extremely successful.

The play deals with the efforts of a young wife to win back her husband who is infatuated with a wealthy widow. She invites her rival to a family dinner and the scenes during and following dinner are not only interesting but humorous because all the men at the dinner have been infatuated with the widow at some previous time. Their efforts to conceal the facts of the affairs from their wives give rise to several amusing incidents.

Ed Wynn

He's here with "Manhattan Mary," at the Shubert.

Day by Day In New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.

Elsie Janis, with all her varied talents, has become one of the leading short story writers. She is now writing for three of the big magazines and other editors are clamoring for her stuff. She has a direct and easy style and a dramatic sense of plot. Elsie Janis has done much to add a wholesome lustre to the stage and its people.

It is surprising most people think anyone who has written a book is a brilliant conversationalist and a bright spot at any gathering. Some of the most uninteresting and colorless individuals I know have not only written one book but several. And some of them have been best sellers.

They were discussing the 50-pound flesh reduction feat of Paul Whiteman in six months' time. "Eighty pounds," sneered a cynic. "He could take that much off his neck."

There is a story of a Long Island couple buying an airplane. They hired a pilot to teach them to fly and the wife brightly suggested: "I think we should learn all about parachute jumping so in case anything happened we could be in practice."

"Practice?" exclaimed the pilot. "Lady, you got to be perfect the first time."

J. P. McEvoy's "Americana" is the sophisticated revue of the season. It burlesques the manners of the times hilariously and features Frances Gershwin, a sister of the famous composer, George Gershwin.

The former Irene Castle has established a beautiful kennel for homeless dogs called "Orphans of the Storm" at Deerfield, Ill., supported by private contributions. A stray dog rescued from a policeman's bullet is now the constant companion of Mrs. McLaughlin's (Irene Castle) daughter. The former darling of Broadway is devoted to dumb animals and has done much in Chicago to aid in alleviating their suffering. And it is no wonder she is so well beloved.

Short Shavings: A certain New Yorker almost entirely bald receives a set of military hairbrushes every Christmas from his divorced wife. . . . Four of the biggest book publishing concerns now have women press agents. . . . Three pearl derbies were seen on Broadway in an hour's walk. . . . Earl Carroll has never been inside his business office since his return from prison. . . . He has fitted up an office back stage.

Eddie Peabody

The new master of ceremonies at the Missouri Theater.

Masters and Movie Noises

Eddie Peabody, Who Has Come to the Missouri, Frank Fay in New York and Brooke Johns in Chicago Have No Corner on Strange Sounds Now That the Sound Films Are Flooding the Cinema Palaces of the Country.

THE all-star parade of Masters of Ceremonies reaches another milestone at the Missouri this week where Eddie Peabody, the Coast Defender, makes his début. Peabody is the third celebrity of his line to come to the Missouri, Brooke Johns and Frank Fay having been numbers one and two, respectively. Johns is now at the Oriental Theater in Chicago and Frank Fay opened at the Paramount in New York yesterday.

It is interesting to observe the many contrasts that exist between Peabody and his two predecessors. Physically, Peabody is a bantam weight whose stage characterization is that of an unsophisticated youth. He is shy and might be termed a rube type. Contrast this against the suave subtlety of Frank Fay, or the affable gab of Brooke Johns. Both Fay and Johns were big men and were essentially actors rather than musicians.

Peabody is a musician. In fact, he is one of the most unusual of musicians. When he arrived in St. Louis, the baggage car of his train was loaded with exactly 38 instruments, all different, and all mastered by Peabody. Some years ago when Paul Whiteman was appearing in concert, a young man named Ross Gorman received much publicity when, in one of Mr. Whiteman's selections, he picked up and played 18 different instruments. He is now a piker. Peabody is 20 up on Gorman and Gorman formerly held the world's championship.

Furthermore, Peabody is accomplished enough to stand before an audience and solo each of these instruments. His original love was the banjo and his mastery of it has made him one of vaudeville's outstanding entertainers.

PEABODY, Fay, Johns and the other less famous masters of ceremonies have no corner on the noise-making in movie houses by any means. Pictures are going talkie with great rapidity now and there is hardly a film in the making which has not, at least, the sound of horses hoofs, the buzzing of an airplane or the moaning of a blues singer. Pictures made before the sound effects became popular have been dragged back to the studios and had their squeaks made audible but, strange to say, silence is one of the essentials in the making of sound motion pictures and sound, in generous quantities, goes into the make-up of silent films.

Action in a silent picture starts with an outburst of sound. In the sound picture it begins in dead silence.

In the silent picture, the director calls "Camera!" Immediately there is the click of the cameras. The set musicians strike up tunes on their instruments, and with an accompaniment of sound the silent picture is in production.

Action on the sound stages is heralded by a silence that has in it something eerie.

Great doors are rolled shut. Outside the sound stage a horn rings out its mellow warning to nearby carpenters to cease their hammering. There is the shrill of a whistle.

On the set, a man at a table responds to the signals of colored lights. He speaks into a telephone. "Interlock!" is the word he uses. It means that the cameras and sound recording apparatus are in synchrony.

"Quiet, please," the man at the monitor table adds.

Then instead of calling "camera," the director signals with his arm.

In that way, amidst quiet that can actually be felt, action commences on sound pictures.

ALTHOUGH there are certain striking differences in the physical appearance of the talking and silent picture sets, these are not so marked as the apparently contradictory uses of sound and dead quiet.

When one gets accustomed to the tank-like camera booths, the monitor table, and the suspended microphones, it isn't hard to recognize the typical motion picture set on the sound stages.

There are the canvas-backed chairs for the director and principal members of the cast on the set. There is the script clerk with her notes and pencil. Electricians adjust the incandescent lights, and there are hurrying property men. Only the set musicians are absent.

In the preparation for filming of a scene there is again little difference between the sets of sound and silent pictures.

The same jargon of commands, the identical orderly bustle and the usual hum of conversation can be heard on the sound stage set. It is when everything is ready for action that the great change comes.

On one set there is a roar of song, or a burst of laughter, perhaps the sounds of revelry in a cabaret. People a city square away hear this "silent" picture in the making.

On another lot the actors wait in dense silence for the director's

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.

THE unexpected postponement of the first performance of a new play enabled me to fulfill my ambition to see Mr. Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" acted at the John Golden Theater. The play has been running for nearly a year, but its drawing power remains undiminished, and I found the janitors announcing to belated visitors that there was "standing room only." So far as I could see, all who were present in the theater before the dinner interval were, with the exception of a lady and gentleman who sat immediately in front of me, present after the dinner interval. I do not wonder at this. Mr. O'Neill's play is not the masterpiece which it has been proclaimed. There is more beauty in his early play, "Beyond the Horizon," than there is in "Strange Interlude"—and a deeper sense of life and frustration. The lyrical quality which seems steadily to be disappearing from his work—it is not present at all in "Strange Interlude"—was more evident in "The Hairy Ape" than in anything he has written lately, with the possible exception of a very fine, but ramshackle, piece called "The Fountain." To me, who count myself among the earliest and warmest of Mr. O'Neill's admirers, the decline of his work began when he wrote "Desire Under the Elms," a play in which people are reduced below the level of the beasts. Since the production of that piece, the poet in Mr. O'Neill has steadily dropped out of sight. What remains is a highly skillful theatrical craftsman. Mr. O'Neill has an unusually keen sense of the theater, as, indeed, he ought to have considering his parentage; and it is his flair for a situation and an effective curtain which enables him to seize and keep the attention of his audience. I have not seen "Desire Under the Elms" acted, but in reading it, although I loathed it, I realized that it was a remarkably good acting play. "Strange Interlude" is not a great play; it is not even the best play that Mr. O'Neill has written; but it is uncommonly "good theater." Mr. O'Neill has marvelously won the respect and affection of the highbrows by the skill with which he performs the tricks which, when they are performed by Sardou and Pinero, cause the highbrows to shriek in derision. The intellectual and spiritual content of "Strange Interlude" is no greater than that of "Diplomacy" or "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." Sarah Bernhardt frequently played the part of Nina Leeds long before Mr. O'Neill wrote it.

OTHER explanations of the singular success of this play have been offered, and I do not doubt that each of them has some warrant. It is probably true that the "stunt" in the performance; curtain rise at 5:30 p. m., a dinner intermission of 75 minutes, and the return to the theater after an airing in the street, excites the interest of those shallowpates who are excited by such things. It is probably true, also, that the mere length of the play makes some people believe that they are getting unusually good value for their money, and I am very certain that the bluntness with which Mr. O'Neill refers to adultery and physical facts attracts others. It accounted, no doubt, for a young lady who sat on the other side of one of the aisles from me, for she giggled excessively throughout the performance.

But none of these explanations, nor all of them together, account for the long hold which the play has kept on popular regard. A "stunt," because it is a "stunt," is a short lived attraction, and the number of persons who are willing to sit for several hours in the hope of hearing the physical facts of life mentioned once or twice cannot be large. It is, no doubt, vanity which makes me prefer my own explanation to those that have been offered to me. Mr. O'Neill is undeniably a master of theater craft. He has an instinct for a scene or a situation which is as sure as Ibsen's. But he is no Ibsen. Let anyone who doubts this, go first to the John Golden Theater to see "Strange Interlude," and then to the Forty-ninth Street Theater to see "The Wild Duck."

MR. O'NEILL has always been a bad starter and a bad finisher. Whether the dull opening of "Anna Christie" is deliberately devised in obedience to some theory of realism I do not know, but the dullness is there. The first two parts of "The Fountain," a play which contains some of the loveliest writing Mr. O'Neill has yet achieved, could be scrapped without any loss to the theme, with, indeed, great advantage to it. In this play Mr. O'Neill, with a wilfulness that is almost heroic, introduces a vital character in a singularly casual manner in the last moment or two of the last act, without any previous reference to him. He seems at times to take a delight in perverting his sense of the theater so that he appears to the superficial observer not to have any sense of the theater at all. But that is only his fun! "Strange Interlude" logically ends with the seventh act when Nina sits down on the sofa beside her husband and thinks aloud:

"I wonder if I shall ever have the courage to tell this fool the truth!" There is, I protest before high heaven, no need to add another word to the play after that thought has been uttered. The two acts which follow the seventh act add nothing whatever to the play. They are mere verbiage, cluttering up the stage with effect, and, in the last act, adding an incident which is incredible; the incident of the boy Gordon striking his father in the face. The cruel strain in Mr. O'Neill is apparent in this incident. On the night on which I saw the play performed, many members of the audience cried out "Oh!" when the boy struck Ned, and that

Works of Living Composers For the Symphony Program

Oberhoffer to Offer Three Numbers New to St. Louis Audiences at the Pair of Concerts This Week.

LIVING composers alone are to be represented on the program Emil Oberhoffer, guest conductor, will present with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week. Russian, French, Italian and American composers are represented. Three of the works are new to symphony audiences.

The novelties are Prokofieff's "Symphony Classique," and the concert suite from his opera "The Love of Three Oranges," together with the "Feast of the Spider" a suite from a ballet pantomime by that interesting Frenchman.

Together with these will be played the overture of Wolf-Ferrari's opera "The Secret of Suzanne" which opens the program, and the symphonic poem, "Mississippi" by Dr. Ernest R. Kroeger of St. Louis.

Back of four of the five works is an interesting story. Suzanne's Secret, much more horrifying in those days than these, was that she smoked. Not exactly ultra-modern either in conception of character, then, is Wolf-Ferrari's example of the Italian operatic overture.

Prokofieff's suite from "The Love of Three Oranges" embraces four movements, the one descriptive of the droll figures which set the stage before the operatic action, each group of which clamors loudly for the character of play it wants. The second is a love episode between the Prince and the Princess who finally, after enchantments and missadventures, win happiness. The third is a scherzo, and the fourth a march which in the opera is heard again and again, much like a leading motive.

Dr. Kroeger's "Mississippi" is a tone picture of the river, beside which he was born and on the banks of which he has spent his life. It has been played by the St. Louis orchestra before, and by the Minneapolis and Boston People's orchestra—the last early this season in the course of Frederick Fischer's most successful appearance as guest conductor there. Beginning in the Far North with the tiny rivulet, the music flows along gaining in volume until the muddy waters of the Missouri enter and then, sweeps by St. Louis and southward on to the gulf.

Prokofieff's "Classic" Symphony is, according to the composer, an effort to arrive at a Twentieth Century Mozart—that is to build a symphony along classic lines, such as Mozart would have done had he had the orchestral resources and been familiar with the rhythms of modern life.

In the "Feast of the Spider" Roussel, tells in music the story of the weaving of the web, and of the various adventurgs of insect life centered thereabout until in the end the spider is the victim of her intended victim and lies stabbed by a preying mantis.

The program is one of the most interesting in many respects of the current season because of the novelties it presents, and Mr. Oberhoffer brings to the presentation of the modern French and Russian works the insight gained by their study with the composers during his season in Paris earlier this year.

In detail the program is:

Symphony "Classique" ..... Prokofieff

The programs of these recitals will be much lighter in character than the usual organ recital, the numbers being chosen for the entertainment of the average music lover who is not trained in the technicalities of organ playing, but who enjoys music which is melodious and tuneful. These recitals will begin at 3 p. m. and are approximately an hour and a quarter in length.

The Bel Canto Choral Club, since the closing of St. George's Church, has been holding its rehearsals, under the direction of O. Wade Fallert, in the chapel of Kingshighway Presbyterian Church, Wednesday mornings, under the presidency of Mrs. R. A. Turner. A bridge party will be given for the benefit of the club in Nugent's Auditorium, Friday from 2 to 5.

On next Saturday evening in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School on Hartford street, two blocks east of Grand boulevard, the orchestra of the Philharmonic Society of St. Louis, Frank Gecks, conductor, will give its first concert of the season with Miss Pauline Elizabeth Bug, contralto, as the soloist, who will sing two song groups, accompaniment on the piano by Mrs. Frank Habig. Miss Bug is a winner of the elimination contest held recently at the Congress Hotel under Atwater Kent auspices.

The concert is the Philharmonic Society's contribution in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Franz Schubert, and will be the finale of the observances held in St. Louis, one of the most important of which was the program given before an audience of 5000 listeners at Scottish Rite Cathedral on Nov. 11 on which occasion the Philharmonic Society's orchestra contributed Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony and the Marche Militaire, numbers that are to be repeated at the event of Dec. 8. Manuel and Williamson, duo pianists and harpsichordists will have their introduction to St. Louis on Tuesday, Dec. 11, at the Odeon under the auspices of the Civic Music League. The present flair for the revival of antique instruments, to conform with a true presentation of the music written in the time of Bach, has made possible the revival of the practically unknown compositions written for two harpsichords. Manuel and Williamson, both young men, came upon the adoption of the harpsichord due to the failure of their own instruments (piano) to arrive for a concert and the necessity of playing the program on small size pianos. The fine tone suggested the thought of adopting the harpsichord for the old masters, a departure which has won for them the serious consideration of music lovers.

The Jessie L. Gaynor Choral Club of Webster Groves is giving a Sacred Concert on Sunday evening, Dec. 9, at the Presbyterian Church, Gore and Lockwood avenues. This is their first offering in this season's work and is open to the public.

The Oratorio Society of St. Louis, a body of about 200 Lutheran choristers from the various churches here, will give their first church concert of the season on the night of Dec. 9, at Grace Lutheran Church, St. Louis and Garrison avenues. Conductor William B. Heyne, the founder of the society, has chosen several gems from Handel's Christmas oratorio, "The Messiah" to constitute the Christmas programs. The following soloists from the ranks of the society have been chosen to carry the solo parts: Miss Clara Priep, soprano; Miss Lorene Altheide, contralto, and George Gullixson, tenor. Lambert Mennemeyer will be the organist. All music lovers are invited and there will be no admission charge. The society plans to make a tour of Lutheran churches outside of St. Louis.

Flonzaley Quartet On Farewell Tour To Play Thursday

Famous Organization to Appear in Concert at Sheldon Memorial Under Auspices of the Chamber Music Society.

THE Flonzaley String Quartet gives its first of two farewell recitals at Sheldon Auditorium, 3648 Washington boulevard, on Thursday evening, under the auspices of the St. Louis Chamber Music Society. The decision of the Flonzaley Quartet to terminate its career at the close of this season has come with surprise to music lovers as they have been supreme in the chamber music field. Theirs is an association of 25 years on tour and six under the patronage of E. J. de Coppet who fostered their work for the enjoyment of his family and friends until the demand for public appearances caused him to relinquish his own personal proprietorship. The annual visits of the Flonzaley Quartet had been one of the highlights of the season, and their retirement will leave a void which will be hard to fill.

Haydn—Quartet in D major, op. 64, No. 5 ("The Lark")
Allegro moderato.
Adagio Cantabile.
Menuetto.
Finale.
Ernest Bloch—"Three Landscapes" for string quartet.

Tongatabou.
Schubert ..... Andante con variazioni ("Death and the Maiden")
Glazounow ..... Quartet in D major, op. 1

Yiddish Players in Biblical Operetta

Goldfaden's biblical operetta "Sulamith," one of the first plays written for the Jewish theater by the father of Jewish playwrights—will be presented tonight by the Henrietta Schnitzer players at the Odeon. Rich in Jewish folk lore and music, the operetta has a traditional significance since it makes an annual pilgrimage in the repertoire of every Yiddish stock company.

In addition to Henrietta Schnitzer, leading woman of the company and the regular cast, Madame Eva Rafallo of Cincinnati, well known prima donna, will sing the role of Sulamith. A chorus and ballet are added for this single performance.

Behind the Screens OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

SATAN'S sweetheart is a brunet from St. Louis, an exotically beautiful woman of French-Spanish-Irish-German ancestry, who formerly was a stenographer in Hollywood.

That is the off-screen description of Laska Winter, chosen to portray the girl who charms the devil in "Seven Footprints to Satan." It has been more than a dozen years since Miss Winter pounded a typewriter, but it was an historic typewriter. She took dictation from Jesse Lasky when the motion picture company he was helping to found still was housed in an old barn on the edge of a lemon orchard. Since then she has played many exotic roles on the screen.

"Seven Footprints" in one way will be an historic picture; for the first talkie appearance of the devil will hardly be billed as ordinary entertainment. Hell has been portrayed often on the screen, but never before has the exhibitor been given an opportunity to hang out the sign: "See and HEAR Satan on the Screen." How to film Hell with sound effects is a problem Benjamin Christensen will have to work out in his direction of the picture.

Picture-goers have seen all-color films and all-dialog pictures, and soon they will see all-color, all-dialog productions. So it is only natural that someone should give a thought to the actors and make an all-closeup movie. "Faces" is the name of the experiment in this direction newly completed at Universal. The players in this two-reel romance are all extras who ordinarily would have to be content with sharing "long shots" with the rest of the mob. This time, for two continuous reels, they outstar the stars and do nothing but closeups. The heroine even comes within an inch of drowning in the ocean, with nothing but her face and a gallon or two of water showing.

From politics to pictures is a road seldom traveled by those who come to Hollywood to be heroes. Juan Sedillo accordingly stands out among the new arrivals here.

He is the Assistant Adjutant-General of New Mexico. Two years ago he ran for Congress in that State, and this year lost the Republican nomination for Representative-at-large in Congress by 29 votes. He has left his law practice in Santa Fe to play the lead in a picture of Indian life in the Southwest.

Sedillo's Spanish ancestors came to what is now New Mexico in the seventeenth century. His great-grandfather was the last Governor there under Mexican rule. Sedillo did not plan to become an actor, and after graduation from Georgetown University established himself in Santa Fe as an attorney. Annually for several years, however, he has played a part in the historical pageant there—the modern version of a community festival dating back more than 200 years before the birth of the movies. So his screen role will not seem utterly strange to him.

The new player really looks the part of the Indian hero he has been chosen to portray. When he first arrived on the Fox lot and a cameraman was making tests of him in costume and makeup in the bright sunlight of the patio, an actress on her way to one of the stages paused to watch the proceedings.

"What a handsome Indian!" she exclaimed. "Does he speak English?"

Sedillo is unmarried, so such frank outbursts of admiration doubtless will lead to the customary Hollywood rumors of romance. In the picture itself the feminine love interest will be furnished by Delia Magana, whom Robert Flaherty "discovered" on the Mexico City stage after looking through the Southwest for a heroine.

Flaherty, many picture-goers will recall, directed "Nanook of the North" and "Moana of the South Seas." In the new picture, instead of the Northern wastes or the idyllic scenery of tropical isles, he will have desert and pueblos for background. As in his previous pictures, of course, he will lay the chief emphasis on a sympathetic interpretation of the lives and customs of the people.

The red-heads have the Indian sign on them when it comes to careers in motion picture.

A recent survey at the Paramount studios in Hollywood disclosed the fact that only three of the stars or featured players on the organization's long list flaunt titian locks.

Clara Bow, now making Elinor Glyn's "Three Week-Ends," is the outstanding example. Nancy Carroll, being co-featured with Gary Cooper in "The Shopworn Angel," runs a close second, and Doris Hill, featured player, is the third.

The survey also revealed that the brunettes are in possession of the honors, having a 30 per cent lead over the blondes.

Some of the most famous voices in filmdom are being "previewed" on the air these days. The singer usually warbles unannounced, only the attaches of the broadcasting station and certain listeners-in posted at receiving sets by an interested producer knowing his or her identity.

Such anonymous radio appearances are said to be a great help to players inclined to be microphone-shy in the talking picture stages. A few anonymous "flops" on the radio cannot ruin a screen reputation, and may save the player from making a "flop" of his first talking picture appearance.

Numerous film players also have been singing for the radio lately under their own names. A recent program broadcast here, for instance, included songs by Nancy Carroll, Lupe Velez, Wallace Beery and James Hall, all of whom were accustomed to singing on the stage before they entered pictures.

Phillips R. Holmes, son of Taylor Holmes, stage and screen favorite, has been added to the cast of Paramount's new Adolphe Menjou starring picture, "His Private Life." Holmes was "discovered" on the Princeton University campus while exterior scenes of the Charles "Buddy" Rogers picture, "Varsity," were being filmed.

St. John Ervine Play By Amateurs Tonight

Devera Sievers plays the part of Jessica in the "Lady of Belmont" to be offered by the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A. Dramatic Club, tonight. The play is as sequel to the "Merchant of Venice" and is being presented for the first time in St. Louis. The action takes place exactly 10 years from the famous scene in the "Merchant of Venice," where Shylock demands his pound of flesh. In this play the author, St. John Irvine, completely vindicates Shylock, who is the hero of the play.

Miss Sievers, who plays Jessica, is a graduate of Soldan High School and a student at Washington University. She has also appeared in Artist Guild productions.

Dr. Anspacher to Speak on Theatre

Dr. Louis K. Anspacher, actor, dramatist and critic, will lecture at Mary Institute, Lake street and Waterman avenue, Tuesday, on "The Spirit of Modern Drama." Dr. Anspacher is the author of "Tristan and Isolde," "The Glass House," the "Unchastened Woman," "The Dancer" and "Dagmar." He has acted also in the New York productions of these plays.

In his lecture here, which is one of the series offered by the Washington University Association, he will discuss significant current plays.

"Helga and the White Peacock."

The Children's Theater will present as their second play of the season, Cornelia Meigs' three-act play, "Helga and the White Peacock," at the Toy Theater, on Friday evening and Saturday afternoon of this week. Those taking part in the production are: Genevieve Lilie, Ruth Schmidt, Irene Virginia Miller, Mildred Bardelmeyer, John Henry Pohlman, Jack Martin, William Thie and Nesta Johnson. As a curtain riser, Marian and Maxine Williams, young musicians, will give a special musical number, accompanied by their mother, Mrs. M. L. Williams.

Toy Players in "The Truth."

Tuesday evening the Toy Theater Players will present Clyde Fitch's comedy, "The Truth," at the Toy Theater, Musical Art Building. This is their second offering on this season's schedule of plays. Elona Garland is coaching the play under the general management of Miss Elizabeth Morse.

At the Play

"Oh!" was a profound criticism of the scene. It denoted not only that the audience was shocked, but that it was rightly shocked, that its inarticulate sense of artistic outrage was sound. In this scene Mr. O'Neill forfeited his sense of fact to his sense of the theater, exactly as Shakspeare, to gain a good theatrical situation, ate his own words in "Hamlet" where he first of all proved beyond a peradventure, as President Wilson used to say, that Ophelia was accidentally drowned, and then makes the Church give her "maimed rites" of burial on the ground that "her death was doubtful."

Shakspeare knew that the Elizabethan audience would be horrified by the thought of a girl being buried in unsanctified ground because she had committed suicide, and he deliberately chose to get an effect by contradicting himself. In that world in which there were no dramatic critics to check him two days after the first performance of "Hamlet," he could play such tricks and get away with them. In a similar mood Mr. O'Neill added two totally unnecessary scenes to his play for the sole and single purpose of shocking the sensibilities of his audience by making a lad slap his father's face.

THE famous "asides" left me, for the most part, unimpressed. In any event, Mr. O'Neill cannot claim any credit for their invention. They are part of the oldest form of theatrical technique, and they were rightly abandoned as the craft of the actor improved. Their revival by Mr. O'Neill is either an attempt to prevent actors from acting or a sign of laziness in the author. The worthlessness of the majority of these "asides"—not of all of them, for some of them are justifiable—is apparent in the scene in which Nina learns that Ned has told Sam Evans that she is about to become a mother and has himself departed for Europe. In this scene, Mr. O'Neill with remarkable restraint, forbids himself to put any dialogue, whether of uttered thoughts or of actual conversation, into Nina's mouth, and the actress, Miss Judith Anderson, who gave a very fine performance of the part, was obliged to trust to her acting ability to let the audience see what was in her mind. She showed in her face all that she was thinking far more vividly than she could have conveyed to us in volumes of words, and at the same time she utterly condemned the whole silly "aside" stuff about which so much fuss had been made by shallowpates. These "asides" in brief, are on a par with the masks in "The Great God Brown," Mr. O'Neill's most pretentious play.

I found myself speculating on the fact that when the characters sat down and thought disagreeably about each other, they must have been greatly embarrassed by the prolonged silences that fitfully fell upon their conversations. For although the audience hears the thoughts being uttered, the characters in the play do not hear them. They hear only the actual dialogue. Now, in a formal, fantastic piece, one could not object to characters behaving in a formally fantastic fashion, but Mr. O'Neill is attempting in this piece to attain to a super reality, and that super reality, is destroyed for me when I find the characters glumly glaring at each other for an appreciable period while they think about each other in a very unpleasant manner. It is a queer quality in the play, too, that all the laughter which it rouses in the audience is caused by one character sneering at another. There is not a laugh in the whole play which is provoked by wit or by good natured fun. All the laughter follows after some bitter or cruel thought, and ought to leave the laugher feeling ashamed of his laughter.

It is a great feat to make thousands of people sit for hours while the life story of a nagging neurotic woman is told to them. Not any of these people arouse our admiration. Nina is a born and incorrigible nagger. She nags her father, her unwanted admirer, her husband, her lover, her son, her son's girl, everybody with whom she comes into contact. She is one of the most unattractive figures in the whole of imaginative literature, yet Mr. O'Neill compels us to take interest in her. In actual life, 99 men out of a hundred, obliged to associate with such woman, would throttle her and would indubitably receive an illuminated address and a large check from her friends and relations, together with a free pardon from the President. What the feelings of any youth or young woman may be after seeing this piece, I do like to imagine. Any "message" Mr. O'Neill has for them must seem horribly miserable. I should not have been at all surprised if, after leaving the theater, I had seen the street strewn with corpses of young men and maidens who, having witnessed "Strange Interlude," had decided to lie down in front of trucks and trolley cars and let them run over them. And yet, I repeat, the odd play singularly fascinates the mind. It fascinated me exactly as I am fascinated by a dreadful sore. I do not wish to see it, but I cannot help looking at it. There remains only to be added that the play is magnificently directed and performed.

Stock Company in East St. Louis.

The Gifford Players opened at the New Avenue Theater in East St. Louis several weeks ago with several former members of the National Players who appeared at the Empress Theater last season in the company, including the rotund comedian, Frank Jaquet. Opening today with matinee and night performances they will offer Langdon McCormick's sensational drama, "The Storm," with all the scenic effects of the original production including the big forest fire scene.

McGregor "Pop" Soloist Today With Symphony

Pianist, Former St. Louisan, to Play Liszt's Concerto in A Major With the Orchestra at Odeon.

WILLIARD McGREGOR, pianist, is to be soloist with the St. Louis Symphony orchestra in the Sunday Popular Concert at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today and will play that most brilliant and fiery of Liszt's works for pianoforte and orchestra—the A major concerto.

McGregor, a St. Louisan though now located in Indianapolis, is a pupil of Charles Galloway, Leo Miller and Rudolph Ganz in this country, and spent two years in Paris under the tutelage of Nadia Boulanger and Isadore Philipp. His Paris debut in recital was warm praise from the critics. For the past year he has concertized throughout the Middle West, and last summer played under Percy Grainger in the Hollywood Bowl Concerts at Hollywood. His last appearance with the Symphony Orchestra here was eight years ago when he played the Tschaikowsky B-flat minor concerto.

Emil Oberhoffer has chosen to present today a program marked by tone color and lighter melody. Included are Chabrier's "Bourree Fantasque," Lalo's overture to "The King of Ys," Sibelius' "The Swan of Tuonela," Goldmark's Scherzo for orchestra in A, and the "Autumn" from Glazounoff's ballet, "The Four Seasons." The latter will be heard for the first time by St. Louis at this concert. The program is:

Bourree Fantasque ..... Chabrier
Overture to "The King of Ys" ..... Lalo
"The Swan of Tuonela" ..... Sibelius
Scherzo in A for Orchestra ..... Goldmark
Concerto in A Major No. 2 for Pianoforte and Orchestra ..... Liszt
Willard McGregor
"Autumn" from the Ballet of "The Four Seasons" ..... Glazounoff

PEABODY AT MISSOURI JOHNS UP IN CHICAGO AND FAY IN NEW YORK

mute signal. Then they start an impassioned quarrel. Except for warning signs requesting silence, and watchmen guarding the entrance to the stage, people 50 feet away would not know that this "sound" picture was in production.

AND speaking of music it hath charms, the producers of motion pictures are discovering, to soothe the savage censors into withholding their scissors from scenes which otherwise would be snipped out and kept off the screen.

This does not mean that the magic of a Beethoven sonata can lull a censor into forgetting what he is seeing. The situation is simply this:

Pictures sold to exhibitors as "sound pictures" must be shown with synchronized orchestral accompaniment and sound-effects as advertised; otherwise, the exhibitor will be put in the position of selling tickets under false pretenses.

But if several scenes are snipped out of the film by state or city censors the disk on which the sound-effects were so carefully recorded will be thrown out of line with the action.

The galloping of horses' hoofs, for example, originally recorded amid a few bars of crashing Wagnerian music to accompany the escape of the villain, might instead made ridiculous a tender love scene aboardship in mid-ocean. And the bellowing of fog horns intended for the shipwreck scene might be heard, instead, where the heroine is weeping softly in her boudoir.

It might happen that all the sad music for the sad scenes would be shifted to the comic scenes, and vice versa, by the removal of one objectionable scene in each reel.

So the censors in some states, making allowance for the predicament of the exhibitor, have permitted the synchronized version of a picture to be shown unchanged, while at the same time they shortened the silent version by hundreds of feet.

Producers have been warned, however, that this consideration for the proper synchronization of music and sound-effects with action is only a temporary concession. Some way of enabling censors to wipe out the music and sound-effects corresponding to the deleted scene must be found or producers and exhibitors and public simply will have to put up with misplaced whistles and words and soft music.

Where the music and sound-effects and dialogue are recorded photographically on the same film with the picture the censorship problem is not so acute; for the cutting out of such a scene automatically eliminates also the accompanying sounds.

But often the censor has no desire to cut out a whole scene—merely an objectionable word in the middle of a sentence, or the clothes the heroine is not wearing while uttering highly important words.

So far no convenient system of dealing with the situation has been devised, but the producers' association here has called in sound-recording engineers to work on the problem. It is hoped that these experts will invent some simple way for censors to rub out profanity found amid the dialogue and "black out" objectionable costumes or actions without throwing the picture's synchronization out of gear.

Meanwhile, so long as the censors feel inclined to sympathize with the synchronization dilemma of the exhibitor, the fate of any given scene in a picture will depend on whether or not it is accompanied by music.

McGregor "Pop" Soloist Today With Symphony

Pianist, Former St. Louisan, to Play Liszt's Concerto in A Major With the Orchestra at Odeon.

WILLIARD McGREGOR, pianist, is to be soloist with the St. Louis Symphony orchestra in the Sunday Popular Concert at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today and will play that most brilliant and fiery of Listz's works for pianoforte and orchestra — the A major concerto.

McGregor, a St. Louisan though now located in Indianapolis, is a pupil of Charles Galloway, Leo C. Miller and Rudolph Ganz, in this country, and spent two years in Paris under the tutelage of Nadia Boulanger and Isadore Philippe. His Paris debut in recital won warm praise from the critics. For the past year he has concertized throughout the Middle West, and last summer played under Percy Grainger in the Hollywood Bowl Concerts at Hollywood. His last appearance with the Symphony Orchestra here was eight years ago when he played the Tschaikowsky B-flat minor concerto.

Emil Oberhoffer has chosen to present today a program marked by tone color and lighter melody. Included are Chabrier's "Bourree Fantasque," Lalo's overture to "The King of Ys," Sibelius' "The Swan of Tuonela," Goldmark's Scherzo for orchestra in A, and the "Autumn" from Glazounoff's ballet, "The Four Seasons." The latter will be heard for the first time by St. Louis at this concert. The program is:

Bourree Fantasque ..... Chabrier
Overture to "The King of Ys" ..... Lalo
"The Swan of Tuonela" ..... Sibelius
Scherzo in A for Orchestra ..... Goldmark
Concerto in A Major No. 2 for Pianoforte and Orchestra ..... Liszt
Willard McGregor
"Autumn" from the Ballet of "The Four Seasons" ..... Glazounoff

mute signal. Then they start an impassioned quarrel. Except for warning signs requesting silence, and watchmen guarding the entrance to the stage, people 50 feet away would not know that this "sound" picture was in production.

AND speaking of music it hath charms, the producers of motion pictures are discovering, to soothe the savage censors into withholding their scissors from scenes which otherwise would be snipped out and kept off the screen.

This does not mean that the magic of a Beethoven sonata can lull a censor into forgetting what he is seeing. The situation is simply this:

Pictures sold to exhibitors as "sound pictures" must be shown with synchronized orchestral accompaniment and sound-effects as advertised; otherwise, the exhibitor will be put in the position of selling tickets under false pretenses.

But if several scenes are snipped out of the film by state or city censors the disk on which the sound-effects were so carefully recorded will be thrown out of line with the action.

The galloping of horses' hoofs, for example, originally recorded amid a few bars of crashing Wagnerian music to accompany the escape of the villain, might instead made ridiculous a tender love scene aboardship in mid-ocean. And the bellowing of fog horns intended for the shipwreck scene might be heard, instead, where the heroine is weeping softly in her boudoir.

It might happen that all the sad music for the sad scenes would be shifted to the comic scenes, and vice versa, by the removal of one objectionable scene in each reel.

So the censors in some states, making allowance for the predicament of the exhibitor, have permitted the synchronized version of a picture to be shown unchanged, while at the same time they shortened the silent version by hundreds of feet.

Producers have been warned, however, that this consideration for the proper synchronization of music and sound-effects with action is only a temporary concession. Some way of enabling censors to wipe out the music and sound-effects corresponding to the deleted scene must be found or producers and exhibitors and public simply will have to put up with misplaced whistles and words and soft music.

Where the music and sound-effects and dialogue are recorded photographically on the same film with the picture the censorship problem is not so acute; for the cutting out of such a scene automatically eliminates also the accompanying sounds.

But often the censor has no desire to cut out a whole scene—merely an objectionable word in the middle of a sentence, or the clothes the heroine is not wearing while uttering highly important words.

So far no convenient system of dealing with the situation has been devised, but the producers' association here has called in sound-recording engineers to work on the problem. It is hoped that these experts will invent some simple way for censors to rub out profanity, found amid the dialogue and "black out" objectionable costumes or actions without throwing the picture's synchronization out of gear.

Meanwhile, so long as the censors feel inclined to sympathize with the synchronization dilemma of the exhibitor, the fate of any given scene in a picture will depend on whether or not it is accompanied by music.

"GREATEST MEDICINE I EVER USED"

Said Motorman, Praising Miller's Herb Extract, Gladly Recommends It to Everyone.

"It's the only medicine that would ever put me in a healthy condition. I feel like it has done me worlds of good. Now I have my health back, work every day and get plenty of kick out of it, too. In my opinion, you just can't beat Miller's Herb Extract (formerly called Herb Juice) for good, lasting benefits," said J. M. Schushus, motorman, who lives at 3636 Folsom avenue, St. Louis, Mo., who is another grateful user of Nature's great natural medicine.

J. M. SCHUSHUS

"I believe wholeheartedly that Miller's Herb Extract is the greatest medicine on the market. I know it is the finest remedy I ever used, the only medicine to relieve and banish all my ailments and restore me to good health. I think it takes a real medicine to do that much." Mr. Schushus, in praising the Herb Extract Remedy, joins thousands of others who have been greatly benefited and do now enjoy better health after taking Miller's Herb Extract, commonly known as "Herb Juice." "I want you to know that I never fail to tell my friends and fellow-workmen about your great medicine," stated Mr. Schushus when interviewed by the local representative, "and what it has done for me, I conscientiously believe it will do as much for other sufferers. I had a chronic case of constipation for years; stomach was all upset, liver inactive kidneys out of order, bowels were very irregular and I frequently had sick headaches, billious attacks, dizzy spells, and pains in my shoulders and limbs; in fact, I ached all over a great deal of the time. My whole system was so badly deranged that I suffered day and night, couldn't get my rest and sleep and during work hours I could hardly stay awake. I was in misery most all the time. But a few bottles of Miller's Herb Extract put me on my feet, and in much shorter time than I expected. I was feeling fine and dandy, free from every ache and pain, eating heartily three times a day and now, after taking this good medicine for over a month I am in a healthy condition once more and feel like a man made over. I sleep fine, get my rest and find pleasure in my work. I will always praise this great medicine for bringing me good health after so much suffering."

Hundreds call daily to see the Herb Juice Medicine Company's special representative, who has established headquarters at Wolff-Wilson Drug Store, Seventh and Washington, to learn more of this great medicine that is bringing health and happiness to so many St. Louis citizens.

PARTY RULING RUSSIA NUMBERS ONE PER CENT OF POPULATION

City Workers Make Up Bulk of Communists; Many Joiners On Probation.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 1.—The Communist party continues to grow, but it still has less than 1 per cent of the population of Russia on its rolls. The party members, however, rule everything and everyone in Russia.

Communism on July 1 embraced 1,418,060 men and women ranked as "regular members." Their number had increased in six months by 113,589 or almost 9 per cent. In addition, there are tens of thousands of candidates who are on probation for two and three years, and a host of boys and girls who hopeto become Communists when they attain their majority.

City workers make up the bulk of the party membership, but it was officially announced in November that 127,579 Communists were actually engaged in farm work, with 34,484 others dividing their time between agriculture and political activities. Ranked by "social orgin," 60 per cent of the Communists came from the workers, 20 per cent from the peasantry, and the remainder from the employe class.

In the Red army and navy there are just under 100,000 Communists. If one accepts the official figures as to the number of men under arms in Russia, that would be one Communist for every six or seven soldiers and sailors.

FOR FROZEN MUSEUM IN SIBERIA

Observatory Plans to Preserve Animals and Men in Eternal Frost.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 1.—A gigantic Refrigerator Museum in ice-covered Siberia for the scientific preservation of men and animals has been planned by the Far Eastern Geophysical Observatory.

The phenomenon of "eternal frost" in parts of Siberia is thought to be entirely suitable for such a project. It has been found that organic elements can be preserved for centuries in the frozen ground. Proof is cited in the discovery of bodies of mammoths in a refrigerated condition. Sponsors of the museum plan to file away for the ages specimens of all races, the utensils of their daily life, food products and animals. It is estimated that about $5,000,000 will be required, and application will be made to scientific organizations all over the world for donations.

MEMORIAL TO SUBMARINE HERO

Monument in German River Will Honor Memory of Capt. Weddigen.

By the Associated Press.

HERFORD, Germany, Dec. 1.—A bronze monument of Capt. Otto Weddigen, Germany's submarine hero, is to be erected on an island in the river Werra near this town. It will take the form of a bow of a submarine, 26 feet long and 10 feet high, on which will stand in natural size the statue of Weddigen dressed in oil skins.

Weddigen played a brief but sensational part in the early months of the World War. He sank the British armored cruisers Hogue, Aboukir and Cressy in quick succession in the North Sea Sept. 22, 1914, and the cruiser Hawke three weeks later, but his submarine U-29 was sunk by a British ship in March of the following year, and he and his crew perished.

Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association Has Heavy Call for Baskets

Headquarters Opened at 1406 Pine Street—First Contribution to Fund Sent by Former St. Louisan in California.

The first contribution to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund was received on Thanksgiving day from Mrs. Carrie Miller, a former St. Louisan now living in Hollywood, Cal. The donation, a check for $1, came with the message from Mrs. Miller's son, Karl E. Miller ,that his mother wanted to have a part in one of the Christmas activities of her former home town, and had asked him to forward her gift to the Post-dispatch with the request that it be used toward providing some needy person with a Christmas dinner.

Although the contribution lists for the fund that is to finance the big Christmas Festival sponsored by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Committee have no tyet been sent out, many persons have already signified their interest in the undertaking to the extent of requesting that lists be sent their establishments so that they and their employees may have the opportunity to contribute to the fund. This means, say members of the committee in charges, that there will be a wider distribution of the subscription lists than formerly, and the hope is that it means also a much larger fund than ever before.

Want Keenly Felt.

There never was a time in the entire 28 years the committee has been in existence when there has been a greater need for a large fund, the men and women who are in charge of the undertaking say. Unemployment and other economic difficulties during the year have depleted or wiped out the small savings of the poorer classes, thus bringing families who never have asked for assistance to a place where, except for the generosity of the public, they will be without means of bringing Christmas cheer into their homes and Christmas happiness to the hearts of their children.

At its meeting last week the committee voted to ask St. Louis people to express their thanks for the blessings of the past year by bringing happiness to others at Christmas, thus making both a Thanksgiving and a Christmas gift to their less fortunate fellow citizens.

Headquarters Opened.

Headquarters for the committee were opened Tuesday at 1406 Pine street, in a building the use of which is donated by the city. Already the workers there have received several hundred applications for Christmas baskets. A corps of investigators will start out this week to make sure that every worthy person in the city is on the list to receive a basket.

Each basket will contain potatoes, flour, beans, canned peas, corn and tomatoes, sugar, coffee, tea, canned milk, bread, prunes, apples and one or two dressed chickens, according to the size of the family to which it is sent.

Monday morning, Dec. 17, more than 100 women will begin the work of packing the baskets. The bread, chickens and other perishables will be put in at the last minute on the day before Christmas so that everything will be fresh when the big trucks start out to make the rounds in delivery of the baskets at daybreak on Christmas eve. The basket packers expect to work all night, the night before the trucks are sent out, so that everything will be in perfect condition when it reaches its destination Christmas eve.

How the Expenses Are Paid.

The Union Electric Light and Power Co. is donating the lights, an dthe Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. telephones for the headquarters, so that the expense of these necessiries does not have to be taken out of the fund. In making his report to the Executive Committee at its meeting Tuesday, Treasurer Benjamin S. Lang said that the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival was the only undertaking of its kind in his knowledge that did not finance its administration and operation expenses out of its contributions. Much of the necessary service equipment is donated outright, and all other expenses, salaries, etc., are donated by the Post-Dispatch, which gives this in addition to its annual contribution of $500 to the fund. Thus, said Lang, every cent contributed by the public is used to buy the contents of the Christmas baskets and the tops and other gifts for the children at the Coliseum party on Christmas morning.

How Last Year's Fund Was Spent.

A report on an audit of the books of the Christmas Festival Association for the year just ended was made by Lang as follows:

"To the Executive Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund:

"As chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund, I submit the following statement of receipts and disbursements for the festival for the year of 1927:

DISBURSEMENTS.

Coliseum festival	3,226.92
From Post-Dispatch to pay administration expense	2,892.00
Balance in bank with interest	1,187.69
Totals	$25,434.05

"I have examined the book and accounts of the treasurer of the fund, Dumont Jones, cashier of the Post-Dispatch, and find them correct. All contributions to the fund were received, entered on the books and acknowledged in the columns of the Post-Dispatch.

"All supplies, labor and other necessaries for the festival were, on requisition of the chairman of the various committees, ordered by the chairman of the Supply Committee after the approval of the Executive Committee.

"All bills were approved by the chairmen of the committees and paid on vouchers signed for the Executive Committee and the Post-Dispatch by George J. Johns.

"Every dollar expended, therefore, is accounted for by an approved bill and a signed and approved voucher.

"The accounts show that besides its contribution of $500 the Post-Dispatch paid all the expense of the administration, including salaries of office help, distrib... etc.

typewriting, stationery, postage and committee expenses, which amounted to $2892. Thus all of the money expended from the fund was applied to the actual necessaries of the several divisions of the festival.

"I was pleased to note the efficient system on which the festival was conducted and the economy and accuracy with which the fund was administered.

"It gives me pleasure also to state that despite the increases of expenditures due to greater cost of materials, there is a balance of $1187.69 deposited at interest to the credit of the fund.

issue of the Post-Dispatch, printed fifty years ago.

Novelty Comic Section

St. Louis Section

Colorful epochs and outstanding characters in the evolution of a trading post into a great city. Fires and pestilence, poverty and prosperity, wars and peace, bums and builders, killers and cowards, dandies and statesmen, belles and "madams," boodlers and scholars, pass through the pages.

Not a history of population growth and expanding commercial statistics, but probably the most interesting human story of life in St. Louis from Laclede to Lindbergh that has yet been written, by Carlos F. Hurd. Striking pictures of the future and the past.

Women's Section

The emancipation of the "weaker sex" has taken place within the last fifty years. How this tremendous change in the status of half of the civilized population of the world was brought about, one of the most radical departures in history, and what its general results will be, are told from the women's point of view by a leading feminist, Mrs. Virgil Loeb—who cheerfully pays the respects of her sex to masculine error.

Social customs and social leaders of the romantic phase of St. Louis' history—by Mrs. Katherine Lindsay Franciscus, a recognized authority and arbiter of the things she discusses.

The March of Fashion, a sprightly story spanning the changeful period from hoop skirts to knee skirts, written and illustrated by Marguerite Martyn.

Sports Section

Stirring tales of the "he-man" fights on "bloody" Chouteau Island and in other secluded places near St. Louis, when the winner took a puny purse and the loser took to his bed—the rise of the boxing game from a mere test of brute endurance to the "manly art" of self defense, by John E. Wray.

When a world series—and the gate receipts!—was won on a wild pitch, with other strange stories of the original Browns—the four times pennant winners, by J. Roy Stockton.

The "sport of kings" under electric lights, with "two bits" books in pool alley, in the time of the first "dog" races. "Barney" Schreiber's meteoric turf career—how a clothing salesman ran his wages into a famous breeding farm, and later was glad to borrow a dollar, and other stories.

What a wrecking crew of gamblers did to racing in Missouri, by Wm. F. Allen.

Post-Dispatch Section

A newspaper and its founder. An intimate word picture of Joseph Pulitzer, his life and letters, by his former literary secretary, Harold Stanley Pollard, Editor of the New York Evening World.

A Study in Red, White and Green

GRETTA PALMER

BEHIND the cab's delusive heated sign, Detective Wilkins looked benignly down at his spats and raised his hand to adjust the white bow-tie, whose obliquity was a constant rebuke to the company it was forced to keep. From the dull lapels of the rented dinner coat to his heavy brogues, Wilkins' costume proclaimed him one of New York's finest rather than the brilliant society criminal he hoped to appear.

It was the ex-patrolman's first essay into what he believed to be high life, and, as the cab drew up in front of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, he got out with a noticeable hauteur and walked hurriedly past the hotel detective in the lobby to the elevators.

Andrews would be expecting him—Andrews, known as one of the wiliest of the gentlemen who accommodate modern buccaneers in the disposal of their booty. One could no more refer to him as a fence than to the Armour family as butchers.

Andrews had eluded the police of four countries for 10 profitable years, and it was only by great luck that Wilkins had made friends with him and discovered his identity.

The inspector, when he was told of this find by the breathless and exuberant young detective, had hesitated and finally decided to let him follow through the case to the end. After all an insignificant member of the staff would be less suspected than any of the better known detectives, and Wilkins' assignment was not too exigent.

If he could only convince Andrews of his good faith and sell him a few tempting and allegedly stolen jewels, a focus of underworld life would be cut off. Wilkins was given the chance.

As the elevator shot upward through 18 strata of unattached ladies dressing for dinner, Wilkins wondered who it was that Andrews had asked him to meet; his wife, he said, and a few friends, probably his partners.

Wilkins reviewed rapidly all that he had learned in detective school of the importance of the ear in identification and stepped jauntily out of the elevator. He need not have concerned himself—Andrew's guests were purely social and had no slight inkling of his career. Two eminently respectable stock brokers and their wives were seated about the effusive Andrews, highballs in hand, as Wilkins gave the perverse tie a final twist and entered the apartment.

He had hardly been introduced before the bell rang again and Andrews admitted a tall, handsome man, who greeted the guests distantly, with a side long glance at the detective's spats, but Wilkins did not notice. He glanced up, gulped and forgot to finish his quite apocryphal story of the time he had used a straight flush to break the bank of Monte Carlo.

"I wonder if you will excuse Mr. Marsden and me for a moment," asked Andrews, "there is a bit of business"——

Andrews and the newcomer withdrew to a corner in plain view of the divan on which Wilkins was seated next to Allan Crosby, whose humor any good medievalist would have diagnosed as choleric. Crosby was very wroth over something in the football world, Wilkins never knew just what, for he was closely watching the pair in the corner—Andrews and the newcomer, a glimpse of whose ears had made his heart thump painfully.

The man called Marsden was a notorious thief and smuggler of jewels, whose face had been memorized by class after class of graduating detectives without the knowledge disturbing his leisurely migrations. No one had ever seen him in possession of a jewel illicitly acquired, and Wilkins was willing to suffer from astigmatism for the rest of his life, if concentrated watching now would catch the man in the act of selling a jewel to the notorious Andrews.

"I tell you the ruling was all wrong," shouted the angry Mr. Crosby, "if Dartmouth's forward pass hadn't failed"——

The lady next to him wore a Mona Lisa expression of insincere attention, and wondered whether she dare buy a third fur coat. Mrs. Crosby was less stringent in her manners and frankly devoted herself to a serious flirtation with the Scotch and soda.

No one saw that Wilkins had turned white and that the offending tie, by some barometrical intuition, had worked itself to an angle of 90 degrees. For he had just seen Marsden pass a large green stone covertly to Andrews, who examined it with a shielding hand held towards the room, nodded and slipped it deep into the watch pocket of his evening trousers. The two then rose and sauntered towards the company.

Andrews looked about with an air of self rebuke.

"My dear Mrs. Crosby, you want a highball, and you, too, George. Here, Marsden, mix the drinks. I'll have to get some ice from the adjoining serving pantry. You'll find everything on that sideboard." And he pointed to a magnificent array of bottles, which ranged from the more prophylactic of native gins to an imposing line of squat bottles holding the slightly esoteric Benedictine and Creme de Menthe.

Marsden selected a glass for himself, poured out and passed drinks for the whole company, all of whom steered the safe middle course offered by the brothers Haig and Haig. Then with a supercilious disregard for the others he carried his drink to the radio and began the usual vain and turbulent efforts to get Chicago.

"Ice here, Harry," he called to Andrews when the latter returned and then relapsed into attention to his objectionable series of noise. Andrews smiled ruefully at his guests and suggested a game of roulette, in which Wilkins joined with an eager eye peeled for twitching wires leading to the pockets of his host.

In this hope he was mistaken, but a far more dramatic development brought the game to a close. After a scant 20 minutes of alternating drinking and dialling, Marsden cried out in agony, reeled suddenly about, and collapsed to the floor.

Andrews rushed to the sideboard and poured out brandy for the sick man, while the others gathered about his prone form. A physician was hastily summoned and pronounced him dead. The symptoms of poisoning were so evident that even the house doctor insisted that the police be summoned.

When Wilkins' confreres arrived from the Homicide Bureau they greeted him joyfully as an eyewitness of the crime. Marsden's glass showed that the drink had coptained several grains of cyanide of potassium, more than a lethal dose.

Well, Wilkins could tell them how it got there. It also contained a piece of straw, but this they considered an insignificant factor.

Wilkins, in embarrassment, admitted that he was as baffled as they but told them he had seen what he believed to be an emerald pass from Marsden to Andrews. Probably its acquisition without the formality of payment was the motive for the murder. If Andrews indeed was the criminal.

But the hotel waiter, who had been in the serving pantry when Andrews left the room, and had given him the ice from the frigidaire, said that he had had the suspect in full sight during the few minutes of his presence there and was sure he had concealed nothing about the premises, which testimony was later found to be true.

The emerald was not upon his person nor in any place about the room, which occurred to the detectives as a conceivable hiding place.

Two days later, however, it was sold by his agents for a considerable sum.

What did Andrews do with the emerald?

Who killed Marsden and how?

The solution of this mystery will be printed next Sunday. Another mystery outline will also be published on that date.

MARILYNN HILDERBRAND

"Sweetest Baby in Missouri!"

For over fifty years, mothers like this well known Missouri woman, have been telling each other about California Fig Syrup, and leading physicians have been endorsing it. Nothing else acts so gently and harmlessly to propel the souring waste from the delicate system of babies and children, which, when allowed to remain, keeps them cross, feverish, bilious, headachy, weak, with coated tongue, bad breath, broken-out skin, no appetite, or energy. Its rich, fruity goodness helps to give tone and strength to their little stomach and bowels so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. It helps to build up and strengthen them—makes them active and happy.

"I have used California Fig Syrup with my little daughter since early babyhood," says Mrs. John T. Hilderbrand, Valley Park. "Whenever she has a cold, is the least bit constipated or doesn't seem just right, I always give her a little, and it fixes her up quick. She's the picture of health, now, and friends say she's the sweetest baby in Missouri. She has never had a serious illness, and I give California Fig Syrup full credit for it."

Protect your child from imitations of California Fig Syrup. See that the carton bears the word "California."

Don't handicap your day-before it begins

Getting up in the morning is a lottery for many folks. They don't know what they're going to draw—whether it's to be a heavy, logy feeling—listless—appetite poor—or alertness, clear eyes and breakfast with a tang to it!

So many people are on the border line of health—85% well—15% ill—and usually it's simply acid poisoning.

You can easily overlook it—because such everyday habits cause it. Overeating, eating between meals, irregular meals, eating when tired or worried, drinking water while digesting food, excessive smoking—these are some things that cause acid poisoning.

Milnesia (Milk of Magnesia) Wafers Counteract Excessive Acid

These danger signals warn you. Sick headache—indigestion—bad breath—heartburn—constipation—"sour stomach"—skin eruptions—all signs your system is calling for Alkalinity, the acid killer.

Every pleasant tasting Milnesia Wafer you chew is equal to two teaspoons of milk of magnesia—giving you its acid-fighting Alkalinity. And chewing Milnesia gives your teeth and gums the benefit of its spicily flavored milk of magnesia. It gently cleanses your whole system, from gums and mouth to intestines.

New Hair Mode Seen in New York

The most beautiful girls in New York are doing their hair the new way. It's so lovely, but so simple. That's why it appeals to popular girls, who need to save time wherever they can. One of the busiest of them is attractive Mary Chandler, for three seasons a member of "George White's Scandals" and now appearing in "Artists and Models." She says: "I am so busy. I don't know how I'd take care of my hair, if I hadn't learned the new way so many of my girl friends are doing theirs.

"All I do now is put a few dashes of Danderine on my brush each time I use it. This wonderful preparation keeps my hair looking so lovely that many friends want to touch it. I set my waves with Danderine, too, and it holds them ever so much longer. All dandruff disappeared with a few applications, and my scalp always feels fine. I shampoo just once a month, now. Danderine keeps my hair so clean."

Danderine removes that oily film from your hair and gives it new life and lustre. It makes hair easy to dress and holds it in place. It isn't oily and doesn't show. It gives tone and vigor to the scalp. All drug stores have the 35c bottles. A delicately fragranced necessity for the well-groomed girl.

Home-Made, but Ends Bad Cough In a Hurry

To end a stubborn cough quickly, it is important to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, get rid of the germs and also to aid the system inwardly to help throw off the trouble.

For these purposes, here is a home-made medicine, far better than anything you could buy at 3 times the cost. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Put this into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to fill up the pint. This takes but a moment, and makes a remedy so effective that you will never do without, once you have used it. Keeps perfectly, and children like it.

This simple remedy does three necessary things. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and soothes away the inflammation. At the same time it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This explains why it brings such quick relief, even in bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

REMODELED JEFFERSON TO BE OPENED SUNDAY

Room Capacity Doubled by Addition—Improvement Cost $6,000,000.

The enlarged and remodeled Hotel Jefferson, at Twelfth boulevard and Locust street, will be opened to the public next Sunday, after 14 months of work which included the erection of a 400-room addition and the remodeling of the old building.

The new hotel now contains 800 rooms, all with private bath. The old building, built in 1903 for the World's Fair, has been merged into the new, the first three floors having been completely changed. The entire project cost more than $6,000,000.

The new lobby is in cream-colored Italian marble with contrasting marble columns and a high ceiling decorated in a pattern of forest foliage. A wide mezzanine circles the entire lobby.

The new main dining room is done in the modern manner with three terraced levels, cubist-cut mirrors and a cubist pattern floor and ceiling. A new grill and coffee shop, to seat approximately 400 people, has been installed on the ground floor at Twelfth and St. Charles street. Other frontage will be available for shops.

The entire mezzanine floor is equipped for public exhibitions and convention gatherings, and is provided with promenades, reception rooms, writing room, library and check room facilities. The main banquet hall, the gold room, is on this mezzanine. It is a two-story hall, in gold and ivory, and will seat 1200 people. Another assembly hall, the crystal room, is also reached from the mezzanine floor.

Other new features included nine private dining rooms for from 15 to 150 people; an air-cooling and ventilating system connected with all public rooms, and modern appointments in the guest rooms, including tile baths and chandeliers of cubist pattern.

The management of the new hotel will be in the hands of Max L. Teich, chairman of the board of directors; Col. Lyman T. Hay, president, who has been the manager for 25 years; Carl C. Roessler, vice president; Carl E. Roessler Jr., treasurer; Frederick C. Teich, secretary, and Eric W. Korb, part owner of the Kaskaskia Hotel of La Salle, Ill.

KOENIGSBERG, East Prussia, Dec. 1.—Free opera is provided here in an attempt to win the population over to an appreciation of contemporary composers. The East Prussians are conservative. They will patronize Wagner, Beethoven or Verdi opera, but draw the line on modernists such as Paul Hindemith, Ernst Krenek, or Igor Stravinsky.

To acquaint the people with these and other contemporaries, the opera now offers free performances as matinees. Hindemith's "Cardillac," the first opera to be presented thus, found a crowded house.

Activities of Boy Scouts

HANDICRAFT CENTER TO CLOSE SATURDAYS

Schedule of Scout Activity There Is Changed for This Month.

The St. Louis Boy Scout Leaders' Handicraft Center, conducted by the local Boy Scout council in the Missouri Theater Building, will hold no Saturday sessions during December on account of the holiday season, according to Activities Director H. T. Swanson of the headquarters staff. Leaders who had attended group meetings at the center on Saturdays will be transferred temporarily to group meeting on evenings during the week. The center formerly was open every evening and all day Saturday.

The handicraft center, which is in charge of "Skipper" Thompson, Irondale Ranger Camp director, is a gathering place for scout masters, assistant scout masters, troop committeemen, senior patrol leaders, junior assistant scout masters and patrol leaders who wish to learn and practice the various handicrafts. Each leader is a member of some group which meets for two hours on a specified evening, one hour being devoted to learning a new phase of the craft and the other to teaching it to some other leader or group not as far advanced. In this way the center prepares the troop officer to carry out its purpose: to enable the group member to take back and teach to his troop the craft upon which he is working. The crafts also are to be employed by the troops as projects and competitions, to vary the regular program.

Attendance at the center is limited to 28 men and boys a night, although twice since its organization last month it had an attendance of 42, before the limiting regulation was established. Under the present rule no junior officer may attend the center unless his scoutmaster is present, while every person must obtain a permit from local headquarters.

Scout leaders who have worked in the groups so far have specialized on leather, although a few minutes' work is done each evening on some other subject. Beginning tomorrow evening, however, two additional groups, in beadwork and in woodwork, will be added, the leather-work groups continuing as before. Members in that group who desire to take up either of the others may change while new men may join any of the three. Later on the center plans to take up all of the various crafts, including silver-work, bonecraft, hornwork, pottery and basketry.

An unusual craft was practiced as the evening "incidental" last week, when the groups tried flaking stone arrowheads, turning chips of different stone into imitations of the points used by the Indians. Although the art of arrowhead making is practically extinct, Thompson said, he plans to form a stone-flaking group at the center, eventually. Thompson himself is an expert at the work.

DOLL SHOW OF GIRL SCOUTS WILL BE OPENED WEDNESDAY

Exhibits to Be Given to Charitable Agencies After Showing at Vandervoort Music Hall.

The fourth annual Girl Scout doll show, at which will be exhibited dolls prepared by the 1500 Girl Scouts of the city and county for distribution to needy children at Christmas, will be held in the Vandervoort Music Hall, from next Wednesday to Saturday. The dolls will be given Saturday afternoon to about 25 charitable agencies, who will perform the actual distribution.

The doll show is the largest undertaking of the Girl Scout organization each year, the girls working for two months in advance preparing their contributions. At the exhibit the dolls are arranged in groups according to the troops that gave them, and the groups are judged for the best display. The troop whose exhibit is rated highest, judged according to fitness as gifts for children, workmanship and proportion of dolls to the number of girls in the troop, is awarded a cup presented by Mrs. Guy Oliver, Girl Scout Commissioner here. The present holders of the cup are the scouts of Kirkwood 1.

The doll show will be in charge of Mrs. Frank Mayfield of the St. Louis Council and Mrs. Jesse Correll of the St. Louis Girl Scout Leaders' Association.

Troop Notes

North District.

Scout Milton Young of Troop 40 of the Third United Presbyterian Church, completed all his tests for second class scout while the troop was on a hike to the Meramec quarry last Sunday. Scout Young now is ready to appear before the next Board of Review to be certified for his new rank. More than a dozen tests were passed by members of the troop while on the hike and intensive practice in signaling was held. The hike was in the charge of Scoutmaster Edwards.

A Parents' Night, to "get acquainted" with the scout parents, was held in connection with the last meeting of Troop 83 of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. A demonstration of the regular program of scouting activities was given by the troop, the tumbling team displayed its skill, and Field Scout Executive L. L. Hotchkiss gave a talk on "Scouting, the Nations' Need." A supper was served by the mothers. Nearly 200 persons attended the meeting.

A mapping hike on which four scouts qualified in the difficult first class map-making test was held by Troop 206 of the Ames School, last Sunday. The hike was part of an outdoor activity program being conducted by the troop.

South District.

An exceptionally rapid increase in membership has been accomplished by Troop 163 of the Kirby Memorial Church, in the last two months, the troop having grown in this time from eight scouts to 22, with an average attendance at meetings of 19. An informal initiation ceremony was put on for the new Tenderfoot scouts at the meeting a week ago Friday. The troop now has three first-class scouts, with others approaching that rank.

Troop 198 of the St. John's Episcopal Church performed its annual Thanksgiving good turn this year by providing a Thanksgiving dinner for four needy families. The arrangements were in the hands of Star Scout Henry Manker Jr., who obtained the names of the families from the Provident Association. Each patrol leader supervised his patrol in making up a basket. This troop has been providing Thanksgiving baskets for several years.

West District.

A course of instruction in making a fool-proof fire out-of-doors was given the scouts of Troop 30, of the Y. M. H. A. at the last meeting. An investiture ceremony to formally admit four candidates into the troop also was conducted by Scoutmaster Goldsmith. As a patrol project the scouts have constructed a log cabin in their meeting room. On the walls are trophies, challenges, handicraft work and scouting equipment. The troop library also is in the cabin.

Seventy-six boys, five troop committeemen and two scoutmasters participated in a joint hike held by Troop 90 of the Temple Shaare Emeth and Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A. to the Rankin cave near Eureka last Sunday. The scouts hiked from Morschels, on the railroad, to the cave and back, about eight miles. Tests were passed and games played at the cave, a number of boys passing more than one test, while several completed all requirements to advance to a next higher rank. The games included a "capture-the-flag," under the direction of Marcus Reznikoff and Carl Bauman. A talk on nature was also given by Scoutmaster Goldsmith.

A 20-mile hike from Kirkwood to the Rankin cave near Eureka was taken by Troop 101 of the West Park Baptist Church last Sunday. The scouts hiked all the way to the cave and back. An advisory council has been formed in this troop to determine troop policy and program. The council meets regularly.

Scouts Joe Landau and James Cooney of Troop 137 of the Riddick School have completed all requirements for first class scout, and are ready to appear before the Board of Review to be examined, Scoutmaster Hill reports. Scouts Wallace Bruce and William Oliver are next in line for promotion to first class rank.

A harmonica band has been organized at troop 152 of the B'Nai El Temple, under the direction of Troop Committeeman Merlin. Fifteen tests were passed by scouts of the troop while on a test-passing hike to Forest Park recently. Two new scouts have been admitted to the troop within the last three weeks.

FOUR-FOOTED GOLD-DIGGER

An even-tempered debutante of the West End who likes her bonbons and candy and adopts gold-digging tactics to get them is Patricia, more generally known as Pat, who lives at 5760 De Giverville avenue. Pat is a brindle-colored English pit bull, aged 3¼ years and weight about 30 pounds.

The dog's owner is C. E. Anglemyre, a former chemical salesman. They are seen almost every night in the drug store at Waterman and De Baliviere avenues, where Pat haunts the candy counter and coaxes tidbits from all purchasers. Anglemyre said the dog's menu includes candy, cake and ice cream.

TEMPERANCE MOVE IN BRAZIL

Army Planes Used in Campaign Against Alcohol.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 1.—A movement for liquor control has been started and Brazil has just celebrated an anti-alcoholic week, with considerable vigor. During the week conferences and lectures were held in the federal capital, and also in several of the states. This city and the famous beach at Copacabana were bombarded from the air with handbills promoting the cause of temperance.

Army planes were used for this bombardment, and one of the handbills scatered from the air read: "Aviators do not drink alcohol. Athletes do not drink alcohol. To be strong—shun alcohol."

U. S. ENGINEERS CO-OPERATE IN ENTERPRISES OF SOVIET

Concerns Take Part in Building Blast Furnaces, Making Machinery and Working Mines.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 1.—The steady growth of Soviet-American economic relations has been summarized in a series of articles published by Economic Life.

It is pointed out that several American engineering firms and a number of individual engineers are acting as consulting agents and participating in new soviet enterprises. On American mining firm has been working for two years in the Don basin. Two other firms have co-operated in an extensive survey of the Southern railroads and ports.

A Chicago company signed a contract with the central metal administration of the Supreme Council of National Economy providing for an examination of factories and workships. This concern is organizing in Leningrad a technical branch for permanent consultation on manufacturing projects.

Several Americans are participating as advisors in the construction of blast furnaces and the manufacture of colored metals. A number of American firms are co-operating in the development of soviet enterprises for the making of machinery.

Important electrical developments are being pushed forwaard with the aid of the General Electric Co. Other American groups are co-operating in the manufacture of large-scale refrigerating plants, paper and celluloid enterprises, glass making and oil refining. Approximately 200 soviet specialists have been sent to the United States in the last three years for the study of American industry.

RUPTURE CAN BE CURED BY PROPER CONTROL

Old-Fashioned Trusses Now Condemned

MARSHALL, Mich., Dec. 2.—Prominent medical authorities now state that after hernia has once been returned and is not allowed to come down again that there is a probability of an actual cure taking place. Prominent surgical authorities further state that the device invented and manufactured by the Brooks Appliance Company is well designed and deserves to be tried in any case where ordinary trusses have failed to retain the hernia.

Opinions expressed by both high medical authorities and practicing physicians are to the effect that the improved Brooks Appliance represents the greatest advancement in the mechanical treatment of hernia. Their opinions are based, to a large extent, on the fact that this newly patented device has eliminated the objectionable features commonly found in old-fashioned trusses consisting of hard pads and unyielding springs, both of which are uncomfortable and often dangerous.

The reason for the opinion of one high medical and surgical authority who has examined this rupture support is that the pressure brought to bear on the inguinal canal is elastic instead of being rigid, as in many form of trusses.

The Brooks Appliance Company, whose address is Park Square, Marshall, Mich., after months of experimental work, is now ready to furnish this newly perfected rupture support to the public.

The president of the company, Mayor H. C. Brooks, makes the following statement: "For over thirty years we have been manufacturing various types of hernial supports. Our products have always been honestly made and sold. This business, which was started by my father, Charles E. Brooks, has enjoyed a steady growth and the confidence of the public. Judging from past experience, I am fully convinced that this improved support will prove to be not only a boon to rupture sufferers, but will also necessitate the opening of branch offices in the principal cities. For the present, however, we are appointing no agents, and orders will be filled only under my personal supervision.

"I cordially invite every rupture sufferer to write me for full and complete information regarding this new invention, which will be sent on trial to prove its worth. All inquiries received will have my prompt attention and, in accordance with our established policy, will be treated as strictly confidential."

Diabetics

If you have the slightest symptoms of Diabetes—such as excessive thirst, inordinate hunger, with loss of weight in spite of keen appetite, with nervousness, irritability, restlessness, anxiety over trifles and loss of strength—lose no time in reading one of the most remarkable books of the day, "Is Diabetes Curable?"

It will be mailed free to anyone who will send merely name and address to Sanborn Laboratories, 442 Sanborn Building, Battle Creek, Michigan. It describes the Sanborn home treatment and relates the experiences of men and women of national prominence who restored themselves to perfect health after other treatments had failed.

The book has 78 pages bound in board covers and is a mine of authentic information for those who are suffering from Diabetes.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write your name and address in the special coupon you see at the end of this announcement, and send for a bottle to try. This complimentary bottle is forwarded, prepaid without charge of any kind.

Criticisms of Reallocation To Commission Are Numerous

Majority of Letters Indicate Reception of 'Local' Stations Has Suffered — Listeners Dependent on Distant Transmitters Pleased.

By THOMAS STEVENSON.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Thousands of letters are reaching the Federal Radio Commission expressing approval of the reallocation to broadcasting stations.* But for every letter of approval there are two or three registering dissatisfaction.

Almost all of the letters indicate that distance reception has been greatly improved while local reception has suffered to a considerable extent, varying with the locality.

Engineers, in and out of the commission, still contend that the new setup is a vast improvement. They make the assertion despite the protesting letters.

But where there is so much smoke there is bound to be some fire. In other words, it is believed the letters indicate precisely what has happened: distance reception has been greatly improved, but reception of local stations has been made more difficult.

To express it differently: The listener with a four or five tube set has been benefited by the changes, while the listener with a crystal or small tube set has suffered somewhat.

To eliminate heterodynes and clear a number of channels, it was necessary to reduce the number of local stations operating simultaneously. In many communities where three or four stations formerly were operating all at once, they are now dividing time, so that there is only one station on the air instead of three.

According to Radio Commissioner O. H. Caldwell, such a procedure was necessary for two reasons: To improve reception, and to carry out the congressional mandate that broadcasting facilities be divided equily between five zones.

"Before the reallocation," says Caldwell, "we had more than 500 stations operating simultaneously. But because so many of these stations were operating simultaneously on the same channel it was practically impossible for any of them to serve anything but a local area.

"We had to provide radio reception also for the farmers and rural sections of the country—sections which do not have local stations. These are the people, after all, who need radio most.

"To do this, it was necessary to clear some channels so that the stations operating thereon would not have their programs heterodyned by other stations on the same channel.

"The Commission cleared 40 channels, eight per zone, for rural reception. To clear these, it was necessary to displace many stations which had been causing heterodyne interference on them.

"The stations taken off those channels had to be placed elsewhere. Through rigid time division, it was possible for the Commission to extend licenses to all these stations.

"But previously we had more than 500 stations operating simultaneously. So far as local reception is concerned, taking the entire country as a whole, it is fair to assume that local reception has been reduced one-half, or in other words, it is only half as good as it used to be.

"Theoretically, that is what has happened. But it isn't quite as bad as that, because the Commission has tried to give the most time to stations which best serve public interest, reducing the time of those stations with inferior service.

"It has brought about better distance reception than the country has ever known before. At last, it is possible for the people living in rural sections to get dependable reliable, clear radio service.

"In my mind, there is no question that soon almost all listeners will have standard tube receiving sets, and then they will be able to share the benefits of the reallocation."

WEAF and WJZ to Lengthen Schedules

WEAF and WJZ, the New York stations of the National Broadcasting Co., will be operated on daily schedules of 17¼ and 16½ hours daily, except Sunday, beginning tomorrow.

WEAF will continue to go on the air at 5:45 o'clock in the morning (St. Louis time), and will broadcast until 11 p. m. without intermission. WJZ, owned by the Radio Corporation of America and operated by the NBC, will begin broadcasting at 6:30 a. m. and will continue until 11 p. m.

The new schedule increases WJZ's time on the air about four hours daily and WEAF's time an hour and 10 minutes to an hour and 15 minutes daily.

Vocal and instrumental music, ranging from jazz to the classics, will be presented during the additional broadcasting hours.

Rosa Ponselle, operatic star, who sings on KSD tomorrow night.

The program brings talks by Dr. Daniel Hodgdon, formerly president of the Hahneman Hospital, Chicago. Miss Leslie Frick, contralto, and John Mitchell, tenor, formerly a member of a well known vaudeville team, also takes part.

First All-Europe Chain Broadcast

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The Czech opera "La Fiancee Vendue," the first of the all-Europe transmissions, was relayed from Paris over 3600 miles of telephone lines to the principal stations of Central Europe.

One circuit went from Paris to Strasburg, Kehl, Nuremburg, Berlin, Dresden and Prague. Another, from Paris to Strasburg, Stuttgart, Dresden, Plauen and Prague.

Other circuits from Prague linked 12 more lesser Central European stations.

Chicago Symphony Orchestra Plays Over KSD Tonight

Another concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, led by Frederick Stock, and the appearance of Frederick Jagel, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, and Agnes Davis, last year's national competition winner, in the Atwater Kent Hour, will be the big features on KSD tonight.

Frederick Jagel, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, who is to be one of the soloists in tonight's Atwater Kent hour over KSD, is a Brooklyn (N. Y.) singer and is only 30 years of age. He was a clerk at 16 years in Brooklyn, after only two years in a manual training high school. He was heard singing in a Brooklyn church by a wealthy man who assisted him in studying music. He studied singing for a year in New York, then went to Milan, Italy, where he studied another year. He sang for three years in opera in Italy, appearing in 194 performances. He was engaged for the Metropolitan Opera and made his debut there Nov. 28, 1927.

Agnes Davis, lyric soprano, of Colorado Springs, Colo., the other soloist in tonight's concert over KSD, was girl winner of the 1927 Atwater Kent national competition. She has been studying singing on the scholarship won in the contest.

The march that precedes the bridal procession in "Lohengrin" will open the concert by the Peerless Reproducers that will begin

Many Stations Said to Wander Off Channels

More than half of the broadcasting stations are wandering from their assigned positions and are interfering with other stations on adjoining channels. This is indicated by reports reaching the Radio Commission from Federal Radio supervisors throughout the country.

The commission plans to take drastic action against offenders, on the ground that satisfactory reception never will be possible until stations adhere to the channels assigned to them.

Capt. Guy Hill, engineer of the commission, already has recommended that the licenses of 10 stations be suspended for deviation from frequency. These stations are:

WKBQ, Bronx, N. Y., which was 25,400 cycles off its frequency; WNJ, Newark, which was 18,000 cycles off; WEVD, New York, which was 8900 cycles off; WOKO, Mount Beacon, N. Y., which was 2900 cycles off; WAFD, Detroit, Mich., which was 73,200 cycles off; WKAR, Lansing, Mich., which was 2900 cycles off; KWKH, Shreveport, La., which was 2000 cycles off, and WSDU, New Orleans, which was 20,100 cycles off.

A report received by Commissioner LaFount indicates that the following stations also are deviating from their frequency:

No action has been taken by the commission against these stations, but Commissioner LaFount says that the licenses of all wandering stations will be revoked unless immediate corrections are made.

In recommending the suspension of the 10 licenses, Capt. Hill said: "Some of the worst offenders are shown by official measurements to have been repeatedly deviating from their frequencies.

"Obviously when a broadcasting station wanders over a range of 25,000 cycles, it spoils not only its own programs, so far as listeners are concerned, but also the programs of innocent stations on the two adjoining channels through which it swings. To put an immediate stop to such destruction of the programs of stations which are faithfully adhering to their frequencies, I recommend that in each case where stations have been measured and found to be deviating from their assigned frequency by more than one kilocycle, which is twice the allowable deviation, that the licenses of such stations be immediately suspended.

"This suspension is to be for a period of 60 days, unless before that time the stations can conclusively prove to the Engineering Division of the Commission that the station has obtained and installed equipment which can be depended upon to keep the station on its assigned frequency."

Incidents in Lives Of Great Composers Will Be Broadcast

A new broadcast series is to bring dramatizations of significant incidents in the lives of famous composers. The series will go on the air over Columbia chain stations and the first episode will come next Thursday night.

Each week a different composer will be the subject of the broadcast. Next Thursday night it will be Schubert, the centennial of whose death is being observed. The following weeks will recall incidents in the lives of Beethoven, Bach, Wagner, Liszt and others.

"It is easy to picture Schubert comfortably seated in a Vienna restaurant, listening to gypsy melodies and watching the beautiful artists singing their romantic songs," says the announcement from the Columbia studios. "Suddenly a copy of Shakspeare's poem, 'Hark, Hark, the Lark,' is brought to his attention. The beauty of it overwhelming him, he sets himself to the task of putting it to music. The manuscript is seized by the most beautiful of the entertainers, and the first and most dramatic presentation of Schubert's well-known song is given.

"This example of the first in the series of broadcasts will show what possibilities this unusual hour can offer. Well-known bits of music, whose beauty we often take for granted, will take on added interest when presented with an original and dramatic background."

FAMOUS CHICAGO ORCHESTRA PLAYS OVER KSD TONIGHT

There will be the usual Ethical drama broadcast over KSD at 7 o'clock.

The first movement from Beethoven's "Kreutzer" Sonata is to be played by Arcadie Birukoff, violinist, assisted by Dan Buttolph, pianist, in a recital over KSD at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. Other numbers on this program are an arrangement by Kreisler of the Dvorak "Slavonic Dance" and a Barcarolle by Francis MacMillen, the New York violinist.

The Stetson Parade broadcast at 5 o'clock over KSD will feature the Weymouth Post Band, as usual.

Shelton Brooks, a Negro composer who has to his credit several "hits," is to be featured in the Accousticon concert at 5:30 o'clock over KSD. Brooks is a pianist of ability and a clever comedian. The Accousticon program includes:

Love's Old Sweet Song, Memories, Boy School Cadets March (Sousa), orchestra; "Down South" Medley, In the Evening by the Moonlight, On Moonlight Bay, Southern Skies, quartet; Too Much Mustard Rag, orchestra; Medley of Old Songs (Brooks), Some of These Days, Walking the Dog, All Night Long, Rufus Johnson's Ragtime Harmony, Shelton Brooks; Wedding of the Winds (Hall); orchestra; Them There Eyes, Go With You (Brooks), Shelton Brooks; Tete-a-Tete (Thompson), orchestra; Jazz Town, Strutters' Ball (Brooks), Shelton Brooks; "Make-up" Medley, Let's Kiss and Make Up, For Old Time's Sake, You Walk Home Sweet Home When It Rains, quartet; Selections from "Vanderbilt Cup," orchestra.

Tonight's concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra over KSD will occupy the period from 6 to 7 o'clock. It will begin with the introduction to Act III of "Tannhauser." The prelude is brilliant and knightly in style. It portrays the chivalry of the court of Henry the Fowler when knighthood was at its height in Germany. The instrumentation is typically Wagnerian.

The second program number will be the Largo from Dvorak's "New World" Symphony. A softly uttered opening by the brasses leads into a beautiful melody, then comes the awakening of the prairies and finally a return to calm.

The familiar Peer Gynt Suite of Grieg is to be played next. Movements of this suite are titled "Morning," "The Death of Aase," "Anitra's Dance" and "In the Hall of the Mountain King."

Jean Sibelius, the Finnish composer, will be represented on the program by his "Valse Triste."

The fifth number will be the Intermezzo from the Wolf-Ferrari opera, "Jewels of the Madonna."

The concluding number will be Johann Strauss' waltz, "Wine, Women and Song," which is second only to his "Blue Danube" in popularity.

Dave Schooler, at one time called "The Boy Paderewski," who recently began an engagement as guest conductor of the Capitol Theater's stage band, is to be featured as piano soloist with Maj. Incidents in Lives Of Great Composers Will Be Broadcast

A new broadcast series is to bring dramatizations of significant incidents in the lives of famous composers. The series will go on the air over Columbia chain stations and the first episode will come next Thursday night.

Each week a different composer will be the subject of the broadcast. Next Thursday night it will be Schubert, the centennial of whose death is being observed. Following weeks will recall incidents in the lives of Beethoven, Bellini, Wagner, Liszt and others.

"It is easy to picture Schubert comfortably seated in a Vienna restaurant, listening to gypsy melodies and watching the beautiful artists singing their romantic songs," says the announcement from the Columbia studios. "Suddenly a copy of Shakspeare's poem, 'Hark, Hark, the Lark,' is brought to his attention. The beauty of it overwhelming him, he sets himself to the task of putting it to music. The manuscript is seized by the most beautiful of the entertainers, and the first and most dramatic presentation of Schubert's well-known song is given.

"This example of the first in this series of broadcasts will show what possibilities this unusual hour can offer. Well-known bits of music, whose beauty we often take for granted, will take on added interest when presented with an original and dramatic background."

Playlet About Napoleon Over KSD on Tuesday

A playlet depicting the career of Napoleon Bonaparte is to occupy next Tuesday night's Eveready Hour on KSD. The role of the Emperor will be taken by Lionel Atwill, while Rosaline Greene will play Josephine. Napoleon's first wife, and Selena Royle will act that of Marie Countess Walewska.

This will be the first time that an Eveready Hour "continuity" program has been broadcast to a Pacific Coast audience, last Tuesday's offering, which began the series of nation-wide Eveready Hour broadcasts, having been musical.

Rising to its climax in scene between Bonaparte and the lovely Marie Walewska, with its touching expressions of affection and renunciation, the historical play to be presented carries the listeners through the stirring phases of the Corsican's selection by the Directors of the Revolution as the man to stem the Paris mob, his march on Italy, his courtship of Josephine de Beauharnais, the meeting with Marie, the Moscow rout and the final inglorious days in exile on the island of St. Helena.

Within the space of an hour the necessarily condensed dialogue unfolds the colorful drama of the mighty Emperor of the French—his rush to fame, his weakness with the women of his choice, the fall of his star of destiny, as prophesied by the rejected Josephine.

Those who heard the rehearsals in the N. B. C. studios in New York have glowing predictions regarding the play.

Reginald Barlow will be the narrator, introducing the scenes and explain the intervening action.

Napoleon, Lionel Atwill; Marie Walewska, Selena Royle; Josephine, Rosaline Greene; Barras, Fred Forrester; Rewbel and Bertrand, Wheeler Dryden; Massena and Junot, Richard Abbott; Carnot and Rapp, Ed Thompson; Angereau, Jack McBride.

Lionel Atwill is one of the leading actors on the American stage. Born in England, he has appeared in plays by Shaw, Ibsen and Pinero with marked successes, as well as in Shakspearean roles. Among plays in which he has starred are "The Doll's House," "Peer Gynt," "Wild Duck," "The Heart of Celini," "Deburau" and, recently, "Napoleon."

Selena Royle and Rosaline Greene also are well known to theater goers. Miss Royle is the daughter of Edwin Milton Royle, author of "The Squaw Man," and has appeared in Broadway productions. Miss Greene was heard as Joan of Arc in The Eveready Hour production recently.

Musical interlude and accompaniment will be by the Eveready Orchestra, Nathaniel Shilkret conducting.

Kansan in Constant Touch With Byrd

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 1.—With a home-made sending and receiving set, William Obrist, 25-year-old postal clerk of this city, has followed Commander Richard E. Byrd's flagship, City of New York, over the first few thousands miles of its voyage toward the Antarctic continent.

The amateur operator first established connection with the City of New York on the Pacific 600 miles south of the Samoan Islands. The ship's operator "talked" with him for nearly two hours, transmitting messages to be forwarded to families of the adventurers aboard the flagship.

"Yours is the first amateur station we have been able to pick up in 10 days," a message said, "and you have done fine work. You are easy to hear and send and receive like an expert."

Obrist worked for five years to bring his set to its present degree of efficiency. Now he is able to establish radio communication nearly every night with amateur stations in Australia, the South Sea Islands and Africa.

His station, 9BEZ, has a 50-watt transmitter, using 1500 volts of rectified alternating current on the plate. The City of New York's wireless station, WFBT, uses a tube transmitter of 1000 watts.

Chinese Province To Get Radio Service

By the Associated Press.

FOOCHOW, China, Dec. 1. — An American radio engineer has won his fight to introduce radio to this backward province of Fukien.

As a result of tests he conducted, the Government is expected to begin extensive use of radio in carrying on its work, especially of an educational nature.

Much difficulty is said to have been experienced in perfecting radio apparatus that had a range covering the entire province, but this the American has accomplished. The province has hundreds of villages, and each will be supplied with a receiver.

To Move WABC Transmitter.

The transmitter of WABC, New York, is to be moved to a new site, with the hope of increasing its range. Antenna masts 165 feet high are being erected on the new location on the south shore of Long Island. Ground wires are being placed in marshy land. Power will remain at 5000 watts, with an auxiliary transmitter of 500 watts arranged to be cut in automatically should the big transmitter go down.

If troubled by excessive background noises or microphonic interference, the cause is generally traced to the detector, which should be changed.

Australia Plans Government Radio

By the Associated Press.

SYDNEY, Australia.—Transfer to Government control of the broadcasting stations of Australia will involve an expenditure of $400,000 to $500,000, it is estimated. It is believed arrangements can be made with existing companies to take over their assets and introduce the new system before the expiration of existing licenses in November next year.

The new policy contemplates that the Government shall be the owner of the plant, equipment and mechanical means of broadcasting in all Class A stations and relay stations and provision be made for broadcasting of complete programs.

By the Associated Press.

DAVENTRY, England, Dec. 1.—Broadcasting of "still" photographs has been added to the programs of the British Broadcasting Corporation transmitted here from 5XX, starting every afternoon at 2 o'clock, London time. The Fultograph system is used.

This move is in answer to the plan of the Baird Television Co. to broadcast television into England from a Continental station. Previously it had been announced that the British Broadcasting Corporation would demonstrate television, but this failed to materialize. The Baird interests then reached an agreement with a French station.

A photograph of King George was the first to be publicly broadcast in England. It required nearly four minutes to complete the operation, but at the end of that time it was taken from the air in London, 70 miles away, in fair condition.

Railroad Plans Broadcasts Over 40-Station Chain

Great Northern and N. B. C. Officers Touring Northwest For Program Material.

John Elwood, general manager of programs for the National Broadcasting Co., and a group of Great Northern Railway and NBC executives are on a tour of the Great Northern system to obtain program material for broadcasting.

The party included H. M. Simms, executive assistant of the Great Northern Railway; Joseph H. Finn, first vice president of the McJunkin Advertising Co., Chicago; Niles Trammell, manager of the Chicago Division; Raymond Knight, production manager, and Edward Hale Bierstadt, continuity director of the National Broadcasting Co.

Back of a program to promote the general development of the Northwest will be a plan for a radio hookup including 40 broadcasting stations in the largest cities extending from coast to coast and from Canada to Mexico. Listeners may hear the story of the Northwest each week after the elaborate plans worked out on the present expedition are perfected. The Great Northern is the first transcontinental line to engage in radio publicity on such a scale.

"Representatives of the National Broadcasting Co. will meet State, civic and business leaders throughout the Northwest and through contacts and study seek the background so that the series of entertainments offered from coast to coast will be unique and helpful," Elwood said.

Agricultural, recreational and industrial features will be utilized in this broadcast plan.

The delegation will go to Glacier National Park. They are due in Vancouver, B. C., and Seattle, Wash., today.

Contact will be sought with chambers of commerce and industrial and agricultural leaders throughout that region. Stops will be made at Seattle, Tacoma, Longview, Portland, Spokane, Great Falls, Helena, Butte, Havre, Williston, Minot, Grand Forks and Fargo.

IN NEW FIRESTONE HOUR ON KSD

FRANKLYN BAUER, tenor, "The Voice of Firestone," and VAUGHN DE LEATH, "The Original Radio Girl."

New Firestone Hour On KSD Tomorrow

Harvey S. Firestone, president of the rubber company which bears his name, will make two brief addresses over KSD and allied NBC stations tomorrow night. His talks will be in connection with "The Voice of Firestone," a new presentation which is to have its premiere.

The programs will feature the return of Franklyn Baur, who two years ago forsook the microphone for Florenz Ziegfeld and the "Follies;" Vaughn De Leath, noted radio contralto; the Choristers, a male octet, and a 35-piece orchestra directed by Hugo Mariani. The program is said to contain one of the most elaborate musical groups ever assembled in one radio presentation.

This is the first time a program has been repeated in an Eastern studio for listeners West of the Rockies. Arrangements also have been made to rebroadcast the program from short wave transmitters for listeners in Liberia, on the west coast of Africa, and in London.

Where to Hear Dr. Cadman.

The radio service in which Dr. S. Parkes Cadman speaks may be tuned in at 3 o'clock this afternoon on WHAS, WFAA, WSAI, WOW, KVOO, WSM, WSB or KOA.

WNAC Would Give Television Service

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Permanent television service will be given "lookers-in" by WNAC, Boston, if the Radio Commission grants an application for a short wave band.

John Shepard, president of the Shepard Norvell Co., which operates the station, has told the commission that the station proposes to synchronize visual and audible broadcasting. He says pictures of an orchestra leader directing his orchestra would be transmitted by short waves for reception by special televisor equipment while the speaker would bring in the music.

The station has applied for a band of frequencies 100 kilocycles wide in the vicinity of 5000 kilocycles. Later it is hoped to reduce the width to 10 kilocycles, the same sized channel now used for audible broadcasting. Power of 1000 watts is requested.

New Station in Rumania.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 1.—Rumania's new broadcasting station at Bucharest will start operation early in the spring. It will have a power of 12,000 watts, and by the use of a constant current installation of 18,000 modulated watts on the antenna.

Radio Trade Notes

A new program over KWK and allied NBC stations on Monday nights will feature Joe Rines, a Boston musician, and his orchestra. Rines made his radio debut over Station WGI, at Medford Hillside, Mass., nearly eight years ago. Since then he has broadcast from stations in Chicago and Boston and other New England cities.

Incidentally, H. J. Smith, district representative here for the Amrad Corporation of Medford Hillside, says that WGI did the first broadcasting in this country, though KDKA is credited with the first broadcasting on a regular schedule.

The Amrad Corporation has been a real pioneer in radio. About 18 months ago, Power Crosley Jr., head of the Crosley Radio Corporation, of Cincinnati, put the resources of his organization back of Amrad, and since then the engineering staffs of the two concerns have made notable developments in receiver design which have been embodied in the new line of Amrad receivers. A number of exclusive radio patents have been taken out for the benefit of Amrad.

An interesting development in the Amrad laboratories has been the Mershon condenser, which is of far greater capacity, and therefore has larger filtering power than the type of condenser ordinarily used in all-electric receiver design.

Herbert Hoover has a Kolster radio receiver aboard the battleship Maryland on which he is doing his sea traveling while on tour of South American countries. The set was presented to him by Dr. F. A. Kolster, chief research engineer for the Kolster Radio Corporation, who had it installed in Hoover's suite on the ship. The Kolster sets were designed in the corporation's laboratories at Palo Alto, Cal., and Dr. Kolster had the receiver installed on the Maryland as a gift from a fellow citizen of the President-elect.

A Bosch "28" receiver was put through a test on two evenings of the past week from 7 to 10 p. m. The tests were carried out at West Pine and Vandeventer avenue, using 12 feet of wire for an antenna and also an aerial of 20 feet on the flat at a height of 45 feet and a 50-foot lead-in.

Using the short inside aerial, the set picked up a station on virtually every channel assigned to a station in the Middle West, the South and the East, from KSD down to KYW, inclusive. The place where the tests were held is only a quarter of a mile from WIL, about the same distance from KFWF, about a mile from KWK and only two miles from KSD. So conditions were very bad for tuning in stations on the lower part of the dial. However, WOAI, San Antonio, Tex., and several other stations between KYW and KWK were tuned in.

All these stations came in on the short antenna with plenty of volume, among them being KOA, Denver, Colo.; WGY, Schenectady, N. Y.; KDKA, Pittsburg; WSB, Atlanta, Ga.; WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind.; WABC, New York, and others. The more powerful stations, such as WGN, WMAQ, WCCO, WGY and WLW, came in on the short aerial like locals.

Using the longer antenna, KFI, Los Angeles, was tuned in like a local station at 7:49 o'clock Wednesday evening. KOA, WABC and other distant stations came in so strongly, that it was necessary to cut down the volume as if for KWK, which at the test location comes in "like a cannon."

Tone quality throughout the test, whether on distant or local stations, was clear, true and natural. Tuning was easy, there being no necessity for strained precision in picking up the more distant stations.

Use of the new 250 type super power tube, and carefully fitted dynamic speakers, are special features of the new Edison receivers which have reached St. Louis. In fact, one of these new Edisons, which combines receiver and electric phonograph, has two of these tubes in the final audio stage and two dynamic speakers.

The long experience of the Edison organization with acoustics, as well as in designing cabinets, whows in the tone quality and the furniture of the new sets and combinations.

The new Edisons are one-dial control receivers. Also the throwing of a switch converts the set to a receiver best fitted for receiving local stations or to a sensitive set designed for tuning in the most distant stations.

Size is an all-important factor in designing furniture for a modern room. When it means no sacrifice of comfort, smallness is a distinct assets, for it permits the housewife to switch appointments about to suit her own fancy or convenience. For this reason, according to L. E. Parker, chief radio engineer of Stewart-Warner, the new "800" radio series was built as compactly as possible without sacrifice of beauty or operating efficiency.

The cabinet dimensions of Stewart-Warner model 801, one of the leaders of the new 1929 line, are only 18¾ inches long; 10¾ inches deep and 7¾ inches high. "So far as I know," said Parker, "no contemporary set is smaller or more compact than the Stewart-Warner '801.' In this cabinet are not only the receiver chassis, but the entire power unit and all the tubes. It weighs 35 pounds. The all-electric a. c. combination, another member of the new family, is the same as '801' except that it has the new Stewart-Warner reproducer permanently attached to the cabinet."

Because of the magic of radio, 6300 persons today find employment with the Grigsby-Grunow Co., maker of Majestic receivers. The growth of this firm from a business that five years ago operated with 40 employes on one floor of a small building in Chicago and with 100,000 square feet of space a year ago, to the present size illustrates the swift changes that radio has wrought.

"The Grigsby-Grunow Co. has no warehouse," according to a Chicago Tribune staff writer. "Thirty carloads of raw materials come into the plant every morning and 30 carloads of completed radios go out every night. That means 3200 complete radio sets turned out at the plant every day, and even this output is insufficient to supply the demand.

That adequate supplies be available, the company has five mills whose sole efforts are devoted to providing lumber for its needs. Approximately 34 tons of steel are used each day. The company uses enough wire for its super dynamic speaker to circle the globe daily. Sixteen thousand pounds of tinfoil are used every day. Approximately 12,000 pounds of paper are used daily for condensers. More than 20 tons of wax are used each day for impregnating condensers and chokes. More than 5000 pounds of aluminum are used daily."

Incidents in Lives Of Great Composers Will Be Broadcast

A new broadcast series to bring dramatizations of significant incidents in the lives of great composers. The series will be on the air over Columbia stations and the first episode will come next Thursday night.

Each week a different composer will be the subject of the broadcast. Next Thursday night it will be Schubert, the centennial of whose death is being observed. The following weeks will recall incidents in the lives of Beethoven, Brahms, Wagner, Liszt and others.

"It is easy to picture Schubert comfortably seated in a Vienna restaurant, listening to gypsy musicians and watching the beautiful girls singing their romantic songs," says the announcement from the Columbia studios. "Suddenly a waiter brings Shakspeare's poem, 'Hark, hark, the Lark,' is brought to his attention. The beauty of it overwhelming him, he sets himself to the task of putting it to music. The manuscript is seized by the most beautiful of the entertainers, and the lovely and most dramatic presentation of Schubert's well-known song is given.

"This example of the first in a series of broadcasts will show the possibilities this unusual hour can offer. Well-known bits of music whose beauty we often take for granted, will take on added beauty when presented with an artistic and dramatic background."

Other numbers on this program will be an arrangement by Kreisler of Dvorak "Slavonic Dance" and the Barcarolle by Francis MacMillen, the New York violinist.

The Stetson Parade broadcast at 5 o'clock over KSD will feature the Weymouth Post Band, as usual.

Shelton Brooks, a Negro composer who has to his credit several "hits," is to be featured in the Accousticon concert at 5:30 o'clock over KSD. Brooks is a pianist of ability and a clever comedian. The Accousticon program includes:

Love's Old Sweet Song, Memories, School Cadets March (Sousa), selections, "Down South" Medley, In the Shade of the Moonlight, On Moonlight Bay, Southern Skies, quartet; Too Much Mustard Rag, orchestra; Medley of Songs (Brooks), Some Time, Those Walking the Dog, All Night Long, Rufe Johnson's Ragtime Harmony, Shelton Brooks' Wedding of the Chinee Waltz (Hall); orchestra; Then I'll Go With You (Brooks), Shelton Brooks' Pete-a-Tete (Thompson), orchestra; Down Strutters' Ball (Brooks), Medley, "Makeup" Medley, Love Will Make Up, Oh Time, Say You Waltz Home Sweet Home with Variations, Quartet; Selections from "Vanderbilt Revue," orchestra.

Tonight's concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra over KSD will occupy the period from 8 to 9 o'clock. It will begin with the introduction to Act III of "Lohengrin." The prelude is brilliant and knightly in style. It portrays the chivalry of the court of Henry the Fowler when knighthood was at its height in Germany. The instrumentation is typically Wagnerian.

The second program number will be the Largo from Dvorak's "New World" Symphony. A softly stirring opening by the brasses leads into a beautiful melody, then comes the awakening of the prairies and finally a return to calm.

The familiar Peer Gynt Suite by Grieg is to be played next. Movements of this suite are "Morning," "The Death of Aase," "Anitra's Dance" and "In the Hall of the Mountain King."

Jean Sibelius, the Finnish composer, will be represented on the program by his "Valse Triste."

The fifth number will be the Intermezzo from the Wolf-Ferrari opera, "Jewels of the Madonna."

The concluding number will be Johann Strauss' waltz, "Wine, Women and Song," which is second only to his "Blue Danube" in popularity.

Dave Schooler, at one time soloist with "The Boy Paderewski," who recently began an engagement as guest conductor of the Capitol theater's stage band, is to be featured as piano soloist with Maj. Bowes' "Family" at 7:00 this evening over KSD. He is a piano virtuoso, his playing being characterized by great brilliancy and excellent technique.

The program for the Atwater Kent concert at 8:15 o'clock over KSD is announced as follows:

WNAC Would Give Television Service

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Permanent television service will be given "lookers-in" by WNAC, Boston, if the Radio Commission grants an application for a short wave band.

John Shepard, president of the Shepard Norvell Co., which operates the station, has told the commission that the station proposes to synchronize visual and audible broadcasting. He says pictures of an orchestra leader directing his orchestra would be transmitted by short waves for reception by special televisor equipment while the speaker would bring in the music.

The station has applied for a band of frequencies 100 kilocycles wide in the vicinity of 5000 kilocycles. Later it is hoped to reduce the width to 10 kilocycles, the same sized channel now used for audible broadcasting. Power of 1000 watts is requested.

New Station in Rumania.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 1.—Rumania's new broadcasting station at Bucharest will start operation early in the spring. It will have a power of 12,000 watts, and by the use of a constant current installation of 18,000 modulated watts on the antenna.

Radio Trade Notes

A new program over KWK and allied NBC stations on Monday nights will feature Joe Rines, a Boston musician, and his orchestra. Rines made his radio debut over Station WGI, at Medford Hillside, Mass., nearly eight years ago. Since then he has broadcast from stations in Chicago and Boston and other New England cities.

Incidentally, H. J. Smith, district representative here for the Amrad Corporation of Medford Hillside, says that WGI did the first broadcasting in this country, though KDKA is credited with the first broadcasting on a regular schedule.

The Amrad Corporation has been a real pioneer in radio. About 18 months ago, Power Crosley Jr., head of the Crosley Radio Corporation, of Cincinnati, put the resources of his organization back of Amrad, and since then the engineering staffs of the two concerns have made notable developments in receiver design which have been embodied in the new line of Amrad receivers. A number of exclusive radio patents have been taken out for the benefit of Amrad.

An interesting development in the Amrad laboratories has been the Mershon condenser, which is of far greater capacity, and therefore has larger filtering power than the type of condenser ordinarily used in all-electric receiver design.

Herbert Hoover has a Kolster radio receiver aboard the battleship Maryland on which he is doing his sea traveling while on tour of South American countries. The set was presented to him by Dr. F. A. Kolster, chief research engineer for the Kolster Radio Corporation, who had it installed in Hoover's suite on the ship. The Kolster sets were designed in the corporation's laboratories at Palo Alto, Cal., and Dr. Kolster had the receiver installed on the Maryland as a gift from a fellow citizen of the President-elect.

A Bosch "28" receiver was put through a test on two evenings of the past week from 7 to 10 p. m. The tests were carried out at West Pine and Vandeventer avenue, using 12 feet of wire for an antenna and also an aerial of 30 feet on the flat at a height of 45 feet and a 50-foot lead-in.

Using the short inside aerial, the set picked up a station on virtually every channel assigned to a station in the Middle West, the South and the East, from KSD down to KYW, inclusive. The place where the tests were held is only a quarter of a mile from WIL, about the same distance from KFWF, about a mile from KWK and only two miles from KSD. So conditions were very bad for tuning in stations on the lower part of the dial. However, WOAI, San Antonio, Tex., and several other stations between KYW and KWK were tuned in.

All these stations came in on the short antenna with plenty of volume, among them being KOA, Denver, Colo.; WGY, Schenectady, N. Y.; KDKA, Pittsburg; WSB, Atlanta, Ga.; WOWO, Fort Wayne, Ind.; WABC, New York, and others. The more powerful stations, such as WGN, WMAQ, WCCO, WGY and WLW, came in on the short aerial like locals.

Using the longer antenna, KFI, Los Angeles, was tuned in like a local station at 7:49 o'clock Wednesday evening. KOA, WABC and other distant stations came in so strongly, that it was necessary to cut down the volume as if for KWK, which at the test location comes in "like a cannon."

Tone quality throughout the test, whether on distant or local stations, was clear, true and natural. Tuning was easy, there being no necessity for strained precision in picking up the more distant stations.

Use of the new 250 type super power tube, and carefully fitted dynamic speakers, are special features of the new Edison receivers which have reached St. Louis. In fact, one of these new Edisons, which combines receiver and electric phonograph, has two of these tubes in the final audio stage and two dynamic speakers.

The long experience of the Edison organization with acoustics, as well as in designing cabinets, shows in the tone quality and the furniture of the new sets and combinations.

The new Edisons are one-dial control receivers. Also, the throwing of a switch converts the set to a receiver best fitted for receiving local stations or to a sensitive set designed for tuning in the most distant stations.

Size is an all-important factor in designing furniture for a modern room. When it means no sacrifice of comfort, smallness is a distinct assets, for it permits the housewife to switch appointments about to suit her own fancy or convenience. For this reason, according to L. E. Parker, chief radio engineer of Stewart-Warner, the new "800" radio series was built as compactly as possible without sacrifice of beauty or operating efficiency.

The cabinet dimensions of Stewart-Warner model 801, one of the leaders of the new 1929 line, are only 16¾ inches long; 10¾ inches deep and 7¾ inches high. "So far as I know," said Parker, "no contemporary set is smaller or more compact than the Stewart-Warner '801.' In this cabinet are not only the receiver chassis, but the entire power unit and all the tubes. It weighs 35 pounds. The all-electric a. c. combination, another member of the new family, is the same as '801' except that it has the new Stewart-Warner reproducer permanently attached to the cabinet."

Because of the magic of radio, 6300 persons today find employment with the Grigsby-Grunow Co., maker of Majestic receivers. The growth of this firm from a business that five years ago operated with 40 employes on one floor of a small building in Chicago and with 100,000 square feet of space a year ago, to the present size illustrates the swift changes that radio has wrought.

"The Grigsby-Grunow Co. has no warehouse," according to a Chicago Tribune staff writer. "Thirty carloads of raw materials come into the plant every morning and 30 carloads of completed radios go out every night. That means 3200 complete radio sets turned out at the plant every day, and even this output is insufficient to supply the demand.

That adequate supplies be available, the company has five mills whose sole efforts are devoted to providing lumber for its needs. Approximately 84 tons of steel are used each day. The company uses enough wire for its super dynamic speaker to circle the globe daily. Sixteen thousand pounds of tinfoil are used every day. Approximately 12,000 pounds of paper are used daily for condensers. More than 20 tons of wax are used each day for impregnating condensers and chokes. More than 5000 pounds of aluminum are used daily."

Incidents in Lives Of Great Composers Will Be Broadcast

A new broadcast series is to bring dramatizations of significant incidents in the lives of famous composers. The series will go on the air over Columbia chain stations and the first episode will come next Thursday night.

Each week a different composer will be the subject of the broadcast. Next Thursday night it will be Schubert, the centennial of whose death is being observed. Following weeks will recall incidents in the lives of Beethoven, Bellini, Wagner, Liszt and others.

"It is easy to picture Schubert comfortably seated in a Vienna restaurant, listening to gypsy melodies and watching the beautiful artiste singing their romantic songs," says the announcement from the Columbia studios. "Suddenly a copy of Shakspeare's poem, 'Hark, Hark, the Lark,' is brought to his attention. The beauty of it overwhelming him, he sets himself to the task of putting it to music. The manuscript is seized by the most beautiful of the entertainers, and the first and most dramatic presentation of Schubert's well-known song is given.

"This example of the first in this series of broadcasts will show what possibilities this unusual hour can offer. Well-known bits of music, whose beauty we often take for granted, will take on added interest when presented with an original and dramatic background."

Love's Old Sweet Song, Memories, High School Cadets March (Sousa), orchestra; "Down South" Medley, In the Evening by the Moonlight, On Moonlight Bay, Under Southern Skies, quartet; Too Much Mustard Rag, orchestra; Medley of Popular Songs (Brooks). Tonight's concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra over KSD will occupy the period from 6 to 7 o'clock. It will begin with the introduction to Act III of "Lhengrin." The prelude is brilliant and knightly in style. It portrays the chivalry of the court of Henry the Fowler when knighthood was at its height in Germany. The instrumentation is typically Wagnerian.

The second program number will be the Largo from Dvorak's "New World" Symphony. A softly uttered opening by the brasses leads into a beautiful melody, then comes the awakening of the prairies and finally a return to calm.

The familiar Peer Gynt Suite of Grieg is to be played next. Movements of this suite are titled "Morning," "The Death of Aase," "Anitra's Dance" and "In the Hall of the Mountain King."

Jean Sibelius, the Finnish composer, will be represented on the program by his "Valse Triste."

The fifth number will be the Intermezzo from the Wolf-Ferrari opera, "Jewels of the Madonna."

The concluding number will be Johann Strauss' waltz, "Wine, Women and Song," which is second only to his "Blue Danube" in popularity.

Dave Schooler, at one time called "The Boy Paderewski," who recently began an engagement as guest conductor of the Capitol Theater's stage band, is to be featured as piano soloist with Maj. Bowes' "Family" at 7:00 this evening over KSD. He is a piano virtuoso, his playing being characterized by fiery brilliancy and excellent technique.

Medal for Good Diction On Radio to Be Awarded

Academy of Arts and Sciences to Choose Person to be Honored From Announcers for Stations in United States.

A medal for good radio diction will be awarded by the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Three gold medals for good diction on the stage have already been awarded by the academy to Walter Hampden, Edith Wynne Matthison and Otis Skinner.

The decision of the academy to award a medal for good radio diction is based on the theory that announcers have an enormous effect upon the speech of the American people.

The winner will be chosen from among the official announcers of the radio stations of this country.

Announcement of the details will be made from the Academy on Sunday evening, Dec. 16, over a nation-wide hook-up of National Broadcasting Co. and Columbia Broadcasting Co. stations.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Academy, will be the chairman of the occasion. Other speakers will be the winners of the Academy medals for good diction, Miss Matthison, Hampden and Skinner. Prof. George Pierce Baker, head of the Yale Dramatic School; Robert Underwood Johnson, secretary of the Academy, and Augustus Thomas, playwright, also will speak.

The art committee of the Academy, of which Cass Gilbert is chairman, has selected as designer of the medal John Flanagan, a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

A Cause of Weak Reception.

Battery weakness will show up after the first five minutes of good reception. This comes by sudden weakening of the output. During idleness, batteries recover some of their spent energy with the result that as the set is started, reception will be better than would be normal for batteries in a semi-discharged condition.

Iowa Town Would Bar Interference

By the Associated Press.

CORNING, Ia., Dec. 1.—Listeners here have the City Council on their side.

Under an ordinance that has passed first reading, the Aldermen would make it unlawful to operate any apparatus which causes reasonably preventable interference with any other device, including a radio receiver. Violet ray and X-ray machines causing interference could not be used between 6 and 11 p. m. except in emergencies.

Violators would be liable to fines of not more than $100 or imprisonment for not more than 30 days.

New Members for Radio Board Likely

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—If the Federal Radio Commission is continued as an administrative body, there probably will be new members.

At least two commissioners have said that they cannot continue to give their full time to the commission work. They are Harold A. La Pount of the Fifth, and O. H. Caldwell, of the First Zone.

Both say they will accept reappointment only if the commission is continued as an appellate body.

Commissioner Pickard does not seem to be enthusiastic about reappointment. It is definitely known that he is making plans to leave the commission at the expiration of his term in February. If the commission is continued as an appellate body, however, there is little doubt that he would accept if reappointed.

Commissioners Sykes and Robinson have not talked much about their plans. It is not known whether or not they wish to succeed themselves.

This is all regardless of Congressional action. Rumor has it that Congress may indicate its displeasure with the commission work by refusing to reappoint any of the present commissioners.

Senators and Representatives returning to Washington for the fall session of Congress will not talk about the prospects for continuation of the commission. But they do say that they are not at all satisfied with conditions in their home states.

Tip to Operators of High Voltage Sets.

It is well to remember that in dealing with high voltage equipment the current source should be turned off before any attempt is made to change tubes, equipment or wiring. Pulling a tube out of its socket, for instance, while the current to the power pack and amplifier is turned on will cause a surge of voltage which may be sufficent to charge the filter condensors of the power pack to the breakdown point unless the condensers are designed to withstand very high voltage. The usual result of a breakdown in the condensers is a decided heating in the rectifier tube, causing the tube elements to get red hot. This will ruin the rectifier tube if not caught in time and may even result in sufficient heat to break the glass of the tube. Such heating of the tube is no fault of the tube. It is a sure indication that there is something wrong in the power pack equipment or wiring.

Ponselle, 'Found' By Caruso, Rises Rapidly as Singer

From a "nickelodeon" soloist at $12 a week to prima donna at the Metropolitan is the story of Rosa Ponselle, who will be soloist in the General Motors Family Party over KSD tomorrow night.

Popular classical music will be sung by Miss Ponselle, who will be supported by a symphony orchestra directed by Eugene Goosens, conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, an outstanding composer and guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Rosa Ponselle was born in Meriden, Conn., the daughter of Italian immigrants. She sang constantly at her play as a child and later sang in a local church choir. The manager of a nickelodeon gave her a singing job in his theater and her voice drew packed houses for every appearance. Her next step was to a hotel in New Haven, where, much to her surprise, her salary was fixed at $50 a week. A theatrical manager heard her sing in the hotel and employed her and her sister, Carmela, for a vaudeville tour.

She was discovered as a grand opera possibility by Caruso, who heard her sing and arranged an audition by Gatti-Casazza, manager of the Metropolitan. Miss Ponselle did not know an operatic role when the audition was given but, nevertheless, Gatti-Casazza gave her a contract.

She made her operatic debut Nov. 15, 1918, singing in "La Forza del Destino" with Caruso, being the first American girl to win this mark of distinction. Since then she has risen to a foremost position on the Metropolitan stage.

Eugene Goosens represents the third generation of a family of noted conductors. Although only 30 years old, he had already achieved fame as one of the leading English directors when he was invited in 1923 to become director of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra. He is also director of the operatic department of the Eastman School of Music, of the Rochester Little Symphony Orchestra and of the Rochester Opera Company. He has frequently appeared as guest conductor with the New York Symphony, the Boston Symphony, the Los Angeles Philharmonic and the Pittsburg Symphony as well as the St. Louis Symphony.

500 IN JEWISH CHARITY DRIVE TO HOLD DINNER

Workers Will Seek $500,000 Fund in Campaign to Open Tonight.

The campaign to raise $500,000 for the 26 philanthropic organizations maintained or subsidized by the Jewish Federation of St. Louis will open tonight with a dinner for 500 volunteer workers at the Columbian Club. Judge Harry Fisher of Chicago and Mark C. Steinberg, chairman of the campaign, will speak.

The occasion will also mark the twenty-first anniversary of the Federation and the third anniversary of the union of all local Jewish organizations.

The workers are divided into two contingents: the men's division of 15 teams, headed by Ed Platt, David Eisman and Frank Dubinsky, and the women's division of 19 teams, headed by Mrs. Charles M. Rice and Mrs. Alvin L. Bauman.

Reports of the workers will be given at luncheons Tesuday, Wedensday and Thursday at Hotel Statler. A victory rally will be held a week from tonight at the Columbian Club if, as is expected, the campaign is concluded successfully by that time. The amount sought is about $150,000 in excess of the Federation's present income. Former subscribers number 4000, and 12,000 prospects have been listed.

JAPANESE LONG FAMILIAR WITH 'TALKIES' IN MOVIES

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 1.—Japanese motion picture theaters have a good claim to leadership in the "talkies." They have employed the main idea for years, in having a running fire of speech accompany the film. This is furnished by a school of artists peculiar to Japan, known as "katsuben," or "movie-explainers."

Although domestic movies have made considerable progress in Japan, the foreign-made, especially the American, film has always been most in demand. When foreign pictures were introduced it was obvious that the audiences could not follow the story, titled in a foreign language and showing motives and points of view alien to Japanese minds. So the katsuben came into existence.

These gentry, standing behind pulpit-like desks behind the screen and gesturing with a fan, have a wonderful flow of talk, sometimes merely explaining the action, other times entering into a rapid-fire dialogue, changing the voice to suit each character. The institution was further developed to something like the new "talkies" when four or five katsuben were employed simultaneously when big native film dramas were shown, each assigned a leading character. Japanese actors, with a sense of synchronization highly developed by puppet plays, proved adept at fitting suitable words to the silent drama from abroad.

38 Bridges Across the Rhine.

DUISBURG, Dec. 1.—Thirty-eight bridges span the Rhine, and 467 cities and villages dot its shores. These facts are apparent from a new map of the historic German stream just published here. Eight of the bridges across the Rhine are in Holland, four at Basel in Switzerland. At Cologne, Bonn, Coblence, Bingen and Mayence there are two and sometimes more bridges to accommodate the railway, pedestrian, automobile and tramway traffic.

You can't always estimate a man's income by the clothes he wears. Some are wiser buyers than others — and have better taste.

As in everything else, there is in clothing a cost price below which it is impossible to get irreproachable quality. Below that price the apparent saving is rank extravagance. And there's a top price beyond which finicky niceties cost more than they are worth.

Forty-four years experience has convinced us that (at present cost of woolens) $50 is bottom and $70 top—for true economy and complete satisfaction in suits.

Annual U. S. Motor Salon Opens Tonight In New York

Seventeen European and American High-Priced Chassis to Be Exhibited—Trend Toward Convertible Bodies to Be in Evidence.

With a score of the world's foremost carrossiers presenting the largest and finest display of custom-built motor coachwork ever assembled and 17 European and American high-priced chassis on exhibition, the twenty-fourth annual Automobile Salon opens at 8 o'clock tonight at Hotel Commodore, New York, to continue through next Saturday night. Well over a million dollars worth of de luxe motor cars will fill both the main lobby and ballroom floor of the big hotel.

Six nations, France, Belgium, Germany, England and the United States are to be represented, thus maintaining the international aspect of this veteran exhibition. Fourteen prominent American custom body builders and two from abroad will have special exhibits and the latest creations of six more famous European carossiers will be shown on various foreign chassis.

Many novelties in the line of accessories and equipment for de luxe motor cars will be shown on the various automobiles exhibited, and in addition special exhibits will be made by a number of tire manufacturers.

New coachwork designs and styles and new types of bodies will be disclosed at the opening of the salon tonight. As forecast by the recent Paris Salon, color schemes will be more brilliant and impressive than ever. At least two novelties in upholstery, one the use of reptile skins from python to lizard leathers, and the other a new development of rayon, will be exhibited.

Two pronounced changes will be found in new coach work types. One is a general trend toward the convertible type of body, the other a successful effort toward securing greater passenger comfort.

It was once the practice to design a beautiful body and then arrange the seating within it. Now this idea has been reversed and the seating is first considered and the body designed around the seats. The result is a much higher degree of riding comfort.

Town cars, landaulets, broughams, imperials, sport sedans, limousines, coupes and cabriolets will all be exhibited in models ranging from conventional richness to luxurious splendor.

Some sport sedans to be displayed are so low that one can stand on the curb and rest an arm on the roof, yet have a roomy four or five passenger interior. Sport sedans have room for golf bags, provided by sliding the rear seat forward to leave ample space behind it, a small cabinet for glasses and refreshments, luxurious leather upholstery and soft heavy armrests with an unusual number of cigar lighters and ash trays.

The sedan or inside drive body type retains its popularity because of its utility. Unparalleled luxury of appointments are a feature of the aristocratic landaulet, cabriolet, limousine and brougham, that seem to diffuse the very atmosphere of the carrossier's art.

In contrast to the trend toward more ornate exteriors, interiors this season are treated with marked simplicity. It would seem that the highly successful effort toward seating comfort had left no need for elaborate decorative treatment. Refined luxury, however, is a real keynote.

A new factor in this year's salon is the adoption of modernistic art, and this is most noticeable in the interiors of closed cars. In the past two years the carrossiers have sought their motif in ancient and medieval art, and for open sport cars in the brilliance of Florida and California winter resorts.

Mohair, broadcloth, doeskin and leather predominate in the upholstering, broad lace and inlaid woodwork for panelling. Seat plaits are wide and buttoned. Pockets are often in the arm rests instead of in the doors, and door panels and seat cushions are piped or edged with leather to match the cloth.

Patterns created by weaving and in prints, some in quite bright colors, are being introduced this year for interior effects by cloth manufacturers. Even more beautiful and exotic designs in needle point broadcloth are promised than last year. Closed cars are almost universally upholstered in leather or whipcord in front and broadcloth or doeskin in the rear with whip-

Duesenberg Named as Builder of 265 H. P. Car

A story in this section last Sunday to the effect that an American automobile manufacturer—whose identity was being kept a secret—was soon to offer a stock automobile powered by an 8-cylinder, 265-horsepower motor, was traced the past week to the Duesenberg Motor Car Co., a division of the Auburn Motor Car Co., of Auburn, Ind. This company will, it was ascertained, place on display tonight at the New York automobile salon such an automobile, on a 153½-inch wheelbase—a longer wheelbase than any present American-built car has.

The car is said to be the most luxuriously appointed of any now built in the United States. The price of the chassis alone will be $5500, with various body styles by prominent designers offered at prices from $2500 up. If not the most luxurious car, it will, however, be the most powerful manufactured in the United States, heretofore cars of 115 h. p. being the largest built. In fact, the car will be among the most powerful in the world, European creations in a few instances only exceeding it.

While no tests for speed have been made on a straightaway course, a standard open model with top and windshield up, recently was driven at 116 miles per hour, it was learned. This same car, it was ascertained, made 89 m. p. h. in second gear.

Exhibitors of the car at the new salon will claim that the engine will throttle down to two miles per hour and travel at that rate of speed indefinitely. It will also be claimed that it can accelerate from 5 miles to 25 m. p. h. in five seconds, and at 80 miles per hour will travel with the ease the average car does at 60 m. p. h.

It is definitely understood that its giant engine has a bore and stroke of 3⅝ by 4¾ inches, giving a total piston displacement of 420 cubic inches. The actual horsepower of 265 is developed at 4200 r. p. m. It has 32 valves operated by two camshafts, each carried by five babbitt-lined bearings. The inlet valves and shaft are on the right side, while exhausts are on the left. Front-end drive is by a two-inch silent chain, deriving its power from a transfer gear, which in turn is driven by a second chain from the crankshaft.

An especially designed duplex 1½-inch Schebler carburetor is used in conjunction with a double down-draft intake manifold, the outer section of which feeds cylinders, 1, 2 7 and 8, the inner section feeding cylinders 3, 4, 5 and 6. The instrument panel is equipped with a 150-mile speedometer.

Move Mountain From Seattle Into Ocean

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AKRON, O., Dec. 1.—Dumping ing a small mountain from the heart of the business region in Seattle, Wash., into Puget Sound by means of 10,000 feet of conveyor belt, is pronounced by engineers as one of the most spectacular engineering feats ever attempted in a large American city.

Details of this unusual transfer of earth from land to water were revealed here through the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., which supplied a total of 63,000 pounds of belt for this gigantic undertaking. The main conveyor belt is 10,000 feet long and weighs 12½ tons.

Five portable conveyors are to be placed at different positions on the site as feeders to the main conveyor which is one and three-quarters inches thick and three feet wide. More than 5,000,000 cubic yards of earth will be moved. It is estimated that 21 months of 24-hour working days will be required to complete the job. The cost of the project is announced at $2,250,000.

Steel scows will receive the earth at the shore line in Puget Sound and carry it about 1500 feet where it will be dumped. This novel means of shifting a mountain presents a novel feature in the heart of a busy city in that it will not halt traffic or business activity in any way.

The pedestrian always comes out second best when he meets up with the auto.

Time Is Cut By Air-Rail To Mid-West

A faster air-rail schedule on the New York Central Lines between New York and other Eastern cities and important cities of the Central West was put into effect the past week, by Universal Air Lines System. It reduces the former air-rail schedules from three to five hours, according to President Louis H. Piper of the air lines. Traveling time to St. Louis is reduced by five hours, and to Minneapolis and St. Paul three.

Passengers may now board night trains in New York for Cleveland and transfer there to planes for Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis or Rochester, Minn. The new service makes it possible for New York business men to reach cities in the Central West with the loss of only half a business day. Similar schedules have been arranged for the return trips, with arrivals in New York at dawn. All schedules allow time for meals and rest at junction points.

Wisconsin Titles Do Not Infringe

By the Associated Press.

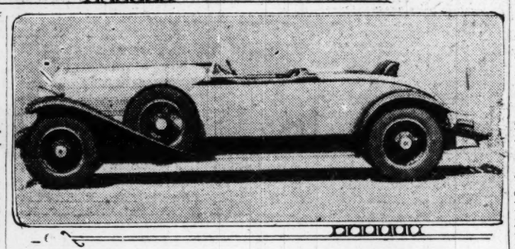
MADISON, Wis., Dec. 1.—Wisconsin's certificates of title for automobile owners, issued by the auto license division of the Secretary of State's office, are not an infringent upon the patent of the Automobile Abstract and Title Co., of Detroit, said an opinion issued by Mortimer Levitan, assistant Attorney-General, to Gov. Zimmerman. The Governor had received complaint from the Michigan firm that Wisconsin's title applications and certificates of title were considered an infringent by the company.

Illinois License Rush Is Started

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 1.—A deluge of orders for 1929 automobile licenses are being received at the office of Secretary of State L. L. Emmerson. Shipping of the license plates will start Dec. 27. The new plates have a black background with raised red numerals.

When your mind wanders at work your fingers are apt to do likewise.



Missouri Pacific Applies for Right To Operate Busses

Entrance of the great railway systems of the Middle West into the automobile bus field was indicated by the filing today of an application with the Arkansas Railroad Commission by the Missouri Pacific Transportation Co., asking permission to operate bus lines within the State. The Missouri Pacific Transportation Co., according to an announcement by L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific Lines, is a subsidiary of that railroad.

The application in Arkansas was filed by P. J. Neff, whose appointment as assistant to Baldwin was recently announced and who, it is understood, has charge of bus and truck matters for the railroad.

While no bus lines are at present being operated, according to Neff, it is planned to inaugurate service when the applications are approved by the Railroad Commission.

New Use for Alcohol.

U. S. 61 Longest Highway In State of Missouri

Missouri's longest highway, traversing one of the State's greatest scenic assets—the hills and valleys along the Mississippi River—now has 230 miles of pavement and 167 miles of gravel surface, and is a fine, all-weather route from the Iowa line to the Arkansas line.

It is U. S. Highway No. 61, entering Missouri immediately south of Keokuk, Ia., passing through St. Louis, and going into Arkansas just north of Blytheville on the way to Memphis, Tenn. Progress in its development heretofore has not attracted as much attention as has that on the east-west routes.

There is a likelihood that 53 miles of the gravel will be converted to concrete next year or by 1930, making the proportion of paving to gravel 333 miles to 114. Strictly speaking, the present condition includes 267.6 miles of concrete, 13 miles on paved streets of St. Louis, 69 miles of fine, high-type gravel, 85.2 miles of old, narrow gravel in good condition, and 13.3 miles of silica, a gravel-like substance; total, 448.1 miles, as shown by a compilation by the Post-Dispatch, aided by division engineers of the State Highway Department. At present, there are 96 miles of pavement and 42 miles of high-type gravel included in the

Segrave to Make Attempt To Recapture Speed Crown

English Race Ace to Come to U. S. in February With New Super-Powered Motor Giant in Try to Wrest Title From Ray Keech.

By ROBERT H. HALL, Automobile Editor.

Maj. H. O. D. Segrave, who tempted death in March, 1927, when he set a new world's straightaway speed record, only to see it shattered by a fellow countryman, Capt. Malcolm Campbell, a year later—who in turn lost it to Ray Keech, an American—will arrive in the United States the middle of February in an attempt to regain the record for himself and Great Britain, the contest board of the A. A. A. announced at Washington the past week.

Segrave will bring to the United States a new racing sensation, his Golden Arrow car, and will try for the record some time in March, either on one of the Florida beaches or on the dry lakes of California, if one of suitable length for a run can be found. A course of at least three miles length is necessary, since, under A. A. A. rules, the first mile of the speed trial is allowed for picking up speed, the second for registering the official

AUBURN OFFERS CLOSED '6' AT $995, FACTORY

Also Announces New Straight "8" Priced at $1395.

AUBURN, Ind., Dec. 1.—Rumors that Auburn was to enter the low-priced automobile field with a quality car were definitely confirmed today by E. L. Cord, president, that his company were placing an Auburn closed six on the market to sell under $1000. The model is a sport sedan listing at $995.

At the same time it was announced that a new series straight eight Auburn has been brought out with a sport sedan selling at $1295.

The six, which is unusually big and roomy, has a 120-inch wheelbase and contains an array of features, found only in cars selling from $500 to $700 higher. The straight eight with a 125-inch wheelbase, has a score of exclusive features.

Among features listed for the new six series are: Lycoming engine, seven-inch frame, hydraulic internal expanding four-wheel brakes, hydraulic shock absorber, cam and lever type steering, 10-spoke extra heavy wheels, reenforced body with plenty of leg and head room, fine mohair upholstery, special interlaced springs.

Brewster non-glare windshield, easy operating door glasses and water-tight doors, metal dash, low center gravity, deeper cushions, steel running boards, grouped instruments on panel, starter on dash, electro lock, rubber-covered foot controls, large acorn type headlights, Corona proof ignition wires, 120-inch wheel base and Bijur chassis lubrication system.

An even greater array of features mark the straight eight which is to sell at $1395. This car, which is to be known as the 8-90, is designed on the same lines as the Auburn straight eight which won the Pike's Peak climb earlier in the year and broke all records at Atlantic City for time and distance and all intermediate times and distances, for 2000 miles in 24 hours.

It is powered by a 90-horsepower straight eight Lycoming engine, using dual carburetor and dual manifolding.

Japanese Lamp Law Deals Blow To Auto 'Neckers'

AUTOMOBILE makers in America have been advised of the "antinecking lamp law" in Japan, one of the most peculiar of many governing the operation of motor vehicles in the empire.

The recent statute requires that all motor cars must be equipped with dome lights which must be lighted when driving after dark.

While the law was designated to protect passengers it has since been called the "anti-necking lamp law." Unless cars are so lighted at night the Japanese police confiscate them.

cord or satin headlinings to match. Down-filled cushions on the rear seat, sewed down to avoid the messy appearance they so frequently have when loose, provide a new innovation and comfortable riding qualities. Upholstery continues to play an important part and weave, grain and decoration, as well as colorings, are skillfully synchronized.

While quite popular abroad the fabric body may still be considered somewhat novel in America. This year's Salon will show a half dozen jobs of this type, two of American manufacture and the others from Europe. Snakeskin upholstery, introduced last winter, will be found on some of the cars exhibited. Other novelties, noted in advance information given out by exhibitors, include three auxiliary tonneau seats, with adjustable high backs, raised crest panels on doors and round doorknobs.

However, in accordance with a time-honored custom, the exhibitors are withholding information concerning their important new developments, preferring to spring them as real surprises at the opening of the Salon, to both their clientele and to their competitors.

It is a safe prediction to state that the forthcoming Automobile Salon will present the finest collection of costly motor cars de luxe yet assembled, and that its international character will be more pronounced than ever before.

New Gardner Parts Chief Appointed

CHEVROLET SIXES TO GO ON DISPLAY

Arcadia Ballroom Acquired Week of Dec. 8-15 for Exhibit.

Anticipating a crowd of more than a 100,000 visitors, Chevrolet officials of the St. Louis zone are rushing preparations for the formal presentation, starting at noon Saturday, Dec. 8, of the new Chevrolet six-cylinder line, which will then go on view here for the first time. It will be the only opportunity St. Louis will have of viewing the new line of Chevrolet sixes before deliveries begin Jan. 1.

St. Louis' introduction to the new Chevrolet line is to be at Arcadia ballroom and will last seven days from Saturday to Friday, inclusive. Visitors will be welcome after the opening next Saturday from 10:30 a. m. until midnight daily.

The local Chevrolet showing will be conducted in customary automobile show style, except that there will be no admission charge. Each model in the line will be on view—coach, convertible landau, coupe, sport cabriolet, sedan, phaeton and roadster. The auditorium will be specially decorated for the occasion. Each of the models will be placed so as to permit a thorough inspection.

Incidental to the presentation of the new line there will be an interesting mechanical exhibit, including a complete passenger car chassis. Throughout the day a Chevrolet factory expert, speaking through an amplifier, will describe the improved mechanical features of the new car, and relate interesting details regarding the development of the new engine.

Motion pictures of General Motors proving ground the 1245 acre outdoor laboratory, where during a four-year period Chevrolet engineers tested 100 six-cylinder engines prior to giving their approval to the new six, will be on view at all hours throughout the exhibition.

Afternoon and evening, Harry Lang's Arcadia Ballroom Orchestra will play for the visitors.

time, and the third to permit the "slow-down."

Details of Segrave's new racer are being kept secret. It is quite probable, however, that it will be powered by a Napier-built engine which has the reputation of being the most powerful engine ever built in England and which was used by Segrave when he set his first record of 203.79 miles per hour. The engine was developed by the British Air Ministry and was used in 1926 by England to win the Schneider air cup races from other competing governments. The Napier engine Segraves employed in 1927 developed in access of 900 horsepower.

With the development of super-power engines the past few years there has been a steady revival of speed racing, the official history of which began in 1920 and then lapsed until 1927 when Segrave startled the world by calmly announcing that he would come to America with a car capable of making in access of 200 m. p. h.

His statement at that time was accepted rather dispassionately by race experts, since few believed a car so powerful could be built. The cream of American race drivers had been experimenting with speed cars for years and the best that could be gotten out of their creations was 156.04 m. p. h., an official A. A. A. record set by Tommy Milton, piloting a 16-cylinder Duesenberg in April of 1920. This was considered the ultimate in speed and wiped out the record of 149.875 set a year earlier by the veteran Ralph de Palma in a Packard Special.

With the world speed title having been transferred to Milton, racing of the character was not officially indulged in until 1927, probably because most experts figured Milton's record well nigh unbeatable.

In the meantime, however, Segrave and his backers had their eyes upon the world speed title, and when the Air Ministry granted them the privilege of using the Napier engine the pathway to victory was easy.

The rest, of course, is history Segrave came and conquered. His speed record of 203.79 m. p. h. stood for one year. Then, in February of 1928 Capt. Malcolm Campbell, his countryman, set a new record of 206.95 m. p. h. Two months later Ray Keech in the American-built Triplex pushed the mark to 207.552, where it now stands, since Frank Lockhart, who might have bettered the record in his Stutz Blackhawk came to an untimely death during trials at Daytona Beach.

Oakland-Pontiac Sales Doubled

Pontiac-Oakland sales in the St. Louis metropolitan territory for November of this year were double those registered in November of 1927, E. A. Hatfield, president of the Mississippi Valley Motor Car Co., Oakland-Pontiac distributer, declared yesterday. This, according to Hatfield, is particularly true of the Oakland All-American Six line, new models of which were announced Nov. 1 and sales of which have been tremendous.

At St. Louis Air Fields

ALL air lanes lead to Chicago this week—the scene of the annual aeronautical exhibition, which opened yesterday and will continue through Dec. 10.

The exhibition of modern aircraft, accessories and flying equipment and the various meetings of aeronautical societies and commercial aviation groups serves to attract the leading figures in aviation to the show.

St. Louisans attending the exhibition are Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, dean of St. Louis aviators, Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co.; Frank H. Robertson, president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation; Phil DeC. Ball, president, and John C. Nulsen, general manager, of the Mahoney-Ryan Aircraft Corporation; Harry F. Mammen and Oliver L. Parks, president and vice president of Parks Air College on the East Side; Harry Perkins, secretary of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation; O. E. Scott, manager of Lambert-St. Louis Field; M. B. Bouse, manager of the Von Hoffman Aircraft Co., and a number of other executives and flying enthusiasts, including Richard F. Hardin and Amos G. Payne, engineers for Parks Aircraft, Inc.; Ralph Damon, factory manager of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Co.; Jack Grosse, city register; Gentry Shelton, Harvey Gordon, Frank Dunn, pilot for Phil Ball; "Red" Jackson, "Red" Harrigan, Oscar Johnson and his pilot, "Boots" Dempsey, and others.

St. Louis-Made Planes in Show.

The two St. Louis aircraft factories, the Curtiss-Robertson Co., and the Mahoney-Ryan Corporation, are exhibiting two planes each at the aeronautical show. The Curtiss-Robertson company has a Challenger-Robin and an OX-5 Robin, and the Mahoney-Ryan corporation sent up a new six-place Ryan brougham, the first ship built in the local Mahoney factory, and a small, low-wing monoplane developed at San Diego and tested here last week.

Display of Plane Parts.

Another St. Louis exhibit at the Chicago show will be that of the Robertson AirCraft Corporation, operators of the St. Louis-Chicago air mail route and passenger lines between Kansas City and Chicago by way of St. Louis. Aeronautical supplies and parts will be displayed at a booth in charge of E. L. Smith, parts department manager.

Change of Route Discussed.

Frank H. Robertson, president, and George B. Schlereburg, treasurer, of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, made a trip to Minneapolis Friday before going to Chicago. They will confer with Louis Piper, president of the Universal Aviation Corporation, of which the Robertson organization is a unit, concerning proposed changes in the St. Louis-Chicago passenger route. Robertson will also endeavor to have St. Louis designated as the official headquarters of the Universal Corporation.

New Mail Line.

The second air mail route out of St. Louis went into operation yesterday. The route, from St. Louis to Evansville, Ind., is operated by Interstate Airlines, Inc., and connects with a route from Chicago to Atlanta, Ga., also operated by the Interstate.

Planes leave Lambert Field daily at 10:30 a. m., arriving at Evansville at noon, making connection with the southboard plane. Westward, planes leave Evansville at 1:30 p. m., arriving here at 3 o'clock. Fairchild cabin ships are used on the route and passengers and express will be carried in addition to mail. The Chicago-Atlanta route includes stops at Champaign, Ill., Terre Haute and Evansville, Ind., Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn. A passenger line from Louisville, Ky., to Evansville has also been started by the Interstate.

Looks Like a Bug.

The little low-wing monoplane, the last ship turned out at the Mahoney-Ryan plant at San Diego before that factory was closed and all production transferred to St. Louis, looks like a bug, both in flight and on the ground.

The ship really has two wings, the front and main wing being thick in the center and tapering at the ends, while the second and smaller wing is set at the tail. A spindle, wide-spread under-carriage adds to the bug-like appearance.

In tests here with J. J. "Red" Harrigan at the controls the bug, which has neither stabilizer nor flippers, stunted, maneuvered and did almost everything that any ship ever built has done except loop. The thick center sections of the wing is said to be responsible for the inability of the machine to loop. The shock absorbers for the landing gear are carried in these center sections. That the smaller rear wing is really a lift wing was shown by loading a 70-pound sack of shot on the wing which remained level. The angle of this wing can be changed 30 degrees while in flight.

Powered with a 110-horsepower Werner motor the little ship cruised at a speed of 120 miles an hour and, according to Harrigan, will out-perform the standard type Ryan brougham. If placed in production the ship, which has two seats in an open cockpit, will sell for about $4000.

Visitors View City From Air.

George C. Sudheimer, commissioner of finance for the city of St. Paul; Otto W. Rowland Jr., commissioner of public utilities at St. Paul, and R. J. Dunlap, managing editor of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, visited Lambert Field Tuesday and were taken on a trip over St. Louis in a tri-motored transport plane piloted by "Bud" Gurney.

Mahoney Quits Company.

The resignation of B. Frank Mahoney, as president of the Mahoney-Ryan Aircraft Corporation, which he organized, was announced during the week. No reason was given for Mahoney's withdrawal from the company, which made Col. Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis." The company is now controlled by a St. Louis syndicate headed by Phil DeC. Ball, Harry H. Knight and Harold Bixby.

Cowlings to Increase Speed.

New high speed cowlings have been ordered by the Robertson Aircraft Corporation for the mail planes. The cowlings are said to increase the speed of any plane 20 miles an hour through reducing air resistance of the nose of the ship. The new 500-horsepower Whirlwind motors will also be installed in the mail ships, which, with the new cowling, will result in a cruising speed of 130 miles an hour.

Takes Robins to Chicago.

"Red" Jackson, test pilot for the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., ferried both a Challenger-Robin and an OX-5 Robin to Chicago. Jackson flew one of the ships to Chicago Monday, returned next morning as a passenger in the tri-motored passenger plane, and took off for Chicago in the second Robin that afternoon.

Exhibit Flown to Chicago.

The Mahoney-Ryan exhibits at the air show were flown to Chicago by "Red" Harrigan and Frank Dunn Thursday. Accompanying Dunn in the six-place Ryan brougham were Sam C. Breder, salesmanager for the concern; W. A. Mankey, chief engineer, and B. D. Adams, advertising manager. Dunn returned by rail Thursday night and the next day made the trip over again in Phil Ball's personal Ryan brougham with Ball and several friends as passengers.

Bad Weather Blocks Flights.

Because of the thick weather Wednesday both runs of the St. Louis-Chicago passenger line were canceled. The ceiling was so low at Lambert Field that the beacon was turned on at noon.

17-Year-Old Pilot.

Richard E. James, 17-year-old New York youth, landed at Lambert-St. Louis Field last week on his way alone from San Francisco, Cal., to New York, in a Travel-Air.

The youthful flyer learned to handle a plane two years ago at Curtiss Field. He left San Francisco on Oct. 30 and made nine stops before reaching St. Louis. His first stop out of St. Louis was at Peoria, Ill., where he spent the night before going on to Chicago. James, who made a good impression with the experts at Lambert Field, is the son of a chemist. His father bought the ship for him.

Aviation Fatalities.

The following quotation on aviation accidents is taken from a statement by Walton L. Crocker, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., Boston, who is studying aviation with reference to life insurance:

"Recent figures from the Division of Vital Statistics, U. S. Census, show for 1927 a total of 214 aviation fatalities. Of these, 58 were known aviators or pilots, eight were students and instructors, 119 the general public, including possibly some connected with air transport, while the remainder, or 29, were army, navy, professional stunt flyers and balloonists. Compared to the number of those who actually flew, or were otherwise exposed to the hazard, the number killed was not large."

Finish Air Schooling.

Seven students completed the 10-week ground course at the Von Hoffmann Aircraft School last week. Three of the graduates immediately obtained jobs in aircraft factories at Wichita, Kan. Eleven new students will begin receiving instruction at the school beginning tomorrow, and a class of 10 will be enrolled Dec. 17. The latter class will include a young Canadian.

Lieut. Schmid Speaks.

Lieut. Edgar Schmid, flying instructor in Parks Air College and adjutant of the 35th Division Air Service, Missouri National Guard, addressed students of the East St. Louis High School last week. He discussed wartime flying, with which he was introduced to aviation, and commercial developments since the war.

Heat for Flying School.

Comfortable working conditions are assured during the winter at the Von Hoffmann Aircraft School at Lambert Field. A large heating unit has been installed in the mechanical and maintenance section and two smaller heating units provide warmth in the lecture room and administration office.

Inspects Schools.

Clifford W. Henderson, director of airports of Los Angeles, Cal., and Alderman Arthur Albers, chairman of the Los Angeles aldermanic finance committee, inspected Lambert Field and Parks Airport last week. Henderson, who has operated a flying school for two years, praised Parks Air College.

7000 Pounds of Mail in November.

Air mail on the St. Louis-Chicago route for November totaled more than 7000 pounds, maintaining the average.

Visitors Last Week.

Among the visitors at Parks Airport last week were Tom Isben, flying in a Waco from Canton, O., and F. R. Moore, flying a Stinson monoplane from Lincoln, Neb., to St. Louis with passengers. Both Isben and Moore regularly make Parks Airport an overnight stop on cross-country trips.

Going to Washington.

Frank H. Robertson and Harry Perkins of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation will go to Washington following the Chicago show to attend the International Civil Aeronautical Conference, which opens Dec. 11. They will also confer with postoffice authorities on air mail matters.

Lindbergh Packed 'Chute.

Harold Bixby bought a parachute that has been lying around Field Manager Scott's office for some time, and inadvertently came into possession of a souvenir. Before turning the 'chute over to Master Sergeant Jim Tate of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service for repacking, Bixby felt in the pocket for the card bearing the record of the previous packing. The card bore the following notation: "Packed August, 1926, by C. A. Lindbergh."

Two Join Robertson.

Robert Jewell of Dallas, Tex., and Forest O'Brien of Kansas City, Mo., both pilots of long experience, have been added to the staff of pilots of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation. Both are instructing students at present.

Visited Lambert Field.

Visitors at Lambert Field during the week included the following: W. T. Ponders in a Cessna, Dallas Tex., to Chicago; T. D. Park and T. J. Martin in a Whirlwind, Waco, Troy, O., to Tulsa, Ok.; Cloyd Clevenger in a Ryan brougham from Tulsa; U. S. Green, from Kansas City, Mo., to Dayton, O., in a Stearman; C. W. Maris and William Arthur, Cleveland, O., to Laredo, Tex., in a Stearman; Clarence Guenther, pilot for Cliff Durant, and Tommy Milton, auto racer, in a Stearman, Indianapolis, Ind., to Wichita, Kan., and Billie Parker in a Cavalier from Bartlesville, Ok.

Successful beyond any new car record

The field of low-priced sixes this year has been the scene of a rare and significant development.

Upon the announcement of the new Chrysler-built De Soto Six, public interest instantly swung toward this newcomer, appraised it for what it is—the outstanding value in its price class—and then quickly confirmed that judgment with a buying wave which gains new impetus week by week.

In the history of the industry, there is nothing to approach the immediate and overwhelming success of the De Soto Six.

Such success is never won by accident—it comes, as in the case of the De Soto Six, as the reward of unusual and conspicuous achievement.

HUP-CHANDLER MERGED IN $97,000,000 DEAL

Details Not Announced As Rumors Are Confirmed.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 1. — Reports of a $97,000,000 merger between the Hup Motor Car Co., manufacturer of Hupmobile six and eight-cylinder cars, and Chandler-Cleveland Corporation, manufacturer of the Chandler car, were confirmed here today by DuBois Young, Hup president.

Rumors of the merger have been general here for the past week but officials of the companies interested have until today refused to comment. It has been generally understood for some time that Hup interests have been buying large blocks of Chandler stock in the open market.

Further than to announce that the merger had been completed, Young would not commit himself as to details.

U. S. 61 Longest Main Highway In Missouri

section north of St. Louis, the greater part being to the south.

No. 61 frequently runs in view of the Mississippi River, whose broad, curving surface, wooded and rocky bluffs and pretty islands are always captivating. When the road runs farther inland it remains in the hills until it reaches the level and productive southeastern quadrant of the State. It stays within a short distance of the great stream, except that one bend takes it through Fredericktown, about 40 miles west of the Mississippi. Due to the meandering of the river, No. 61 enters St. Louis from the north by way of No. 40 (St. Charles road) and it goes out to the south on Lemay Ferry road. It traverses 16 of Missouri's 114 counties and St. Louis.

From north to south, a log of the surface conditions and prospects of No. 61 follows:

2.0 miles of concrete from Des Moines River (State line) southward.
42.2 high-type gravel through Clark and Lewis counties to Taylor, at the Marion County line (connection to Quincy, Ill.).
11.2 old gravel in acceptable condition, to Palmyra, two miles of grading for improvement has just been started, including new bridge over Fabius River.
21.8 concrete to Hannibal.
2.0 streets of Hannibal, paved.
2.7 gravel in fine condition to No. 26 at New London; some old, some new.
18.2 concrete, recently opened, almost to Bowling Green.
5.2 old gravel, like a detour, through Bowling Green; right-of-way difficulties have delayed paving through that county seat.
11.1 concrete to Eolia.
26.8 old gravel, all the way across Lincoln County by way of Troy, except a few miles of new gravel near Moscow Mills; about 15 miles of this section, northward from the St. Charles County line, will be graded and paved with concrete next year, including a new bridge over the Cuivre River; this improvement will extend north of Troy a number of miles.
7.3 concrete to junction of No. 40 at Wentzville.
34.5 concrete on No. 40 to St. Louis limits.
13.0 streets of St. Louis, paved.
68.2 concrete to Farmington.
18.1 gravel, mostly old but about four miles high type, to junction of No. 67 at Fredericktown; all the old creek fords have been eliminated by new bridges; it is understood that consideration is being given to the possibility of paving this section in the next two years.
37.2 concrete to junction of No. 34 at Jackson.
14.2 old gravel, through Jackson, to Cape Girardeau; probably seven miles at the south end of this section will be paved next year.
7.0 concrete, Cape Girardeau to Ancell.
26.8 high-type gravel, Ancell, through Benton, to Sikeston.
21.0 concrete, through New Madrid, to junction of No. 82; this is new construction and for about two weeks more there will be a detour around the first eight miles out of Sikeston, after which the whole pavement will be open; 13 miles are open now from Matthews to No. 82.
13.3 silica, good condition, from No. 82 to Portageville. A relocation of this section is being graded now and a contract for paving it with concrete likely will be awarded next year.
37.3 concrete, Portageville to Arkansas line.

Three Tour Europe In Oldsmobile Car

An automobile made possible a unique and profitable European tour recently completed by three young professional men of Dayton, O. The trip covered 11,500 miles and all except the ocean portion was made in an Oldsmobile sport coupe.

Dr. L. F. Patterson, a dentist of Dayton and owner of the Oldsmobile coupe, was accompanied by two physician friends. They drove to New York where they embarked for Europe. Three months were spent overseas during which visits were made to Germany, Hungary, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, England and Scotland.

The tour was both recreational and educational as much of the time was spent visiting hospitals and attending clinics. The dentist and physicians obtained much information beneficial to their professions. They report that their Oldsmobile gave them wonderful service and enabled them to cover far more ground than would have been possible by the ordinary means of transportation.

The driver always loses when arguing with the traffic cop.

Willys Leads Field First Nine Months

Willys-Overland, Inc. of Toledo, manufacturer of Whippet fours and sixes and Willys-Knight sixes, stand in first position in the entire automobile industry in percentage of gain for new car registration for the first nine months of the current year, as compared with the same period of last year with an increase of 86.3 per cent according to figures just released, officials of the company report.

"In the same period the automobile industry as a whole showed a gain of only 12 per cent over last year, placing the Willys-Overland business 74.3 per cent above the increase shown by the entire industry," it was stated.

Frank Foster Joins Stutz Sales Staff

Must Label 'Lead' Gas in Wisconsin

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Dec. 1.—The word "tetraethyl" will, in the future, be as prominently displayed on gasoline pumps dispensing this particular fluid, as cross bones on poisonous drug store prescriptions, according to Dr. C. A. Harper, head of the State Public Health Service.

The amended regulation submitted by the U. S. Public Health Service to the Wisconsin State Health Board requires dispensers of this "gas" to post the following sign: "Contains LEAD (tetraethyl) and is to be used as motor fuel only, not for cleaning or other use. Avoid spilling."

This legend is to be in heavy gothic letters, black on a white background, in a designated space so as to easily capture attention. It must be shown on the face of each side of the pump at which delivery can be made, the board said.

The new regulation states that these precautions are deemed necessary to inform the public more effectively of the presence and danger of lead in such fuel. The board is held to be no good grounds for prohibiting the use of this motor fuel under proper regulation. Several officials have concluded, however, to emphasize the word "lead," with its connotation of a poisonous compound, is more important than to use the word "Ethyl."

The State law now requires available leaflets to be available at all filling stations selling Ethyl gasoline, for distribution on request. These shall describe the poisonous dangers and precautions to be taken in the use of this fluid.

Another proposed requirement provides that containers of Ethyl gasoline sold to consumers shall bear the same label in such a position to be plainly legible when the container is opened.

New Mooring Mast For Lakehurst Planned

Construction of a movable mooring mast is nearing completion at Lakehurst, N. J., under the direction of Lieutenant-Commander Charles E. Rosendahl. The commander of the Los Angeles has been experimenting for months seeking methods whereby his great airship and others bigger and more unwieldly on the ground can be handled with safety to ship and men in the prevailing cross winds which hamper maneuvers at Lakehurst.

Its main structure consists of three heavy girders, the lower one equi-distant and the upper converging to a point, forming a three-sided pyramid. The top of this mast, when completed will be much higher than the present stationary mooring mast. Wind currents close to the ground, owing in part to surface friction, are never so strong as they are aloft.

DE SOTO HEAD TO ADDRESS SALES CHIEFS

C. W. Mattheson to Speak Before Meeting at Statler Hotel Dec. 5.

Special invitations have been sent to automobile dealers and their sales managers in St. Louis by the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association to attend the sales' executives conference, to be held at the Statler Hotel Wednesday, Dec. 5, under the direction of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

The particular interest of the automobile trade is in the address to be made by C. W. Mattheson, vice president of DeSoto Motor Corporation of Detroit. He is one of five nationally known men who will speak at the conference. Others are C. A. Bedell, Butler Bros., Chicago; William Sample, the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co., Hartford, Conn.; E. St. Elmo Lewis of Detroit, and Profs. Richard C. Borden and Alvin C. Busse of New York University.

While in St. Louis Mattheson will be the house guest of Col. P. H. Brockman, president of the DeLuxe Automobile Co., DeSoto distributer here.

Must Label 'Lead' Gas in Wisconsin

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Dec. 1.—The word 'tetraethyl' will, in the future, be as prominently displayed on gasoline pumps dispensing this particular fluid, as cross bones on a poisonous drug store prescription, according to Dr. C. A. Harper, of the State Public Health Service.

The amended regulation submitted by the U. S. Public Health Service to the Wisconsin State Health Board requires dispensers of this "gas" to post the following sign: "Contains LEAD (tetraethyl) and is to be used as motor fuel only, not for cleaning or other use. Avoid spilling."

This legend is to be in heavy gothic letters, black on a white background, in a designated setup so as to easily capture attention. It must be shown on the face of each side of the pump at which delivery can be made, the board said.

The new regulation states that these precautions are deemed necessary to inform the public more effectively of the presence and danger of lead in such fuel. There is held to be no good grounds for prohibiting the use of this motor fuel under proper regulation. Federal officials have concluded that to emphasize the word "lead," with its cannotation of a poisonous compound, is more important than to use the word "Ethyl."

The State law now requires suitable leaflets to be available at all filling stations selling Ethyl gasoline, for distribution on request. These shall describe the possible dangers and precautions to be taken in the use of this fluid.

Another proposed requirement provides that containers of Ethyl gasoline sold to consumers shall bear the same label in such a position to be plainly legible when the container is opened.

New Mooring Mast For Lakehurst Port

Construction of a movable mooring mast is nearing completion at Lakehurst, N. J., under the direction of Lieutenant-Commander Charles E. Rosendahl. The master of the Los Angeles has been experimenting for months seeking methods whereby his great airship and others bigger and more unwieldly on the ground can be handled with safety to ship and crew in the prevailing cross winds that hamper maneuvers at Lakehurst.

Its main structure consists of three heavy girders, the lower ends equi-distant and the upper coming to a point, forming a three-sided pyramid. The top of this mast when completed will be much lower than the present stationary mooring mast. Wind currents close to the ground, owing in part to surface friction, are never so severe as they are aloft.

It has a motor with 3-inch bore and 4¾-inch stroke, developing 85 h. p. at 2850 r. p. m.

Hudson Tunnel May Need Second Tube Before Long

Traffic Likely to Exceed Capacity of Lanes in Few Years — Income Nearly $5,000,000 Since Opening.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—One year's operation of the Holland tunnel under the Hudson River here has not only proven its value for the relief of traffic between New York and New Jersey, but has indicated the likelihood that another tunnel might have to be built to take care of the increased traffic.

Although the New York and New Jersey State Legislatures have given the tunnel commission 20 years to make up the original cost of the tunnel, the authorities in charge believe they will meet this demand within half that time.

These are the outstanding prospects for the Holland tunnel, the first great underwater vehicle tunnel in America, as viewed from the returns made in its first year of operation:

The tunnel was built at a cost of $48,000,000, for the payment of which a toll is being taken of all vehicles passing through it. Its first year of operation having just been completed, the authorities find that it has met its annual payment almost up to the last cent.

This payment, according to the 20-year estimate, should be $4,900,000. The first year's operation has brought in $4,700,000 in tolls and other charges from the 8,500,000 vehicles that passed through it.

But, say authorities, that is only the first year. Gradually increasing traffic with correspondingly increased revenue is expected from year to year.

This is expected to result from the natural increase of population in New York and New Jersey, from increased use of busses and trucks, from growing industires especially from an expected tendency on the part of railroads to unload their freight in Jersey City to be carted to New York by tunnel.

So great may this commercial traffic become that the present tunnel may eventually be limited to commercial trucking only, with a new tunnel alongside taking care of passenger cars. More than 5000 trucks and 600 busses pass through the tunnel daily, while an average of 25,000 vehicles has been maintained through the year.

The estimated capacity of the tunnel is 44,000 vehicles a day. This estimate has been surpassed several times during the year, especially on the opening day when 52,000 vehicles went through, mostly for the novelty of it. On many Sundays, especially during the touring season, the traffic came not far short of this high mark and well above the estimated capacity.

Yet no trouble has been experienced in the tunnel despite the greater traffic. The ventilation is such that it can easily be fitted to take care of the larger number of cars and the increased exhaust fumes without raising the carbon monoxide content above the safety mark of two in 10,000 of fresh air.

The only difficulties encountered in the operation of the tunnel have been of a minor nature. Most of them have been traffic violations, such as winding from one lane to another. There have been about 100 minor fires in the tunnel, due mostly to overheated brakes. These have been quenched quickly by the efficient fire system maintained by the police force assigned to the tunnel.

And there have been quite a few stalled cars holding up traffic for only a short time. Those motorists that stalled because of lack of gasoline have had to pay $1 a gallon for the fuel brought them by the tunnel police. Others have been towed out of the tunnel by the small tractor maintained for this purpose.

In all the time motorists have traveled through the tunnel, despite the heavy traffic on Sundays, not one person has reported any ill effect from the exhaust gases within. This is due to the efficient ventilation system in the tunnel.

Post-Dispatch to Continue Map Travel Service

Sales of Atlases of the United States and Eastern Canada individual road maps of the states, maps of St. Louis and vicinity, and city guides will be continued during the autumn and winter months this year. Year-round travel by auto to all parts of the country has made this advisable. They are available at the Post-Dispatch Resort and Travel Bureau, Twelfth and Olive streets.

The atlases contain 44 pages of maps, size 11x17 inches, and several pages of valuable information, and are 50 cents each, or 60 cents by mail.

The state road maps are 10 cents each, or 12 cents by first-class mail.

The maps of St. Louis and vicinity show all roads, lakes, streams and bridges within a 50-mile radius of St. Louis, and are 20 cents each, or 24 cents by first-class mail.

Stutz Sales Chief On Western Trip

Ed R. Parker, general sales manager of Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, Inc., is now on a trip to the Pacific Coast to confer with Stutz distributers and dealers in the West. Stutz is completing one of the most successful years in its history and Parker is taking this final "swing" of the territory to acquaint himself with conditions and to discuss the sales program for the coming year.

Parker's first stop was at Chicago, where he conferred with W. J. Boone, newly elected president of the Chicago Stutz Factory Branch, Inc. His next stop was at Denver and his itinerary includes Salt Lake City, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. He will return to the factory at Indianapolis via the Southern route and will visit several Stutz distributers. He expects to complete his Western trip by Dec. 1.

New Truck For Sterling Line

Another addition to the Sterling truck line has been announced by the Sterling Motor Truck Co., 3329-31 Laclede avenue. The new truck is a six-cylinder unit of one and one-half tons capacity, known as model DB-7. It is powered by a 54-horsepower seven-bearing crankshaft engine, three and three-eighths inch bore by four-inch stroke, with removable head, and full pressure lubrication which reaches all bearings. Four-speed transmission, four-wheel hydraulic service brakes and transmission brake, cam and lever steering gear, vanadium springs and multiple disc clutch are other features.

97-Year-Old Kansan Drives a Chrysler

It was just three years after the close of the Civil War that George Brooks settled in Kansas. His residence there since that time, 1868, has been continuous, which entitles him to the distinction of being among the first living settlers of that entire State.

He is also distinguished as one of the nation's oldest automobile drivers. At 97 years of age he makes regular use of a Chrysler sedan, driving it almost daily. Mrs. Brooks also makes frequent trips about the countryside with him in the car.

Pedestrian Caught by Signal Change Has Right-of-Way

Motorists Are Warned to Exercise Care as Result of Decision of U. S. Court of Appeals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—A decision has just been handed down by the United States District Court of Appeals, upholding a pedestrian's right-of-way at a crossing despite traffic signal shifts, according to the legal department of the American Motorists' Association.

In effect the Court holds that pedestrians have the right-of-way not only at uncontrolled crossings but also when they have entered an intersection on a green light and further holds that the pedestrian has the right-of-way until he reaches the opposite curb, without regard to the change of lights during his passage of the crossing.

The decision is regarded by the association's legal department as just and is being called to the attention of the motoring public in order that the motorist may have full knowledge of his legal responsibility.

"When a pedestrian steps from a curb to cross the street, having a green signal with him, he does so by way of invitation and he cannot be charged with contributory neglect if the signal switches when he is in the street. Caught in this position, the obligation rests upon the motorists not only to observe the situation, but to wait until the crossing is clear," the decision declares.

"Many automobile drivers," continued the Court, "seem to imagine that with the shift of the signal they are given a clear right-of-way against intersecting traffic. In this belief they recklessly start their machines regardless of persons who are already on the intersection. It is the duty of drivers of machines to exercise greatest vigilance and care under such circumstances and not only to have their machines under control, but to stop and wait until pedestrians have had an opportunity to clear the crossing. Failure to observe these precautions constitutes negligence on the part of the driver, which, in case of accident, is chargeable to him."

Cheap Motor Fuel

American chemists are working for a motor fuel to be made from alcohol at a cost of 1 cent per gallon. They claim that in California alone there is enough fruit going to waste to produce 22,000,000,000 gallons of alcohol. This product is used extensively in Germany and other European countries, and is most effective when mixed with 19 per cent of gasoline. The present commercial price of alcohol, about 40 cents, is prohibitive. In Cuba it is produced for about 4 or 5 cents.

If you act now—you will have two things to be thankful for. You will own a new Super-Six, the six that leads all others in popularity, in volume of sales. And you will have bought it at a real bargain.

Leadership in quality has for years given Hudson-Essex outstanding public favor. And the growing volume has permitted economies passed on to buyers in price, far below any rival.

More than 1,000,000 Hudson-Essex cars in service, and this year the greatest sales in our history are simply the results of giving greater value than was ever offered at this price.

There can be no proof so convincing as the praise bestowed by Hudson-Essex owners, and the fact that these cars continue, as for years, the outstanding sales success of motordom.

Here is a chance to turn in your present car for more than it will ever be worth again. And—more important still—to own one of the first choice "Sixes," as proved by their sales leadership.

HUTCHENSON ARMS SOLD FOR $475,000

Renewed Dickering for Olive St. Sites—Epstein & Son Negotiating for West End Properties.

By Berry Moore.

A $750,000 10-story apartment project was announced last night by Herman Mayer, building contractor, for the northeast corner of Magnolia and Lawrence avenues, opposite Tower Grove Park.

The structure will have a frontage of 139 feet on Magnolia with a depth of 132 feet on Lawrence. It will comprise 80 apartments of three and six rooms with many attractive features.

Mayer said arrangements had been made for construction to start within the next week or two, the site being vacant and immediately available.

Mayer is now building an 11-story apartment building on the west side of Grand boulevard between Russell boulevard and Castleman avenue, which has been sold for $475,000 to Robert Hutchenson of Chicago. This new building will be known as the Hutchenson Arms. The Christian Brinkop Real Estate Co. handled the transaction, in connection with Mayer.

A frontage of 250 feet on the south side of Clayton road east of Skinker road, has been purchased by Jacob Rubin & Sons, builders and contractors, for three 24-unit apartments. Sam Hamburg Jr. handled the negotiations.

New Activity Along Olive Street.

The week witnessed renewed interest in large apartment groups, and for corners in the business centers, notably on Olive street and on Twelfth boulevard.

Negotiations were begun with J. J. Epstein & Son for seven apartment buildings on Syracuse, Heman and Leland avenues, in the Delmar Garden district of University City, on North and South Rosebury avenue, and on Southwood avenue in De Mun Park, extending west of Skinker road opposite Forest Park. These include some of the newest and most magnificent apartments in these parts. Negotiations involved $600,000. The apartments are owned by a client of Epstein, who financed the building projects.

Negotiations also are under way for both the northeast corner of Sixteenth and Olive streets, owned by Louis Hall and others, and the adjoining lot on Olive street. Beyond admitting that a deal was pending, Hall declined to discuss reports. The corner lot has a frontage of 40 feet on Olive street and the adjoining lot a frontage of 60 feet, or a total frontago of 100 feet, with a depth of 109 feet, extending to the east and west alley. The site is said to be wanted by a corporation with definite plans for a skyscraper, with display rooms for the first three floors and offices above. It is now occupied by old buildings.

Other Projects Pending.

Many other projects, not yet ready for announcement, are being planned for prominent Olive street sites.

A 15-story office building project was announced several months ago for the northeast corner of Fifteenth and Olive on a lot 19x109 feet, and a 17-story hotel for the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust, both by the Holbrook-Blackwelder Co., representing syndicates. Neither of these projects has as yet materialized.

A 40-story building was announced last week for the northeast corner of Fourth and Olive by John Robertson, representing 99-year lessees of a quarter of a block, owners of large office buildings in this section. No financial arrangements, so far as could be learned, have been made for this ambitious project.

Negotiations, it is understood, have been renewed for the northeast corner of Twelfth and Chestnut. The corner is held by Arthur J. Fitzsimmons, William Kinney, Senator Michael Kinney and others, who acquired it under a 99-year lease from the Turner heirs, through Cornet & Zelbig. Fred G. Zelbig admitted that overtures had again been made, obviously from the same interests which recently sought it with big building plans. The site, which faces the Memorial Plaza, is one of the most attractive downtown for a large structure.

TWO BUILDINGS SOLD THROUGH JOHN W. GIBSON REALTY CO.

The John W. Gibson Realty Co. has sold the store and flat building at 4107-9 South Grand boulevard for William and Joseph Ries, to a client of G. W. Sturmfels.

ROOSEVELT HOTEL SOLD TO CHICAGO SYNDICATE

Eight-Story Structure Said to Have Brought $1,800,000 After Receivership and Auction a Year Ago

Sale of the Roosevelt Hotel, at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Euclid avenue, was announced yesterday. The deal was made by Harold E. Willson, Inc., to a Chicago syndicate headed by Raymond Kendall. The announced price was $1,800,000, but this figure was not verified.

The hotel, opened in 1927, is an eight-story building, with 12 stores on the ground floor, and with two floors given to offices of physicians and dentists. The upper five floors contain 250 hotel rooms. The building fronts 126 feet on Delmar by a depth of 167 on Euclid.

In November, 1927, the property went into a receivership, with E. W. Banister, an attorney, as receiver. Dec. 16, 1927, the hotel was sold at auction to a group of the bondholders, after defaults in interest payments on some of the bonds.

The original building project was underwritten by the American Bond & Mortgage Co. of New York and Chicago. Plans for the building were made by the Widmer Engineering Co.

FOR A NEW AVENUE JUST WEST OF GRAND

The Greater Grand Avenue District Association has been formed to co-operate with the city in establishing a new street 450 feet west of Grand, to relieve congestion and facilitate north and south traffic. A meeting of property owners and residents between Grand and Spring was held at International Life Building Wednesday evening. More than 2700 front feet in this district was represented.

A unanimous vote was taken in favor of the new street as proposed by the Board of Public Service, to be known as Prospect avenue. A committee of five was appointed—S. T. G. Smith, William E. Caulfield, Frank Dubinsky, Henri Chouteau and Lee Hildebrand.

George E. Bradley discussed the need for this new traffic artery.

Lee Hildebrand stated that he felt from long residence in this district, that the new street was indispensible. He also is in favor of widening Spring.

A temporary organization was formed with H. C. Dyer as president, Leighton Shields first vice president, Oscar Dane second vice president, and Henri Chouteau secretary and treasurer.

DEACONNESS HOSPITAL TO BEGIN TUESDAY

Ceremony to Mark Breaking of Ground for New Structure on Clayton Road.

Ground will be broken with ceremony at 2:30 Tuesday at 6130 Clayton road for the new Deaconness hospital of St. Louis. The building, on which construction will be started immediately, will depart from the conventional hospital structure, in that it will be fan-shaped, with three main seven-story units spreading out from the administration building in front, constructed to afford a maximum of ventilation and light.

The building, of the Spanish period, is designed for 218 beds, with special attention to private bath facilities. The skyline of the structure will be beautified by two towers, which also will house the elevator pent houses. There will be an offset on each side of the administration building to the right and left wings which go back at angles.

The exterior will be constructed of light buff brick trimmed with Bedford stone, while the interior, including large foyer, will be embellished in marble and terazzo, with rubber tile for the corridors and sound-proofing wherever possible.

On the roof will be gardens and sunrooms for convalescents, while the operating rooms have been planned to afford the latest facilities known to hospital construction. The grounds will be laid out by expert gardeners for recreational walks.

The number of patients taken care of last year by the Evangelical Deaconness Society was 2710; number of free patients, 297, at an average cost of $2.62 a day for all patients.

T. P. Barnett Co., St. Louis architects, designed the building after a year of study and research by F. E. Rixmann of that firm.

New Architectural Development Discerned in Business Buildings

Crisp Spareness of Many Commercial Structures Pointed Out as Modern Note, By Louis La Beaume, Director of American Institute.

No generation of men has ever witnessed so "lusty or animated an exercise of the art of building as the present," declares Louis La-Beaume of St. Louis, a director of the American Institute of Architects.

He says "it is highly probable that architecture will sooner or later become in America, as in other civilized states, a subject of intellectual as well as esthetic concern."

"No race of builders—not even excepting the Romans—ever matched in volume, over a period of like duration, the acreage of roofs, the tons of masonry, or the cubic yards of earth, which we in America have placed and displaced since the turn of the century," he asserts.

"It is fair to assume that architecture will incite intelligent discussion among cultivated people; and that architectural criticism may be raised to the dignity of an art scarcely less stimulating than the art with which it will be concerned. At present we can point to no such keen analysis or interpreters of architecture as might be compared with the great critics in the fields of literature, painting or music. But occasional faint volcos may be heard above the din of the concrete mixers and the riveting machines.

New Tendency Noted.

"In one or two fields, it is true, some critics have discovered a tendency toward a new and distinctive architecture. Our industrial buildings are in many instances frank and straightforward: designed to fulfill their function because, under modern competitive conditions of manufacture and distribution, archaism is penalized and inefficiency damned to disaster. Extraneous details and meaningless motifs are ruthlessly cast away, and only such forms as are fit can survive. Our hives of offices, rising to preposterous heights, are designed with an eye on the balance sheet; often by their sheer bulk and mass they are impressive; but neither bulk nor height is a new element in architecture.

"There is, however, without doubt something different, something new, something modern making itself apparent in our current commercial work. Some of this feeling we are still borrowing from abroad, for in Germany, in Denmark, Sweden and Finland there is a new leaven working. But some of it has been achieved independently, if co-incidently, as a result of the same inexorable forces which are at work in Europe and here.

Lean Outline Noticeable.

"Most apparent perhaps is the quality of cleanness and leanness of outline, a kind of crisp spareness.

"If ornament is used, it is used as accent and with point not to soften or blur or dirty up the surface. Naturalistic ornament, this old Renaissance scrolls and arabesques, the birds and buds, and opening flowers pinned on the wall, have all but disappeared. The new ornament is incised rather than applied; it is rigid rather than fluent, convential rather than naturalistic. Arbitrary belt courses have disappeared or are suppressed; all projections are more restrained. Cornices have sloughed off, and with the disappearance of the classic entablature, columns and pilasters, having little or nothing to do, have faded away.

"These are all qualities of design. They do not imply the invention or use of strange or unfamiliar forms; and whether the results are pleasing or not, they seem to indicate a tendency toward what, for want of a better name, we designate as modern.

"Sometimes the profiles or the forms may recall Gothic elements, sometimes classic; but the reticence, the laconic quality, and the absence of pomposity or floridity seem to fulfill a modern need.

Reluctant to Give Up Cornice.

"The reluctance of man to relinquish the cornice is provocative of wonder, and perhaps we should never have been weaned but for the coming of the skyscraper. On low buildings in hot countries the cornice was an understandable survival of the projecting eave. But here and now it has become more and more an anomaly—useless, difficult, dangerous, meaningless. Faint traces of it will persist for centuries.

"The element of freshness in our workaday design, forced by the necessity of accommodating our commercial buildings to their environment and function, may in the course of other centuries communicate themselves to the buildings we build for pleasure instead of profit.

"But, daring as we are in the laboratory or the market place, it must be admitted that we remain conservative in our homes and sanctuaries. People may live and love and be happy and reasonably comfortable in almost any kind of building, so long as it is warm and dry and has good plumbing. Almost any of us can make shift in a Cotswold cottage, or a Florentine villa, a properly brushed up Spanish farmhouse, or an Elizabethan manor. We may put up with a few archaisms and inconveniences for the sake of the satisfaction of knowing that our domicile is true to some dead man's type.

"So there is no stern necessity to conform our domestic architecture to the manners and customs of our own times. Nothing but a passion for the integrity of architecture will avail here. And that passion does not seem at the moment very hot.

"Our most gifted men continue to render the most brilliant imitations in any style that is called for. We are amazed and thrilled as we used to be by the marvelous mimicry of Cissy Loftus or Elsie Janis. We tingle, we applaud. But every now and then a chill comes over us, and we reflect that the chameleon, though a very clever fellow, does not inspire our profoundest respect."

We: Our representative will be there at 3 p. m., madam, thank you.

TRUE LIFE STORY.

General Motors shut down last month temporarily, John Smith, one of their employees was thrown out of work. With bad luck, following bad times, John Smith came to the Public Loan for a hundred dollar loan. Very few loan companies lend men out of employment money, but the Public Loan does. John Smith tells us that three other companies refused him but that he wished that he had come to us first. By the way, he recommended a friend to us for a loan yesterday.

IMMIGRANT CHILD SCALDS TO DEATH IN KETTLE

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned in the case of William Eickhoff, 4 years old, who was scalded to death Thursday in a kettle of boiling water at the home of John Willfan near Staunton, Ill., where the child was living.

Willfan, who was butchering hogs, had the kettle over a fire in the yard, and the child was playing nearby. Unnoticed by Willfang, the child pushed a box close to the kettle, climbed onto it, and fell into the kettle. A few minutes later Willfang discovered the body in the kettle.

The child was sent by his parents from Germany about six months ago, the parents following and arriving in New York a few days ago.

JUDGE DAUES TO QUIT APPELLATE BENCH

Will Retire Early Next Month Because of Inadequate Salary and Join Law Firm.

Charles H. Daues, presiding Judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, announced yesterday that he would resign the judgeship early next month. It is his purpose to tender his resignation within a day or so after the inauguration of Governor-elect Caulfield so that the latter can fill the vacancy Judge Daues explained he believed Caulfield was especially fitted to make the selection, having himself served on the Court of Appeals bench.

Judge Daues said yesterday that for several years he had contemplated leaving the bench because of the inadequacy of the salary, which is $6000 a year and which has stood at that figure for years. Judge Daues has arranged to join the law firm of Diehm, Fickeissen & Burch, with offices in the Telephone Building, comprising Walter Diehm, Otto Fickeissen and Walter Burch. The firm's name will become Daues, Diehm, Fickeissen & Burch.

During one of the administrations of former Mayor Kiel, Judge Daues was City Counselor and while serving in that capacity he was elected tothe Appellate Court.

The Court of Appeals has jurisdiction in cases involving sums not in excess of $7500 and also misdemenor cases.

Three Judges, Two Commissioners.

Judge William Dee Becker, who was recently re-elected for another 12-year term, and Judge Simon G. Nipper, sit with Judge Daues. The commissioners are Walter Bennick, Republican, and Robert L. Sutton, Democrat.

It was said yesterday that the Governor may be asked to appoint Commissioner Bennick in Daues' place. The appointment will last until the next general election in November, 1930, when someone must be elected to fill out Judge Daues' term.

It has been the custom in the Court of Appeals to select as presiding Judge the member whose license to practice law antedates that of the other members. When Judge Daues took the bench he was declared presiding Judge, although Judge Becker had been on the bench several years before. If Commissioner Bennick should be appointed, Judge Becker, whose license antedates that of Judge Nipper and Bennick, would become presiding Judge.

Judge Daues originally was appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the then presiding Judge, George D. Reynolds, and later was elected. He is 50 years old and lives at 1925 Alfred avenue.

TWO BROTHERS DIE TWO DAYS APART

Double Funeral Tomorrow for Joseph Onions, 62, and George, 73.

A double funeral will be held tomorrow for Joseph Onions, 62 years old, and his brother, George, 73, who died within 48 hours of each other at the city hospital last week. Up to three months ago, when George Onions was stricken with heart trouble and taken to the hospital, the brothers had lived together for two years at 121 East Ferry street. Daily the younger brother called at Ward 14 and spoke cheeringly of what they would do when George recovered.

Three weeks ago Joseph became seriously ill. For two years he had suffered from a disease of the stomach. The illness became acute and he, too, was taken to the hospital. He was placed in Ward 15. Both were so sick they couldn't visit each other, but nurses and internes gave them frequent reports of each other's condition.

George Onions died at 9:30 p. m. Wednesday. When Joseph was told the next day, he said, "I wish it could have been me instead of George." He died at 9:20 p. m. Friday.

George Onions had never married. Until he became ill he was employed as a watchman at the American Paper Products Co. plant. Joseph Onions was a foreman for the old United Railways Co. He started work as a cable car was in use on the line with the company until four years ago. His wife and two sons are dead.

The funeral will take place at 2 p. m. tomorrow from a chapel at Fair and West Florissant avenues. Interment will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

AMERICAN CAMBRIDGE STUDENT FOUND DEAD FROM GAS

George R. Robinson Second Rhodes Scholar Among U. S. Men at English Universities.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—George Reginald Robinson, a law student at Downing College, Cambridge, said to be an American, was found dead in his lodgings today, dressed in his pajamas. Police stated that the gas jet in his room was turned on. Robinson's father is said to stood to live in Paris.

Robinson's death is the second among American university students in England in two days. Robert David Cohen, whose parents live in San Francisco, has been found dead beneath the window of his residence at Oxford yesterday.

The Oxford University Coroner's jury returned a verdict that Cohen had died of injuries resulting from a fall from his window.

J. H. Baker, senior censor of the noncollegiate association, said Cohen was 56 years old, came here in January, 1927, and had been reading for the degree of Bachelor of Literature in Esthetics. He said Cohen recently had been depressed over his physical condition.

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped, addressed envelope.

G. S.—Armistice day, Nov. 11, will be on Monday in 1935 and on Tuesday in 1941

H. F. W.—Write the Missouri Agricultural Department, Jefferson City, for a roster of dealers in alfalfa, and ask about alfalfa "meal."

A. A. H.—You might write a Pittsburg paper about the alleged plan for consolidating counties there. News items here give nothing recent about it.

NOT SIGNED.—Write the David Rankin School of Mechanical Trades, Newstead and Finney avenues, for their catalogue. Full information is given.

F. P. J.—To join a soccer team, see Mr. Reuben W. Tapperson, Superintendent of Playgrounds and Recreation, Room 330, Municipal Courts Building, 14th and Market streets. There are upwards of 30 municipal teams.

C. S.—It is correct to say "a car destined to New York," "He was destined for the law," shows the necessary use of another prepositional phrase. Destined is such a verb as guided, routed, or directed. A prepositional or infinitive phrase may tell how. In business you may find descriptions abbreviated as "destined New York," "routed Denver," etc., but it is understood that they are shortened sentences.

READER WHO DOES NOT FORGET.—Baskets provided by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund will be distributed in St. Louis. In East St. Louis baskets have been distributed by the Elks and by the Salvation Army in former years. Telephone or write them asking what the practice will be this year and if you may send them the name of the family you are helping.

C., and saying where and with what regiment he was employed, and the time. Some of the regiments still have their organizations through which individuals in the regiments could be located. You might locate them through inquiry of the War Department, or through the Adjutant-General of the National Guard of each State.

FAITHFUL OLD READER.—It is possible that the feather pillows could be put in the tub and washed successfully without removing ticking, but the directions of an authority on housekeeping are as follows: Open the pillows at ends, empty down or feathers into a bag of cheese cloth or mosquito netting. (When you do this, have the cheese cloth bag large enough to draw on over the open end of the pillow so feathers do not escape.) Tie the mouth of the cheese cloth bag tightly, and wash in a big tub of strong white soapsuds, touched up with ammonia. Rub the bags between the hands, and move freely up and down in the water for 10 minutes. Rinse in clear hot water twice; do not squeeze, hang to drain and dry in the sun (Elks and by the Salvation Army in former years. Fiftieth Anniversary Number of the Post-Dispatch
An Extraordinary Newspaper

DISCUSSED BY LEADING THINKERS OF THE WORLD.

THE St. Louis Post-Dispatch founded by Joseph Pulitzer Dec. 12 1878, will celebrate its fiftieth birthday on the Sunday nearest that anniversary, which is Dec. 9.

The four page paper which the founder was just able to get out, with one rickety press, on that first day, will be distributed, in facsimile, as part of a special number of more than 200 pages. Seven special rotogravure sections will contain contributed articles by writers of world eminence, local and historical sketches by well-qualified St. Louis writers, and color illustrations by leading artists.

Since mid-October, the special number has been in process of printing. Plans for the edition were begun nearly two years ago, and representatives were in Europe more than a year ago, enlisting noted writers as contributors. The result of this quest, and the direction which the special articles have taken, are announced in these words.

"The greatest number of the world's eminent thinkers ever grouped in one publication explore the fascinating field of man's achievements and his probable future scores to determine what life may be like on our globe in years to come."

The list of American and foreign contributors will be recognized as containing authorities in science, exploration, medicine, philosophy, history, religion, literature, industry and government. Noted Artists:

HUGH FERRISS.
LOUIS RAEMAEKERS.
FRANK BRANGWYN.
BORIS EPIMOV.
ABEL FAIVRE.

Illustrators in color include Max Beerbohm, Louis Raemaekers, Boris Epimov, Abel Faivre, David Low and D. R. Fitzpatrick, cartoonists; Hugh Ferriss, art interpreter of modern architecture, and Frank Brangwyn, famous English painter.

Most of the contributors have shaped their articles in line with the clearly defined editorial purpose of the number, which is "to present, in so far as it can be foretold, the drift of civilization, whence it has come and where it is leading us."

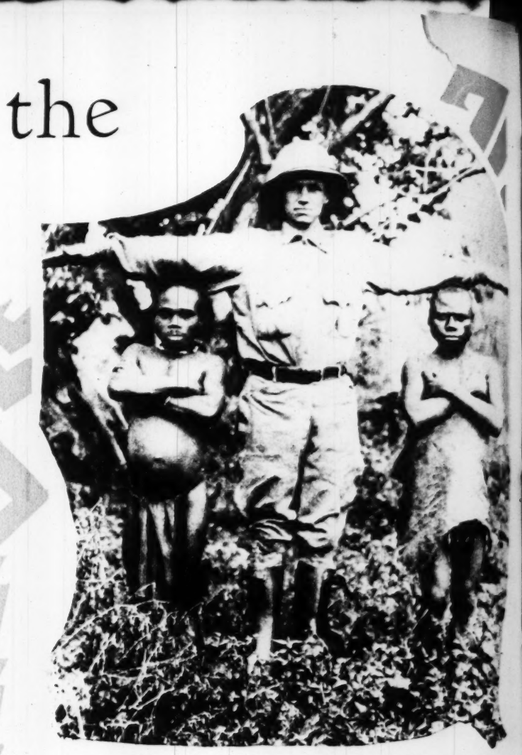
While these notable writings were being solicited and prepared, staff and local writers were busy, some being detached from their duties for long periods, in preparation of matter relating to St. Louis, past and future, and to the Post-Dispatch and its founder. There is no strict 50-year limit on the historical matter, some of which runs back to voyageur days and early statehood. Detailed chronology and statistical matter have been avoided. The progress of women, the story of St. Louis society, the sports of fighting, baseball and racing, and the life of Joseph Pulitzer, founder of the Post-Dispatch, with the record of the Post-Dispatch under his personal direction and in later years, are related.

While quality and value are the aims of the special number, it may be of interest to state that it will weigh more than three pounds, that its preparation and issuance involve expenditure of $100,000 in excess of the usual publication cost of the Sunday Post-Dispatch. The issue will sell at the regular Sunday price, 10 cents.

How a Harvard Student Slew the KING GORILLA

What Happened on the Remarkable Hunting Expedition Led by Harold Jefferson Coolidge Jr. Into the Heart of the Belgian Congo.

Mr. Coolidge and his kill.



Harold Jefferson Coolidge Jr. and two of the Pygmy tribe which accompanied him on his hunting expedition.

By HAROLD JEFFERSON COOLIDGE JR.

T WILL take you at least three months and probably more to make that trip." This was the answer the Belgian Commissioner in the Congo gave to my question about how long it would take to reach the gorilla country west of Lake Kivu. I was in a dilemma. My mission was to get a specimen of a gorilla for the Harvard expedition, with two months' time at my disposal. Of the two accessible districts in which the animal was known to be found, one was a reserve in the Kivu volcanoes where I was not allowed to shoot, and the other a three months' trip away. This meant that my only chance of success lay in finding them in some entirely new region.

One of the "white fathers" had told me that he had heard from one of their missions that there were rumors of gorillas in the mountains near a place called Katana on Lake Kivu. I chartered the one small power boat on the lake, and it was with difficulty that I and the white man who was with me just managed to sandwich ourselves in the overloaded craft and set out for Katana.

It was in the evening while eating dinner with the fathers at Katana that I asked the vital question, "Are there gorillas in the neighborhood?" All our hopes depended on the reply. They told me that a Belgian official living on the edge of the forest, a day's march distant, had reported having seen, six months before, a large ape that he thought was a gorilla, and also that natives had been killed by apes in the mountains.

The next day, leaving most of our things at the mission as a base camp, we set out for the official referred to, to get further evidence. Again it was at the dinner table, this time with the official and his wife, that I got my next information. He felt sure that it was a gorilla and not a baboon that he had seen several months before, but admitted that he had been so frightened that he had not stopped running to take a second look. I then planned to do some scouting myself, as we had reached the edge of the great forest. All the next day I tramped elephants' trails through the bamboo up and down steep slopes, but there was no sign of a gorilla.

The people in this region most familiar with the jungle are a tribe of small Batwa Pygmies. The next day 15 of these apelike little creatures squatted behind their spears as I came out of my tent. They wanted to help me hunt, and in return I was to give them salt. I divided them into three bands, one to go with us and the two others to look for gorilla signs in different parts of the forest. The native word for gorilla, I was told, was meshigo. I ordered them all to look out for meshigo mkubwa—large gorilla. They nodded, and we went our several ways.

Before long the Pygmy guides had me completely lost in a valley filled with dense bush. We were following a good elephant trail when all of a sudden there was a crash directly ahead of us. Our little men with one accord whispered, "Tembo"—elephant—and started to fade out of sight, apparently very much frightened. I raised my gun and aimed at the chief, and then pointed to my feet. Like a cowed dog he came over and squatted down beside me. The crashing bushes and what sounded like stomach rumblings came steadily nearer. We were on the elephant's one-way track, and he was going the wrong way.

My companions and I stood shoulder to shoulder with cocked rifles, as there was no side trail down which we could escape. It was most annoying to have an elephant interrupt our hunt. Then the noise ahead of us stopped. The native at my feet shook with terror; but the expected scream and rush down our trail never came. The elephant took a branch road and went off at a right angle while with relief we took the opposite direction. Our other Pygmies seemed to spring from the ground as we continued our hunt.

A SHORT distance off we found fresh spoor of a sort I had never seen. I pointed to it and said, "Meshigo?" The pygmies shook their heads. What could it be? Prompted by some sort of instinct I suddenly threw out my chest and started beating it, and then got down on the ground and walked like a gorilla. The little men all jumped up and down with glee and shouted, "Ingagi!" Here, then, was the word for gorilla; meshigo only meant baboon. There was no more excitement that day, but we had added two points to our case: the spoor of a large, live gorilla had been seen, and now the battle cry of our little expedition was to be, "Ingagi mkubwa."

We held a war council the next morning and the Batwa informed us there were "ingagi mingi mingi"—many, many—over at a place called Chimabue. This sounded worth investigating, so I packed up supplies for two nights and we started. After a six-hour climb in the hot sun we arrived at the town of Chimabue.

After a short rest, taking up the rear, I made the safari continue for another four hours until we reached the edge of the forest at a place called Funga Funga. Here we camped three days and sent our scouts in different directions to look for signs.

Our little men would start off with great energy and once out of sight would all join up for a quiet smoke and sleep. Our next tip came from a native passing our camp on the way from Kalongi, a spot far off over five mountains. When I asked about ingagi he pricked up his ears and said there were mingi mingi at Kalongi. I then told him to hurry back there and return next day with authentic news.

THE following day we left camp at Funga Funga for a hard hunt, sleeping one or two nights in the bush. I started on the trail to Kalongi, and, to my surprise, after several hours of steep climbing and slippery descents, I met my scout returning.

He had excellent news. There were gorillas on the trail we were following, and not far off.

The whole safari seemed to take on new life, and we pushed along at a faster rate. Our first contact with gorillas was like pursuing an army of shadows. Several times the animals were quite close but invisible because of the darkness of the bush. The noises they made showed they were distinctly annoyed at being followed, but before there was an opening for a shot darkness set in. The air was raw. We were in high country, at over 8000 feet altitude, and sleeping on the bare ground. There was a pattering on the leaves, the skies opened, and the rain came down in floods. It was all we could do to keep ammunition, glasses and cameras dry. The fire went almost out, the rain seldom stopped, and when it did the leaves kept on dripping; the ants and crawling insects sought refuge in my soggy blankets. Each joint cracked its protest as I moved a limb to see if it was still attached.

Our new headquarters were in a hut in the native village of Kalongi. The afternoon of our arrival news came in that a troop of gorillas had raided a native shamba—cultivated field—about five miles from the village. The very next morning, followed by 15 Pygmies and three or four local natives who actually dared to go with us, we headed for the devastated shamba. Two hours' walk brought us to a small, cultivated patch of ground on the edge of a dense forest jungle in a secluded valley. A native appeared from nowhere, and we learned from him the good news that the gorillas had been feeding in his little corn patch most of the night. They were probably not very far off as it was still early morning. A little scouting showed us that the shamba was close to a tongue of forest that stretched down from a nearby ridge directly in front of us. If we could make the top of this ridge we would be above the animals, unless they were there, also. To carry out this maneuver, we picked the left-hand ravine and proceeded to crawl quietly up it, making ourselves as inconspicuous as possible. When we reached the top I sent our four best men to try to locate the gorillas by the sound of their feeding.

After an hour one of their number came back to me and whispered, "Mingi! Mingi!" Very cautiously we climbed to the top of the ravine, forcing our way through dense thickets of tall brush and undergrowth. A recent shower had soaked everything, as we had learned by the slipperiness of the mud path on the way over, and it was hard to move and still be noiseless, so I was relieved to find the rest of our intelligence waiting on top of the ridge. They told us they had heard and seen—the latter they had not—the troop of gorillas on the near side of the hill.

We pushed off downhill in the direction pointed out. After some time we came on the trail of several gorillas crossing at right angles to our line of approach. By this time they had reached the back of the ridge. So this was the result of careful plans to be above them, and here we were, after losing the entire morning, almost below them. There was nothing for it but to return up the steep and difficult slope just come down, and make a fresh start on the opposite side of the mountain. When we again reached the summit and looked at the other slope we found it to be almost perpendicular, but covered with wet grass and loose soil. Down the middle was a slope about 10 feet wide, where bushes were flattened as if a toboggan had coasted down. At the bottom the trees were too thick to see through.

A SHARP crack of wood broke the silence, followed by the noise of snapping twigs in several parts of the thicket just below us. A few moments passed and the noise died out; perhaps they had moved on; in which case there was no time to lose.

Suddenly there is an angry growl. It seems close and directly in front. It is followed by another and another. I can see all our natives huddling in a little group, quite terrified. My Rigby is ready to meet a charge, but there is appalling silence. If my partner and I were not here, the affair would end at this point in a grand stampede. The old fellow down below seems surprised at our strange silence. Not hearing us retreat, he resumes his loud growling, but his tone this time is one of furious anger. This he follows by a new game, tapping his chest gently as if to show us with whom we have to deal, and then gradually he changes this tapping to a beating which gets louder and louder. It suggests very much the crescendo of a kettledrum in a symphony orchestra.

Then follows a dramatic pause. Our gorilla now starts making a curious noise by gnashing or chattering his teeth. He is within fifty feet, and one could hear it fully two hundred feet away. There follows another pause, and by stooping down I can just get a glimpse of a moving bush and guess that he is hiding there. As the branches separate for a second I can see a great patch of brown hair on the top of his head; he takes a quick peek at us and is gone.

Then comes another chest concert even louder than the last, this time fortissimo. Again he starts the jaws and I hear a sort of "glock, glock," as if the jawbone were being jerked loose from its socket. Another silence. No gorilla, nor any sign of movement, can be seen. Ten minutes pass and not another sound. The tension is tremendous. He must be lying in wait trying to beat us at our own game. Is each trying to make the other the moving object? Or is he quietly slipping away?

For the last time I warn the Batwa that as soon as we get in danger they must squat with level spears facing the enemy and remain absolutely quiet. They must not stampede, if they value their lives. I have said this so often that I only get indignant looks as if the warning is unnecessary.

WE MOVE off again. I am first, followed by two natives, then my partner, and in the rear our brave army. It is quite thrilling, as I know the old fellow is a big one and something tells me he is hiding close by. The bushes are so thick that I cannot be ready every second and still escape being tangled. My two natives are only able to open a way two feet in front, bending the bushes with their long spears. We advance as carefully as if treading on eggshells. This keeps up for about forty feet.

Grrrrrr! Grrrrrr! A torrent of furious growls seems to burst in from all sides. Then comes a rush of several gorillas in the bushes on our right, a most unexpected quarter. At the same time our men with one accord let loose a shriek of terror, making a hideous chorus with the growls. Most of the Pygmies are lying on their backs, legs in the air, spears at all angles, and a look of horror on each face.

For some inexplicable reason the gorillas stop short of them and quietly return to their original posts somewhere ahead of us. We do not see one of them, and there is no chance for a shot in the whole maneuver. The poor natives are very shamefaced, and the chief promises it will never happen again.

Before going on I wanted to study what had happened. Not far off I plainly saw where five different animals had made fresh individual tracks in the bush during their rush up to a point not ten feet from the Batwa who were in our rear. The animals had let the first of us pass by before starting trouble.

Here the bush is just up to my eyes, so I can see nothing over it, and it is too thick to look through. Not far off is a tall tree in what seems to be a little more open space, and I decide to head for this. I am moving along slowly and cautiously through the infernal tangle with one native under my left elbow to push the bushes aside with his long spear. The Rigby is cocked, for I feel that the big fellow cannot be far off and may only be stopped on the muzzle of the gun.

The Author of This Story

HAROLD JEFFERSON COOLIDGE JR., assistant zoologist to the Harvard African Expedition in 1926-27, here tells of the hunt in the heart of the Belgian Congo that ended with the killing of the king of a gorilla tribe. His account, which is reprinted from "The Sportsman," by special permission of that magazine, gives an insight into the tribal organization of these savage simians and is, moreover, the narrative of a stirring chase.

Mr. Coolidge is of an old Massachusetts family, his father being a Boston lawyer. He received his degree from Harvard in 1927, specializing in mammalogy, a branch of zoology. Before the African expedition, he spent a year collecting and studying bears in Alaska for the Biological Survey and hunted on the Kenai Peninsula. He has done considerable work for the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard.

The Strange Smash-Up of a Priest's Career

Pastor in Two Churches, Scholar and Nature Doctor, Leo Mouthuy Was Finally Brought to Grief for Failure to Pay His Wife's Alimony.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

GREEN BAY, Wisconsin.

IN his time the Reverend Leo Mouthuy has played many parts. He has been a priest in the Catholic church, a husband, a father, a nature doctor, a scholar and an author. To each part he has brought the same deep sincerity. It has been his tragedy that these various roles could not be kept separate one from another.

His former wife stepped out of the past not long ago and put an end to the career he had resumed in the church. She swore out a warrant for him here, charging that he had failed to pay the alimony which the circuit court had directed him to pay for the maintenance of his two young sons, and in the custody of a deputy sheriff he was brought back to Green Bay from Colorado, where he had held a small parish.

For Leo Mouthuy that was like an intrusion of the dead. That had been a closed chapter in his life. He had loved his wife once, but they had separated, and he wanted to forget her. He had done penance for breaking his vows, he says, he had suffered agony and remorse, he was old and penniless, he wanted only to live and die quietly in some minor office of the church.

When all these things are considered it can perhaps be understood why he regards his former wife as the chief conspirator in a plot directed against him, why he feels his life is ruined. It makes no difference to the Reverend Mouthuy that District Attorney Evrard released him from jail at the preliminary hearing, convinced that he could not support his children. The Reverend Mouthuy's bitterness is just as great, for he feels that his usefulness to the church has been destroyed. Now he has gone away again and his best friend here, the Reverend McMurray of the Episcopal Church, says he does not know where Mouthuy is.

People who knew him best here are inclined to blame circumstances—the situations in which his destiny happened to throw him—and they add a weakness for tippling, which was one of the reasons for the divorce. They confess that in part he is a mystery. There are lapses of time about which only Mouthuy knows, and he has never been inclined to talk about them.

At the University of Louvain in Belgium the story begins. At Louvain Mouthuy, a young man of good family, was studying for holy orders. His brilliance of mind was early recognized.

HE was, in due time, according to his own story, ordained a priest and given a parish in Nottingham, England. Then occurs one of those mysterious lapses of time. He next turns up some 10 years later and 2000 miles away in the little hamlet of Gardner, not far from Brussels, Wisconsin, a country largely settled by Belgians. He is no longer a priest of the Catholic Church, but is now missionary priest at the chapel of the old Catholic Church in Gardner, under the jurisdiction of the Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Fond du Lac. This sect represents a schism from the main body of the church. It so happened that in Wisconsin the Episcopal Bishop noted the decline of the old Gardner church and decided to take it under his protection. The Bishop recognized Mouthuy's ordination as a priest of the Catholic Church. Mouthuy said the mass according to the ritual of the old Catholic Church and was called "Father."

Mouthuy was not satisfied here, and the church under his jurisdiction failed to thrive as the Episcopal Bishop had hoped it would. Here he was, a man of high attainments, stuck away in this remote backwater with only country people whom he regarded as peasants. In England he had written and published several works on theology, economics and sociology. In Gardner there was no use for them.

As housekeeper at Gardner, Mouthuy had a girl 16 years old, Agnes Robillard, the daughter of a mother who had come from Belgium and a French-Canadian father, both of the Catholic faith. She was a pretty girl, in a full, rounded way. But, of course, according to the standards of the Old World, she was far beneath him. She had had only a backwoods school education. Her ways were those of her mother, good, simple, shrewd ways.

The girl made an excellent housekeeper, and Mouthuy must surely have observed her favorably. It is probable that he was attracted to her from the first. Add to this the fact that Mrs. Robillard was very anxious to make a match, and it is possible to imagine something of the mental turmoil which Mouthuy was in at this time.

His solemn vow of celibacy must surely have still weighed very heavily upon him, even though he had left the church. (It is said that he never lost the concept of himself as priest.) But here was this young girl. And her mother was always holding up her virtues as a housekeeper.

He married her. The housekeeper became mistress of the tiny parish house. That was in 1911. "Father" Mouthuy was 44 and Agnes Robillard was 17.

She was really little more than a child, as Mouthuy was to learn to his own tragic undoing. The old Catholic Church at Gardner having dwindled almost to nothing, Mouthuy and his bride came to Green Bay to live, where he abandoned the ministry entirely.

He took up instead a form of nature therapy known as the "Kneipp Cure," which consists of hot baths of one kind and another, and the application of electricity in various forms, as well as walking barefoot in the dew. He rented a house of considerable size, installed apparatus, put a sign up and was ready for business.

At first he prospered. The neighbors still talk about his cures, the women who came with crooked legs and were made to walk, and the women and children who came with epilepsy and were made sound. He brewed his own medicines of herbs and was mysterious about the formulas he used. He seems always to have had the capacity to leap over reality. He saw himself at the head of a prosperous and dignified institution which existed to relieve suffering humanity.

But almost from the first there was trouble with his young wife. She made friends with two or three girls her own age or younger, and she wanted to do the things they did, whether Mouthuy was willing or no. She wanted to go roller skating on moonlight nights and go to picture shows once in a while.

MOUTHUY'S concept of the place of a wife was European. She did what her husband told her to do. Mouthuy—he called himself "Dr. Mouthuy" now—even went so far as to buy his wife's clothes for her. And in those prosperous days he bought expensive clothes. He seemed really to love his wife. It is certain he was insanely jealous. Gradually he yielded to her coaxing and let her have her harmless pleasures, but there was always disaster when she returned a minute after the time he had set. He would rage furiously.

One night she was very late. She missed the last car. She came creeping in. But Mouthuy was waiting for her, and the hysterical scene that followed was prolonged the entire night. He beat her, she testified later. The next afternoon, while he was taking his afternoon nap, his wife ran away to Milwaukee.

Mouthuy's rage and despair were boundless, according to all accounts. He was like a madman. He went to all the neighbors, shouting his tale of woe. "She's left me, she's left me. She's run away. I gave her everything, and yet she's run away from me." "But you couldn't give her the things she wanted, Dr. Mouthuy," a woman who had been friendly to Agnes suggested, "a little pleasure, that a girl of her age wants." But this only set him off on a new tirade.

He traced her to Milwaukee and found her there working in a department store. She said she would never come back to him. He pleaded and begged and promised her everything. She gave in and they came back to Green Bay. In a week or two things were just as they were before. Mrs. Mouthuy had run away.

The birth of the first son, Reginald, did something to unite husband and wife in a more amicable relationship. "Dr. Mouthuy" worshiped the child. There was nothing good enough for him.

It is possible that if the "Kneipp Cure" had continued to prosper things might not have turned out quite so badly for the Mouthuys. But as his patients grew fewer and fewer, Mouthuy grew desperate. He took to drinking more and more, according to his wife's testimony in the divorce suit that soon followed. He was forced to get a loan on his car, on the Kneipp apparatus, even on the furniture.

Just a few months after the birth of the second boy, Maurice, the crash came. Mrs. Mouthuy took her two children and went to the small farm home of her parents. A little later she filed suit for divorce. She made out an impressive case—cruelty, indignities, coarse and hard language, abusive epithets and failure to provide her with even decent shelter.

But Mouthuy saw it all as a gigantic plot against him. He wrote an impassioned letter to his parents-in-law in an effort to frustrate the divorce and persuade Agnes to return to him. Among other things he said: "Never, perhaps, in history has the world seen so great and so various an exhibition, as in my case, of the murderous and corrupting power of Conspiracy and lie. My friends, my relations, priests, in part consciously and in part innocently, vied with one another in solemn attestations and ingenious forgeries of evidence and the people, docile by training and long indoctrinated to my hatred, inevitably believed and passionately exaggerated what they were told." In his eyes he was a martyr.

The Circuit Court Judge scarcely regarded him so. He analyzed the situation as follows: "The Court is of the opinion that it is the disparity of the ages of the parties which is a cause of a great deal of their trouble. The defendant is a well-educated and admitted student in French, Greek and Latin and can fluently read, write and speak several languages. His wife was a simple country girl, who had just finished the common schools in a farming community." He granted an absolute decree of divorce, on November 10, 1921, and awarded Mrs. Mouthuy alimony of $60 a month for the support of her two sons. Mouthuy turned over to his wife, too, what little property he had remaining. But at most its value could not have been more than $200 or $300.

THEN again he vanished, literally vanished, for friends of the pair who were trying to aid Mrs. Mouthuy could find no trace if him whatsoever. For seven years he might have been dead so far as this community knew anything of him. Agnes sent her two boys to live with her mother and she went to the same department store in Milwaukee and got a job again.

It was by chance that she learned the whereabouts of her former husband late this past summer. A friend visiting in Colorado had seen him.

Agnes Robillard went to the courthouse here alone and swore out a warrant against Leo Mouthuy, Catholic priest in the little town of Central City, Colorado, 12 miles from Denver. She claims that she has received virtually nothing from him for the children since the divorce. She feels the deepest resentment toward him and all arguments that Mouthuy had no money, and so it would do no good to arrest him, were of no avail with her.

It now develops that Mouthuy arrived in Colorado about 18 months ago with a letter of recommendation purporting to be from Archbishop Sebastian Messmer of Milwaukee. In part the letter read:

"This is to certify that the Rev. Leo R. Mouthuy is a Roman Catholic priest in good standing. He has served for some time in this diocese and in some others and everywhere has shown himself a zealous and pious priest.

"He is under no suspicion or irregularity that I know of and I sincerely recommend the reverend father to the kind consideration of the ordinaries to whom he may apply."

The letter, of course, did not indicate the writer was aware that Mouthuy had a divorced wife and two children. Speaking for Archbishop Messmer, who is ill, his secretray declared that there is no trace of the file copy of any such letter in the diocesan files, nor any record of such a person.

It would have been possible, of course, for Mouthuy to have been reinstated as a priest by due processes of the church. Such a case would have had to come before a clerical court and be tried under canonical law.

THERE have been various conjectures as to why he originally left the Catholic Church. He himself gave as the reason the fact that his Bishop in England had believed a story about him.

As it was, the letter purporting to be from Archbishop Messmer was accepted at its face value at the Abbey of the Benedictine Fathers, where Mouthuy was given employment as an English teacher. During his residence of nearly a year there nothing untoward occurred. But the work was strenuous and his health broke.

The Benedictines suggested he apply to Bishop J. Henry Tihen of the Denver Diocese for a small parish. He went to Denver and the Bishop assigned him as assistant at St. Vincent De Paul Church. He impressed the parishioners by his piety and zeal and when a vacancy occurred in the pastorate at Central City, a small town in one of the decadent mining districts, he was sent there to take charge.

He had been there a comparatively short time, when reports of strange conduct on his part, evidencing possible mental derangement, began to drift in to the diocesan officers in Denver. Bishop Tihen was absent, in Europe, and the monsignor in charge in his absence removed Mouthuy from the pastorate. After this, it was supposed he had left Colorado, but it developed he had gone to an Episcopal house of refuge at Evergreen, Colorado, maintained by that denomination for clergymen of other churches who are in bad odor with their denomination.

"I have done my penance," Mouthuy says. "I am free from sin. If they kick me out of the church, why don't they go up and kick St. Augustine and Mary Magdalene out of heaven."

That really is the end of the story of Leo Mouthuy. What happens afterward can scarcely be very important. The church, as a refuge, is gone. His wife is apparently permanently estranged from him. His two sons scarcely remember him. Those were the three things he loved.

The New Blonde That Charlie Chaplin Preferred

Virginia Cherrill, Latest Leading Woman of the Screen's First Comedian, Plucked From the Ranks of Chicago's Social Buds.

Four poses of Virginia Cherrill, Charlie Chaplin's society-bred leading woman.

CHICAGO.

EVERYBODY in Chicago—everyone who "really matters," as the society columns say—was simply floored when the news came from Hollywood about Virginia Cherrill. No one had ever expected her to do anything half so practical. They said: "Just imagine! Virginia Cherrill! If it had been anyone else!"

What Virginia Cherrill has done is to get herself a contract as Charlie Chaplin's leading lady. The Cherrills, who are an old family and socially acceptable in almost any group they care to enter here, didn't like the idea at first. They recalled with a slight shudder that Charlie has a habit of marrying his leading ladies and that after all, however distinguished his career on the screen may be, he was, you know, only a London music hall performer at one time.

But a majority of the family is quite resigned to the fact now. Virginia's mother has even arranged to give up her residence in Chicago and go to California, where she can keep a watchful eye on her daughter. Not that Virginia needs it for a moment.

EVEN though she is only 20 years old, she is a most capable and understanding person. She gives the impression of being quite able to take care of herself and a little bit more, even though she was educated in a convent and an exclusive finishing school.

Luck, of course, entered into Virginia's entrance into the movies. There is the fact, first of all, that Charlie prefers blondes, or seems to. The score now stands: three blondes—Edna Purviance, Mildred Harris, Virginia Cherrill—to two brunettes—Lita Gray and Sue Carroll. But Virginia tells the story very well herself. Incredible as it may seem, she actually talks in a way that is a kind of cross between the conversational technique of Lorelei Lee in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and Margie the Flapper of the comic strip. She gasps a great deal and exclaims. Phonetic spelling scarcely does her justice, but this is an attempt:

"You know Charlie is a DARling. He's just the SWEETest thing in the world, I mean. But I'm not going to fall in love with him. I sort of think of him as an OLDer man, I mean. And I think he's had enough love affairs, don't you see.

"I mean I'm much more likely to go DASHing around with the KIDS out there. You know the kind I mean, Arthur Lake and boys like that. Arthur's playing Harold Teen. Anyway, I'm going to be WORKing so hard and it's going to be NEW to me and all that sort of thing.

"Of course, I'm TREMENdously thrilled. I mean it's the biggest kick in my life. About being Chaplin's leading lady and everything. And it will be the very FIRST time I ever acted in a picture. Of course, I'm SIMply crazy about Hollywood.

"I JUST can't get over the way I was picked by Charlie. I simply had no IDEA of anything like that. We went to Hollywood, mother and I, to rest and visit friends. I never DREAMED of getting into pictures. I'd never THOUGHT of such a thing. Then one night a friend of mine, Sue Carroll, who was featured with Charlie in several pictures, took us to a movie get-together, whatever that is.

"Anyway a lot of movie people were there, including Charlie Chaplin. Sue introduced me to him. I was so AWED that I was struck dumb. But Charlie was PERfectly LOVELY. He talked to me, and before the evening was over he had asked me to have a screen test.

"You could have knocked me over. When he told me that if I screened properly he would make me his leading lady, I was simply SPEECHless.

"But I swear that if I'm a success in this picture I won't get conceited, because I hate conceited people. And I'm not going to fall in love with Charlie, though I DO think he's the DEAREST man."

Experts pronounced the screen test very nearly perfect. Virginia's mother finally gave her reluctant consent, then hurried home to close up affairs in Chicago so that she could return to the coast as quickly as possible. In her absence Virginia carried through the negotiations, preceding the signing of the contract, with the acumen of a much older and more experienced person.

It is difficult to imagine her at a loss. She has poise and even a kind of dignity. Her head is so firmly fastened to her slender shoulders that she is not very liable to lose it.

MISS CHERRILL first gained newspaper notice three years ago, when she won the golden apple annually awarded to Chicago's most beautiful girl at the Arts Ball, a mingling of Bohemia and the North Shore. This was somewhat startling for the conservative Cherrills. Particularly when her pictures appeared in the Chicago papers in a costume that closely resembled ordinary tights—an unheard-of thing for the granddaughter of a social leader such as Mrs. A. M. Cherrill.

No one contends, of course, that Virginia didn't deserve the golden apple. Her loveliness was already more than a promise. If Fragonard or Boucher had been given to painting slender women rather than buxom types they might have done justice to her gold and rose-pink freshness. It is interesting to look back at what the illustrator, McClelland Barclay, who was chairman of the committee of experts that chose Miss Cherrill, had to say of her:

"People have the wrong idea that beauty in woman is something that can be reduced to hip and bust measurements, coloring and weight.

"What counted for Miss Cherrill were not her face and her figure so much, although they are technically perfect. The 11 other girls selected by the jury of awards for tryouts had good features and figures. It was her charming manner, combined with her graceful walk and the charming expression of her face and eyes."

After this excursion into publicity, the Cherrills, including Virginia, were very reticent. Several theatrical managers, including Florenz Ziegfeld, made her excellent offers to go on the stage. For a time she played with the idea of enrolling in "The Follies," and even attended a few rehearsals.

But Irving Adler, an attractive young man with money, position and a prosperous business came along. The stage was forgotten. She married him. Adler seems to have been devoted to his wife. And still is, for that matter, even though Virginia insisted on a divorce a year ago.

The whole family suddenly went modern. Virginia's mother, Mrs. Blance Wilcox Cherrill, recently obtained a divorce from James E. Cherrill, who has just moved his stockyards brokerage business from Chicago to Kansas City.

There is a rather interesting parallel between the career of Sue Carroll and the potential career of Virginia Cherrill. Miss Carroll, too, met Chaplin at a social gathering and soon thereafter became his leading woman. She has since become an independent star.

IF MISS CHERRILL is not actually a star as yet, she has at least acquired independence. There was an amusing example of this when a report went out from here to Hollywood, where Miss Cherrill had just signed her contract, that Grandmother Cherrill intended to disinherit her for even considering such a thing.

Virginia was about to board a train for Chicago when informed of this report. "Well, that's just TOO bad," she said. "I'm 20 years old and able to take care of myself." Whereupon she closed herself into her drawing room, which contained six dozen long-stemmed roses and three orchid corsages. The report was untrue. Grandmother Cherrill denied it indignantly.

Arriving here Virginia found her fame almost as great as though her name had already appeared for a year or two in electric lights. There was an ensemble of reporters, photographers and curious hangers-on wherever she went. There was Irving Adler, too, all attention. Virginia enjoyed it immensely. And she's going to be simply crazy about the movies and being a movie star.

SCIENTIST SAYS HE HAS CONQUERED GRAVITY

WEST HARTLEPOOL, England.

THE correspondent saw today in a secret laboratory tucked away in the country, many miles from here, one of the most remarkable scientific discoveries of the age.

It is nothing less than a new force which defies the law of gravity. A piece of metal remained suspended in the air unattached to anything.

Infinite possibilities in the scientific world, and subsequently in engineering and commerce, are opened up.

It has taken years of study and research work to make it possible, and the discoverer is no less remarkable than the discovery. He is Mr. R. H. Tate, a young West Hartlepool scientist, who has dramatically upset the laws of gravity. He is still a young man in his twenties when his labors in secret have at last borne fruit, and he hopes, before long, to demonstrate his discovery before leading scientists.

No elaborate apparatus is necessary to suspend the metal in the air. There is on the floor a plate of a metal hitherto unknown which looks like aluminum, and, when a piece of similar metal is placed above it, the plate remains suspended for as long a time as it is left there.

"What I have done," Mr. Tate said to me, "is to eliminate the force of gravity, not insulate it, and it is there that the practical possibilities of the discovery are apparent. To insulate gravity would be to reverse the present state of things, and we should all fly off the earth into the skies.

"I have really discovered a new force from known forces, and this eliminates gravity. The metal I use was hitherto unknown and I can make it myself. The secret of it is known to me only; it's amazingly simple.

"I cannot patent the idea, as to do so I should have to give away the whole secret. An assistant has helped me in much of my research, but even he is ignorant of the all-important core of the principle.

"I first made the discovery many months ago, and have spent the intervening time in bringing it from the clouds to actual fact. It was a large job to work out the theory; to harness the ideas, bring them down to the plane of practical science was larger.

"It is pretty obvious that there are infinite possibilities; the most striking is the use to which the new force may be put in controlling aircraft from the ground."

Mr. Tate is a slim, athletic-looking young man. He has not been to a university and has no degree.

Mr. Tate has for some time been employed in the laboratories of a giant chemical works, and it has been after a full day's work that he has gone off to his secret laboratory and wrestled with the formulas and experiments that have led to his wonderful discovery.

e That Preferred

The stage was forgotten. She married him. Adler seems to have been devoted to his wife. And still is, for that matter, even though Virginia insisted on a divorce a year ago.

The whole family suddenly went modern. Virginia's mother, Mrs. Blance Wilcox Cherrill, recently obtained a divorce from James E. Cherrill, who has just moved his stockyards brokerage business from Chicago to Kansas City.

There is a rather interesting parallel between the career of Sue Carroll and the potential career of Virginia Cherrill. Miss Carroll, too, met Chaplin at a social gathering and soon thereafter became his leading woman. She has since become an independent star.

IF MISS CHERRILL is not actually a star as yet, she has at least acquired independence. There was an amusing example of this when a report went out from here to Hollywood, where Miss Cherrill had just signed her contract, that Grandmother Cherrill intended to disinherit her for even considering such a thing.

There was an ensemble of reporters, photographers and curious hangers-on wherever she went. There was Irving Adler, too, all attention. Virginia enjoyed it immensely. And she's going to be SIMply crazy about the movies and being a movie star.

THRUST HERSELF in a FURNACE Under an HYPNOTIC SPELL

—Says Mysterious Letter

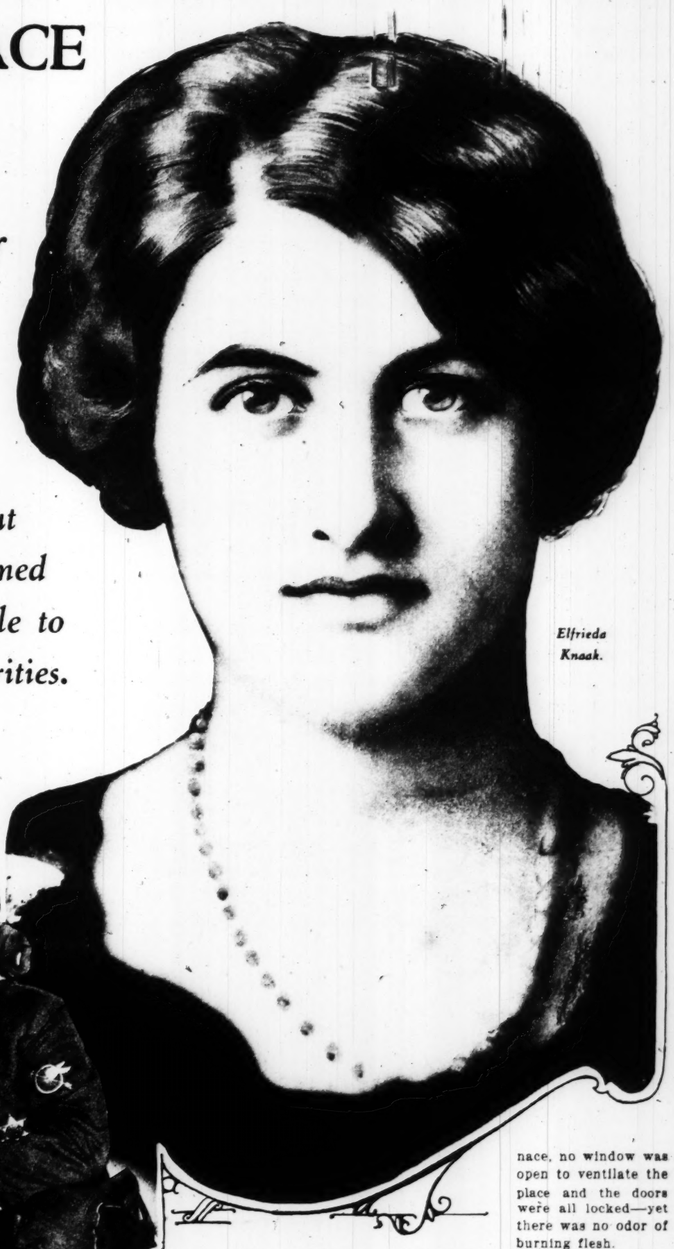
All Possible Theories Accounting for Elfrieda Knaak's Tragic Immolation Called Incredible, but Latest One Seemed Least Implausible to Authorities.

Charles W. Hitchcock with his daughter, Alloa.



Elfrieda Knaak.

The furnace in which Miss Knaak burned herself.

CHICAGO.

EVERY theory advanced in the case of Elfrieda Knaak, who died three days after her nude, charred body was found in the basement of the City Hall of Lake Bluff, a North Shore suburb, has seemed incredible. Perhaps least implausible though most bizarre is the latest—that this 30-year-old school teacher and book agent immolated herself under an hypnotic trance. It is supported by a letter to the State's Attorney of Lake County declaring that the writer, whose signature is cryptic, hypnotized the woman, helped her thrust her feet, hands and head into the furnace, and fled.

This would explain one of the chief perplexities of the amazing affair; how was it physically possible for Miss Knaak to persist in the inhumanly painful work of thrusting arms, legs and head, one after another, into the fire? Her own story, that she accomplished it alone and deliberately to "purify" herself by fire, is generally discredited by investigators. Few believe she could have done it, even if but superficially conscious and bound up in the pathological urge of a fixed idea. There are indications, many investigators judge, that she had a companion.

"The writer of this letter was no ordinary crank," commented State's Attorney A. V. Smith, who, however, had been requested by Miss Knaak's family to drop the case after her burial.

"EITHER he is an ingenious fictionist or else he knows something of the girl's death. The letter betrays an extraordinary knowledge of the case—that Miss Knaak apparently suffered no pain, that she professed a spiritual love for Hitchcock (the man for whom she declared she suffered the fiery ordeal), that she wanted to be cleansed. That all these are facts has been revealed in the girl's half-coherent statements."

Miss Knaak, who lived in Deerfield, near Lake Bluff, who had studied at three colleges and had later taken up psychology as a student of Charles W. Hitchcock, former actor and now night marshal of Lake Bluff, besides being a teacher of elocution and business psychology, had declared she underwent her immolation because Hitchcock had failed to keep a tryst with her and because she sought to get into spiritual communication with him. At first she insisted she had undergone the ordeal alone, but in her confused murmurs just before the end came, she was understood to indicate that either someone was with her or someone had forced her to act.

"I can't suppress the truth any longer and I want to tell you and the world how 'Bub' was burned," the letter to Mr. Smith began. The reference to Miss Knaak as "Bub" was obscure, as no one knew her by that name. The letter continued:

"For the last 20 years I have been a student of occultism, mysticism, hypnotism and an interpreter in occult science. Bub and I spent much time together and there were no secrets between us. For that reason I knew of her infatuation for Charlie Hitchcock and I knew how hard it was for her to overcome it. Of course, Charlie never knew, for Bub was stoical and kept it hidden—but if you know anything at all of the Freudian theory of suppression you will know that that merely increased her agony a hundredfold.

"From Bub's and my experiments in hypnotism I learned she was an excellent subject—supersensitive, psychic to the finest degree and very impressionable. We delved deeper and deeper into our devilish subject, she merely to forget, and I because of my thirst for things unnatural. I could render her cataleptic and absolutely insensible to heat, cold, hunger or pain.

"BUT one thing I could not do—purge her of the memory of Charlie Hitchcock. We decided on a final test that would rid her forever of Charlie. Cytherea, goddess of the ancient fire, was the only one who could burn all memory of Charlie from her mind.

"I placed her in a deep sleep, as far into the third degree of hypnotism as she had ever been. I gave her the suggestion that all feeling would leave her body, that she would pass through the fire, and that the only thing that would burn would be her memory of Charlie.

"I still think the experiment would have been a success under the proper circumstances. Although she suffered no pain, I could see immediately that she was being physically burned. At that I became frightened. I had been helping her hold her limbs in the fire, but I dropped her and ran out, hooked (locked) the door and went home. I thought she would die before she came out of the hypnosis, but I know now that she didn't, although she did not suffer, except during the moments before she died.

"I can't tell you more, except that I am the reincarnation of a priest of Cytherea in Egypt. You will never know who I am because I am protected by strong powers. I can say no more—my head is swimming and my master bids me desist."

The letter was signed "A-Os-Wun-Aken."

Whether or not the letter was the work of a crank, it seems to explain just as well as the other theories the incredible action of Miss Knaak in thrusting her body, limb by limb, into the flames—if she did it herself. Chicago's leading psychologists and psychiatrists are divided as to whether even a form of dementia could have driven the young woman to perpetrate the torture on herself. Some hold that the madness would have rendered her insensible to pain; others that no human being could stand it.

Most investigators are inclined to accept the theory that she had a companion, who thrust her into the flames and fled. A private detective agency which thoroughly investigated the case came to the conclusion that she was burned outside and brought to the Lake Bluff City Hall later. The fact that no remains of buttons, clasps or particles of leather were found in the furnace ashes after thorough sifting seems to substantiate this theory.

Two of Miss Knaak's four brothers, who helped in the inquiry, learning of her deep delving into occult science, came to the conclusion that she had been a member of a secret cult of Fire Worshippers who had induced her to undergo the fiery ordeal. But absolutely nothing was discovered to bear out this belief.

As things still stand, the girl's own story of the terrible night remains uncontradicted by any conclusive evidence, although discrepancies and minor inconsistencies have been found. She was discovered early in the morning, nude, charred and covered with coal dust, leaning against a pillar near the furnace. She was conscious, but gave no indication of pain. To Barney Rosenhagen, Police Chief, who found her, she said quietly:

"Please give me a drink of water."

She was hurried to the Alice Home Hospital in Lake Forest and Dr. A. J. Risinger attended her.

"Hitch, Oh Hitch," she murmured, "why don't you come?"

"Who did this?" asked the doctor.

"I did it myself, for faith, for purity," she said. Then little by little this story was drawn from her:

"I have known Mr. Hitchcock for four years. I studied in his school when I was teaching in a Waukegan school. A few months ago I got to know him spiritually. Understand, this was no material love affair. Advanced psychology made me understand him. For several weeks I have been hearing a voice saying: 'Have faith—have faith.' That was his voice. Thus we communed, though material distance might place us far apart.

"I had an appointment with him last night. He did not keep it., I had given him all, all my love. When he did not appear, I communed with him in the spirit world before the fire. Again I heard the voice.

"'Have faith,' said the voice, 'have faith.'

"To prove my faith, I thought of the fire. I removed my clothing. I burned it. I burned myself."

"Did you commune with him while you were burning?" she was asked.

"No one will ever know, no one will ever know," repeated the girl. "I survived, I proved my faith and I will live. Be sure of this: I knew I would survive. This was no effort at suicide."

HITCHCOCK had been home in bed with a broken leg for a week, unknown to Miss Knaak. He is married and has four children. He denied any love affair with the girl and his wife corroborated his story. Both readily conceded Miss Knaak had often visited him, to learn more about psychology. He had given her a course in business psychology to enable her to overcome sales resistance in selling books; it is said she became a successful saleswoman. On the very night preceding her immolation she had attended a sales meeting and given a short talk on salesmanship.

After Miss Knaak's death, the complete story from the family's side was told by Alvin Knaak, the brother most active in the investigation:

"There is one thing, first, that we want to make clear," he said, "that is an absolute disbelief, on the part of the family, that Elfrieda did this thing herself. There are several reasons for this feeling.

"First is the number of contradictions to her own original story. The known physical facts, calmly considered, develop other reasons for doubting her story. The doors from the basement to the outside and from the basement to the main floor of the police station were locked when my sister was found.

"No trace of the key to that basement has been found, even in the carefully sifted ashes of the furnace. She could not have been locked in the basement from the inside without the key being found inside. She could not have been locked in from the outside without whoever locked her in knowing something of what was going on in there.

"Then, too, there was the print of a hand on the dust of the furnace. It was too large to have been the hand of a woman. There were strands of her hair, as though a lock had been torn from her head, on the floor several feet from the furnace. There were cuts found on her chin, and a distinct, straight line burn across the nape of her neck.

"Now, to go back to the contradictions in Elfrieda's story.

"Miss Keaney, the nurse on duty nights, had instructions to write down every word Elfrieda said. Just before midnight of the morning on which she died, Elfrieda said, 'I wonder, I wonder,' repeating the phrase many times. Miss Keaney asked her what she wondered and my sister said:

"'I wonder why they did it, and if they did it?'

"'Who are they?' Miss Keaney asked.

"'I didn't do it, I didn't do it. They did it,' Elfrieda said."

Retained by the Lake County authorities to investigate the girl's torture and death, Edward J. Hargrave, head of a secret service agency, declared Miss Knaak was murdered outside the Lake Bluff City Hall and her body carried to the basement.

"She was not burned in the basement where her body was found," declared Hargrave, "but somewhere else, and was placed there, presumably dead, by her attackers and locked in.

"Ask any housewife how long it takes to get the odor of burning flesh or meat out of a kitchen. When Miss Knaak was found there before the furnace, no window was open to ventilate the place and the doors were all locked—yet there was no odor of burning flesh.

"Neither her hat nor coat has been found. Had those garments been burned at the City Hall, it is inconceivable to believe that a metal snap, a button, or the very volume of ashes in the fire box of the furnace would not have indicated that fact.

"The condition of the girl's body, heavy clay or dirt smears under the overcoating of coal dust, indicated that she was probably denuded of clothing before being even brought to the basement.

"The girl's body, too, when found, was so badly charred about the areas burned that no blood was escaping at any point. Yet there was a blood clot, probably an inch across, near the door.

"It has been established that the girl reached Lake Bluff at 9:40 the night before her body was found. We still have to fill in a space of 10 hours."

Chief of Police Rosenhagen said he banked the furnace fire at 9:45 p. m., locked the basement doors and went home. He discovered the presence of the girl when he returned at 7:30 next morning.

FURTHER evidence that just before her death the girl tried to tell the facts of the case was revealed by Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle of Lake County. When it was seen that the girl had but a little while to live, Sheriff Doolittle rushed to the home of Hitchcock and brought him to the hospital.

"I went for Hitchcock about 2:30 a. m.," said the Sheriff. "He was in bed, but agreed to come willingly. In spite of his injured leg, he hobbled to the automobile and then to the hospital room.

"For the greater part of an hour he pleaded with her to tell anything she might be holding back. He reminded her of their friendship and of his interest in her welfare. He could not have done more than he did. But she merely looked at him and said nothing. Finally he asked her, 'But Frieda, you didn't mean to do this, did you?'

"She showed that she had been conscious, and understood, when she answered shortly,

"'No.'

"He tried to get her to answer other questions, but she would not. Finally he got up and hobbled to the door on his crutch. At the door he turned and said:

"'Well, good-by, Frieda.'

"She turned her head and said 'good-by.' That was all."

Pioneering on the World's Newest Frontier

Parks Air College Near East St. Louis Shows Where Restless Youth Is Now Turning for Its Careers of Adventure.

Applying the finish to a wing surface.

Students building a wing.

ALL you need—besides your tuition—is a helmet and goggles and a pair of coveralls, the catalogue of the Parks Air College says. To a number of youngsters it has been this statement that has meant the difference between hope of realizing the ambition of their lives and just going on farming or keeping books or driving a truck.

They come here from all corners of the United States with something of the zeal and the earnestness of novices of a new religion. Sometimes they haven't even the goggles and the coveralls, but they usually have the helmet and a few dollars that will buy meals until they can find a part-time job.

The new frontier, bounded only by the horizon, has attracted these youngsters—the average age of the 376 students now enrolled is between 21 and 22—as once the Far West held out a promise of adventure and quick money. This newest frontier attracts the black sheep, too, the son of wealthy parents who has found everything else boresome and now looks to aviation for a kick, which may be one reason why it has been necessary to drop five per cent of the students for carousing, not tolerated even in its milder forms.

This entire school, with its hangars, its classrooms, recreation house, dormitory, flood lights, shops and cafeteria, has come into being with something of the magic of a frontier town. On March 1 last year there was just a big field—part lake during high water—in Cahokia, between Dupo and East St. Louis, about a quarter of a mile from the bank of the river. Now there's an air college. Everything has grown with mushroom-like rapidity out of the ideas and the money of Harry P. Mammen and Oliver L. Parks. Mammen, who is the head of an auto finance company, gives part of his time to the enterprise. Parks, an automobile salesman turned flyer, is general manager. They have had a marked success. More graduates of their school have passed the Government test for a limited commercial pilot's license than of any other school, they state. Their planes have flown 6533 hours of student instruction and student solo time, with only one minor mishap, which did slight damage to a plane. And this in eight months.

BUT it is nothing, they say. They see the industry at the stage at which the motor car was 15 years ago. Their own planes are based on this assumption. They explain that there were 3400 airplanes built in this country during the past year; there will be 15,000 this year, and thereafter the progression will be geometric, they contend. A factory for Parks Aircraft, Inc., is going up adjoining the school. They hope to be making the Parks Arrow, a new airplane, by January 15. They plan to co-ordinate school, factory and a national sales organization.

And this faith is shared by the students who have come to their school. Seventeen-year-olds push their way across country in battered flivvers, with their tuition money—$1020 for the full course leading to a limited commercial pilot's license—in travelers' checks sewed into back pockets. These "case histories" will give a cross section of the student body.

A. C. R.—He was an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist in Boston until six months ago, when he was bitten by the aviation bug. At 34 he gave up a good practice to learn flying. But he believes that he will lose nothing financially by the change, since he hopes to become an executive in some flying corporation of the future. "You have to know about railroads to be a railroad president," he says. "You have to know everything about them. It is going to be just as important for business men and executives in this field to know all about airplanes." He has nearly completed the advanced course. While at the school he lives at Hotel Statler and drives to the field in his own expensive roadster.

J. B. A.—Was formerly foreman in a brick works. He, too, professes to see a "great future" in aviation, but, as with almost all the others, it was something else as well that brought him to the school. He is taking the mechanics' course, which includes no flying. But when he has worked for a time as an expert mechanic, he hopes to come back and take the flying course. He came here from Johnsonburg, Pennsylvania.

H. H.—As a radio operator he drew down a fairly good salary. It was good at least for his 19 years. But this occupation grew too monotonous. "I couldn't stand it—just sitting still all day." He hopes to combine to good advantage the trade he has given up and the one he is acquiring in the advanced flying course. He formerly worked in New York City.

G. H. F.—At 51 he gave up cow punching to learn to fly. He is the oldest man in the school and also one of the most serious and determined students. He is 6 feet 2 inches in height, quite stooped, his legs very bowed, his face deeply lined. For 30 years or more he rode the range around Star, Nebraska. Now he has put his life's savings into aviation. And with supreme confidence. "This is the stuff," he says. "There's no more future in range riding. That's about over." He shows promise of becoming a good flyer.

A. L. N.—A St. Louis boy of wealthy family. He has been asked to leave several schools in the East. His family more or less despaired of him, and their friends spoke of him as "that wild N. boy." Very reluctantly the family gave him permission to take a flying course. At first it began to look as though it would be necessary to ask him to leave the flying school and refund his tuition. Morning hangovers were too frequent. But a marked change has come about lately and it is believed he will make a competent pilot some day. He was 18 years old a few weeks ago.

T. R. W.—Born in Norway, he has spent most of his 34 years on one ocean or another. He is at present captain of a United States Shipping Board freighter. He took a leave between voyages to come to the Parks school and take the primary course. Now he has gone back to the West Coast to make what he says will be his last voyage. When he brings his ship back from various ports of call in the Orient he expects to step off it for the last time, board a train for St. Louis, take the advanced flying course here and then qualify as a pilot with a limited commercial license. "I want to get settled down and stop this traveling around," he says, when asked why he has taken up aviation.

Three students with scholarships for the advanced course. They are James J. Pepper Jr., of Du Quoin, Ill.; John W. Larner of New York and Merle L. Wilkinson of North East, Pa.

D. R. B.—Was formerly a funeral director. He lived in a small town in upstate New York. And finally, he says, its dullness and monotony forced him into aviation. He saw one of the school's advertisements in Popular Mechanics magazine and within a week had sold his interest in the funeral parlor and was on his way to the Middle West and adventure.

H. F. B.—After he graduated from high school he got a job as second gardener on an estate near Oxford, Massachusetts. His father is head gardener on a nearby estate and makes an excellent salary. But the boy, after a few months, decided there was a greater future for him in aviation.

J. E. E.—An auto salesman from Charleston, Illinois. He is 34 and was a pilot in the aviation service during the war. Now he has come back to "pick it up again" and make flying his life work.

D. R. O.—This 18-year-old had never before been out of the Tennessee hill country. He was fired with a zeal to become a flyer and his widowed mother, who has always worshiped him, finally let him have the money. After the first week he came to Parks and said: "I'm afraid I'll have to leave, Mr. Parks. There is so much profanity and so much godlessness. Why, I even heard you use a swear word once." Parks took the boy aside and explained that in his opinion there were worse offenses and that it didn't matter very much if you had courage and a little determination. He added, moreover, that he thought it scarcely fair to expect him to reform the linguistic habits of some 300 men and boys.

With so many diverse types, it would be inevitable that a certain percentage should vountarily leave. Parks believes that most of his students who stick it out share certain traits of character—or at least that they have in common a sense of life so strong that it will not permit them to follow ordinary routines; they seek out the new frontier.

THEY are willing to endure circumstances that resemble hardships. The dormitory is a structure of one great room, where those who are making the course on the smallest possible margin—the majority—can live for $12 a month. They can buy their meals for 30 cents each and they are served on the "eat-as-much-as-you-can" system. In cold and rain, even sleet and snow, sometimes, they must go aloft in training planes, which have open cockpits.

Parks and Mammen believe that the most unusual feature of the school which they have sponsored is the stress put upon the safety factor. Each plane, before it is taken out of the hangar for a flight, is tested in every particular. The directors of the school hope that eventually this process can be standardized so that each time it comes to earth the plane will be scrutinized as an express train is examined now when it comes to a station. Stunt flying is forbidden and Parks says he would not hesitate to dismiss his most competent flying instructor if he were to violate this rule. This, he says, is one of the reasons why it is not necessary to ask students, as is done in a majority of other schools, to put up a bond to cover any ships they might wreck. The faculty members are, for the most part, former army officers. The flying instructors seem to know their job. It is one that requires constant alertness and unfailing skill. They teach green farmer boys to fly, let them hold the control stick for the first time, let the beginner blunder along, in hope he will right the ship, only interfering when it has become a matter of life or the cracking up of a plane that cost $3100. There are 20 training ships. In the afternoon they are lined up, instructors waiting beside them.

Take the case of the novice.

AWKWARDLY he has fitted on his helmet, timidly he has buttoned his leather jacket close. This is the beginning of a career for him. Chief Flying Instructor Clyde Brayton looks him over carefully, bends over the cockpit, explaining this and that dial and gadget. "Now if this dial doesn't register"—— He explains that the only set of dials which register oil pressure, radiator temperature, et cetera, is in the cockpit in which the novice is to be strapped. The novice looks a little blank at this. "But it doesn't matter," Brayton drawls, "because I'd know just how it would sound if any of those things went wrong."

The instructor explains the mysteries of the control stick and the rudder. "Now, I'll bring it up and take it down and you'll have it while we're in the air."

The motor roars, the tail of the plane pounds noisily and bumpily over the field. Mysteriously it lifts into the air. The cold wind whips at the novice's helmet, strikes at his face, chills his hands. Furtively he notes that Brayton hasn't even fastened the flaps beneath his chin nor put on gloves. The air seems to beat in his ears. Higher and higher, and then there is a slipping, sliding sensation, as though he were clutched in the middle by an unseen hand, going down in the fastest elevator in the world. Brayton looks back critically. (He explains later that this side-slipping is to see whether or not the novice will become paralyzed with fear and freeze to the controls.)

HE GIVES the signal to the novice to take the stick, motions the nose down. The novice pushes hard on the lever like the gear-shift lever on a car, and there is a dizzy swooping. He pulls it back and the nose mounts again to the level of the horizon. He is disconcerted and a little bit frightened to discover how instantaneous the response is, how sensitive. He tries to keep his eyes fixed on the back of Brayton's head and the latter's hands, which motion now right, now left. Bring up the left wing, and he finds the right one's down. It is a constant business, for the novice, just to keep the ship balanced in the air. An experienced pilot can fly for a long time without moving the stick one way or the other.

Finally Brayton raises both hands and taps his head. That means he'll take the controls. The novice relaxes a fraction from the strain he is under, sinks back a little, and, ignorant as he is, senses the touch of a master. He takes time to look down, and through the murk of smoke over the city sees splotches of water—a reservoir or two and the river—glowing crimson from the setting sun.

There is the slipping again. The earth rises suddenly and the plane settles down to the ground. The novice is awed by the ease with which the man in the front cockpit handles this difficult craft.

On a field near the long hangar a half-dozen boys are kicking a football back and forth. Their shouts rise above the sound of the motor as it tapers off. School is over for the day.

Brayton looks back critically. (He explains later that this side-slipping is to see whether or not the novice will become paralyzed with fear and freeze to the controls.)

HE GIVES the signal to the novice to take the stick, motions the nose down. The novice pushes hard on the lever like the gear-shift lever on a car, and there is a dizzy swooping. He pulls it back and the nose mounts again to the level of the horizon. He is disconcerted and a little bit frightened to discover how instantaneous the response is, how sensitive. He tries to keep his eyes fixed on the back of Brayton's head and the latter's hands, which motion now right, now left. Bring up the left wing, and he finds the right one's down. It is a constant business, for the novice, just to keep the ship balanced in the air. An experienced pilot can fly for a long time without moving the stick one way or the other.

Finally Brayton raises both hands and taps his head. That means he'll take the controls. The novice relaxes a fraction from the strain he is under, sinks back a little, and, ignorant as he is, senses the touch of a master. He takes time to look down, and through the murk of smoke over the city sees splotches of water—a reservoir or two and the river—glowing crimson from the setting sun.

There is the slipping again. The earth rises suddenly and the plane settles down to the ground. The novice is awed by the ease with which the man in the front cockpit handles this difficult craft.

On a field near the long hangar a half-dozen boys are kicking a football back and forth. Their shouts rise above the sound of the motor as it tapers off. School is over for the day.

A TETE-A-TETE IN THE GREEN ROOM

And Whose Grandfather Was in the Revolution.

MISS VIVIAN WILSON of Earl Carroll's "Vanities" received me in the green room of the Earl Carroll Theater, in New York, so called because it is a room and because it is "done" in green. When the theater was finished Carroll found himself with this green room on his hands, and he did not know what to call it. By a process of elimination the name "green room" was selected. Then Mr. Carroll had the room painted much greener, in order to make sure of its being green, and changed "green room" to "Green Room." Thus it was that the charming Vivian Wilson and I found ourselves tete-a-tete in that particular room.

Now, when I say tete-a-tete I mean that we were indeed tete-a-tete except for some 50 or 60 members of the Vanities company who kept passing back and forth across my lap on their way to or from the performance of their appointed daily antics on the boards.

There was also Sidney Skolsky, a young fiend in human form who insisted on chaperoning Miss Wilson. Or maybe it was me he was chaperoning. Or maybe I was chaperoning Miss Wilson. Or maybe Miss Wilson was chaperoning Skolsky.

"TELL me about yourself," was almost the first remark I made to Miss Wilson. I say "almost" because, as a matter of fact, I had previously addressed exactly seven other remarks to her. For the benefit of posterity it might be well to put those remarks down in the order of their appearance. They were as follows:

1. "How do you do." (This on being presented by Skolsky.)

2. "I think you have the loveliest blue eyes I have ever seen." (Immediately afterward.)

3. "How about a little supper after the theater tonight?" (Immediately after that.)

4. "Why can't you?"

5. "I think you are making a big mistake in not coming, for we shall have champagne and we may, if the occasion warrants it, drink same from a slipper."

6. "Where did you get that cupid's bow mouth?"

7. "Who? Cupid? Oh, Cupid is the god of love, sometimes called Eros, and commonly represented as an obese infant out for archery."

Now, I have been attracted to this interview with Miss Wilson because of the fact that she is an unusual girl. In the first place, she is an accomplished artist. In the second place, one of her grandfathers was on Washington's staff and another was a Lord Chief Justice in Queen Elizabeth's reign. In the third place, Miss Wilson came from Michigan.

"So you came from Michigan, eh?" I said, sternly, shaking her.

"Yes," she said, shaking me.

Then we both tried to shake Sidney, but no use.

"Well, it's a pretty country. Lansing is the capital, but Detroit is the metropolis. In like manner Olympia is the capital of Washington and not Spokane. Most persons not in the know will guess Spokane offhand. Now tell me about your art work. I hear you draw. Tell me about it."

So Miss Wilson told me about her drawing.

"Now, how about your grandfather who was in the Revolution?" I said.

"What grandfather in what Revolution?" came the astonished and irritated reply; and it was then, and not until then, that I discovered I had made a mistake. As I had asked the question, a score, perhaps a bevy, of pretty girls rushed through the Green Room. Dazed by the confusion, I had gone off on a tangent and now discovered that I was in an entirely different part of the room, interviewing an entirely different girl, one whose grandfather, alas, had not been in the Revolution. I hastened back to Miss Wilson like a homing pigeon.

So Miss Wilson told me about her grandfather who was in the Revolution, and a fine figure of a man he apparently was, too.

"WELL, I must go now," said Miss Wilson, "as you bore me greatly."

She smiled graciously and with a graceful turning gesture turned to go.

"Haven't you forgotten to er—kiss somebody good night?"

"No," said Miss Wilson graciously, and with another graceful turning gesture, she was up and off, scampering to her dressing room in a cloud of talc powder, leaving behind her a memory of yellow curls, pouting red lips, great, swimming eyes and a grandfather in the Revolution.

WHEREFORE ART THOU ROMEO

By Richard Connell

"Romeo was right there as big as a taxicab, crowding Juliet into a corner and out of the spotlight."

ON SEPARATE slips of paper Jimmy Fay had written Eclectic, Alabama; Angels' Camp, California; Mystic, Connecticut; Golf, Illinois; Owl Nest, Iowa; Gas, Kansas; Gimlet, Kentucky; Bad Ax, Michigan; Bobo, Mississippi; Gilt Edge, Montana; Pattagumpus, Maine; Bridal Veil, Oregon.

He had chosen the towns haphazardly from a postal directory because their names intrigued his keenly curious mind. Into his worn brown hat he put the slips. With a ceremonious air he closed his eyes, poised his hand above the hat and solemnly pulled out one of the slips.

"Owl Nest, Iowa," he read. "Fate has spoken. The Rubicon is crossed. The die is cast. It is the will of the gods. Owl Nest it is."

And Owl Nest it was, by slow and limping train from St. Louis where Jimmy had paused for a few days in his career as journeyman reporter. He was thinking about some of the big stories he had covered when he was star man on the New York Voice—that was before the nomadic urge had nipped him—when the halting train jerked him from reverie to reality.

From the platform of a somnolent station he surveyed the town where chance had decreed that he was, for a time anyway, to lend his talent to the staff of the local newspaper, if there was a local newspaper and it had a staff.

It was midday but the silence of midnight was upon Owl Nest. In the drowsy station the ticket seller, station agent, train dispatcher, telegraph operator, freight handler was slumbering—a weedy seedy man who looked as if his name should be Gus. Along a soporific Main street sundry natives moved slowly, vaguely, like somnambulists.

Jimmy was yawning himself by the time he reached the building which housed, so a faded sign admitted, the Owl Nest Morning Mercury. A cemetery stillness pervaded the premises of the paper. No tap-tap-tap of typewriters, no jingle and whirr of linotypes, no genial profanity of printers could be heard as Jimmy pushed open the door and entered, and inhaled happily the familiar ink-scented atmosphere.

On the threshold of a jumbled, soundless editorial room Jimmy stopped short. He had thought it empty at first; then he perceived that the tousled red object on the desk which he had thought was a feather duster was in fact a human head.

THERE was a blue serge body attached to it, sprawled in a rickety swivel chair. From the open mouth of the young man who owned both head and body came a sound at regular intervals like somebody tearing a window shade in the next room. Jimmy stood motionless, speechless, even as the young prince in the fairy story when he came upon Sleeping Beauty in her castle chamber. It occurred to Jimmy that the only point of resemblance between the young man and the lovely lass of the story was that they were both asleep. Indeed, Jimmy decided, the sleeper had rather less beauty than a barrel of fried monkeys. A few minutes of study and reflection convinced Jimmy that never among the multitudes of men he had gazed upon in a highly varied career as a reporter had his eyes beheld anyone quite so homely.

Beneath the burning bush of hair the sleeper's face had all the earmarks of a hasty job. His nose had been put on upside down; it looked like an exclamation point and gave him even in sleep a surprised, startled expression. His ears, which were bountiful, had been stuck on at right angles to his head; he had rather less chin than a baseball. His mouth was one of the great open spaces and he had five more teeth than any human being Jimmy had ever seen up to that moment. His body was short, sketchy, unimportant.

"I'm reasonably sure," said Jimmy, "that his eyes will be green," and, the young man unveiling his eyes at that moment, Jimmy saw he was right—they were green, green as shamrocks. On beholding Jimmy the young man, as if to be sure he was awake, pinched one of his abundant ears; then he grinned. It was warm and friendly, that grin—the sort of grin that gave Jimmy the wholly irrational feeling that he had known the young man a long time and should call him Pete or Tommy; it was the sort of grin that made Jimmy certain that the young man, if asked, would present him with the shirt that then adorned his slender frame. All the features of the redheaded one merged to make that grin. There was nothing for Jimmy to do but grin back.

"Well," asked the young man, and his voice was an excited treble, "how many elephants have you?"

"Elephants?"

"Sure. Blood-sweating behemoths of Holy Writ. Ponderous pachyderms that pirouette. Now don't tell me you haven't any."

"Not a one," answered Jimmy, mystified.

"Then what sort of circus have you, anyway?"

"Circus! Do I look as if I had a circus?"

"Sure. Aren't you an advance man? You've got on a blue collar."

Jimmy laughed.

"NO," he said. "I'm just an itinerant newspaper man looking for a job. The young man seemed abashed.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I hope you won't mind my taking you for a circus man. It was the blue collar, you see."

"Not at all," Jimmy assured him. "I guess everybody feels a bit flattered to be taken for a member of the theatrical profession even if it is only as press agent for a one-ring circus. We're all actors under our skins, I guess. Well — have you got a job for me?"

He told the redheaded one of his work as a reporter in New York and how one night a gypsy germ had bitten him and filled him with a desire to rove the earth, to explore strange places, to turn journeyman reporter. The young man was impressed.

"Wanderlust," he said. "Yes—I know it well. And I wish I had a job for you. But—come here."

He conducted Jimmy to a window that gave on Main street. Jimmy noticed that he limped a little.

"Look down that street," said the redheaded one. "What do you see? Nothing but silos, Silases and slumber. Yet this is a typical busy day in Owl Nest. You see, nothing happens here but climate and Christmas. Why, an invalid pig is good for half a column on the front page of the Mercury. And if he should die—well, I've filled more than one column with a touching obituary of a hog. Sometimes things are so dull I print Emerson's essays to fill up space. But—say, look here; if you're broke I guess I could stake you to a meal and a couple of dollars so you can get to some town where the folks are conscious; here they're dead, but they won't lie down.

"I like it, though," the young man added. "I'm just naturally bucolic."

Jimmy was noticing a strange thing. When the young man was talking Jimmy quite forgot that he had a face that only a mother could love. Animation lit up the shamrock eyes; there was zest in his words; here was a young man excited about life.

"I guess," went on the young man, "I like Owl Nest because it's used to the sight of me. I have some fun with this little paper, too. I'm the whole works. But I'm afraid there's nothing here a man of your ability would be interested in doing. There aren't any stories in Owl Nest.

Jimmy was gazing down the colorless length of Main street. "I'm inclined to agree with you," he said.

"As I said," the young man began almost shyly, "if you're broke I think I could stake—"

HE STOPPED abruptly. Down Main street a girl was coming. Jimmy's eyes widened with surprise, for she was a surprising girl to see on that or any other Main street.

"And who," questioned Jimmy, "is that very charming-looking young lady? Why, she's like a morning in May."

The expression of the redheaded young man had changed; he was plainly no actor, skilled in concealing his emotions; his face said clearly that he was experiencing pain.

"She? Oh, she's Mona Ferry. Her father's president of the bank."

Jimmy saw that he was trying to appear casual. The girl was passing quite close to the window now. On seeing the redheaded young man she nodded, an ever so slight inclination of her small blonde head, the gracious yet entirely impersonal nod of a princess to one of the least of her subjects. Then gracefully she passed on.

Jimmy watched the shamrock eyes of the young man following her; in them Jimmy read tragedy—the tragedy of a great longing—and a lost hope.

"I'm not so sure," remarked Jimmy, "that I won't stay here a while after all, if you'll give me enough for bed and board. There may be some stories here"—

The young man sighed deeply.

"I know," he said dejectedly. "It's Mona that's made you change your mind."

"Partly," admitted Jimmy. "And partly you."

"It's no use," said the young man dully. "No use."

The grin had quite gone from his face; his accents were funereal. Jimmy turned to him sympathetically.

"Sit down, won't you," said Jimmy, "and tell me all about it."

The young man sat down; for a moment he seemed irresolute, then he burst out:

"You've seen her—and you see me. That's the story in a nutshell. What are you thinking about? Don't tell me. I know. Beauty and the beast. It was Chet Whipple who said that first — and everybody in town laughed and, well, I stopped calling on Mona Ferry. Once I thought—she—well—she sort of liked me but that was before Chet Whipple came along—and after that I just naturally didn't have a chance. I guess they're kind of halfway engaged, she and Chet Whipple."

He shook his head and sighed again.

"Cheer up," said Jimmy. "'Faint heart ne'er won fair lady.'"

"Yes—I know," said the redheaded one dolefully. "I say that over every morning ten times when I'm shaving. Then I look at my mug in the mirror. It's no use trying to kid myself. That lad Cyrano de Bergerac was a collar ad compared to me. Besides, you ought to see Chet Whipple."

"What's he like?"

"He's everything I'm not," said the young man glumly. "Look at our names: He is G. Chesterfield Whipple; I'm Nickelby Crump—good lord, what a name! Nick Crump! Chet is the chesty full-back type, handsome as a movie hero, with curly hair and a cleft chin and one of those he-man, sub-cellar bass voices that girls consider romantic and masterful—while I—I'm the size of a messenger boy and I squeak. He is the Son of Whipple & Son—Owl Nest's up-and-coming haberdashery—and naturally he wears the swellest clothes in the country and has a new necktie every Saturday. He always has plenty of money to spend; I just manage to make enough to keep mother and me in squash and sausage. No—I'm afraid I can't blame Mona much—"

"Wait a bit," interrupted Jimmy. "You haven't told me about him—really. That girl — she looked as if she had sense as well as an unusually pretty face. She looked like a girl who would expect more of a man than a cleft chin and a new necktie every Saturday—"

"Oh, Chet's all right, I guess," said Nick Crump.

"You guess?"

"WELL"—a trace of the grin returned—"a fellow is hardly in a position to give a fair estimate of the charms of the fellow who has cut him out, is he? Besides if you do stay you'll meet Chet Whipple and see for yourself. He's the king pin of Owl Nest."

"Come on, now, Nick"—Jimmy smiled to himself; as he had foreseen, he was calling the young editor by his first name quite naturally—"you're among friends. Tell me—is this Chet Whipple such a world-beater?"

"Oh, Chet's all right," was all Jimmy could get out of the other.

"But give me a clue," persisted Jimmy. "What's he like? What did he do in the war, for example?"

"There," said Nick. "It was the war that started it. I don't believe Mona was much interested in Chet 'till last Memorial Day when we had a big parade. Chet was marshal and rode a horse. He certainly did look swell in a new tailored uniform with his bars shining and his sword glittering in the sun. Mona had just come back from school in Des Moines—she is studying music and acting—and the sight of him just naturally bowled her over. Of course, I couldn't compete with Chet—he certainly cut a fine figure on that big white horse, with a sword over his shoulder."

"Were you in the parade, Nick?" queried Jimmy.

Nick shook his head.

"I'M NO good at marching," he said, "any more. Besides, I was only a grade buck private, and in uniform I look even funnier, if anything, than I do normally. No—alongside of Chet I was a comic valentine. He was a captain.

"What in?"

"The Owl Nest Home Guard," answered Nick.

"Oh, I see," said Jimmy. "What was your outfit?"

"Fifth Marines."

Jimmy had been silent for moments; one hand gripped his chin, a sign he was thinking. Suddenly, he said, "I think I need a new necktie. In fact, I know I do."

The Up-and-Coming Haberdashery of Whipple & Son was the brightest jewel in the tarnished crown of Main street, with a window full of florid neckties and impassioned shirts. Bravely Jimmy entered. Instantly he spied a resplendent figure who could, by intuition told Jimmy, be none other than Mr. G. Chesterfield Whipple. Truly an imposing sight he was, six feet and an inch of well-fed and patently red-blooded manhood in an audible checked suit; he was leaning with a languid dignity against a rack of raincoats in the rear of the store, polishing his fingernails with a chamois buffer. When Nick Crump had compared young Mr. Whipple to a moving picture hero, he had been eminently fair. In Mr. Whipple's chin there was a cleft one could have caught a finger in, his raven locks were wavy as a sea and his eyebrows were the eloquent kind—raise them a quarter of an inch and they bespoke contempt; lower them an inch, pain; a whole inch, passion.

He did not greet his customer with any warmth. Indeed, with a cold, uninterested glance he paid no heed to Jimmy at all but continued to buff his gleaming nails. So Jimmy, after waiting half a minute, approached Mr. Whipple and said in his mildest manner:

"I BEG your pardon, sir, but I would like a necktie." With a slight, annoyed flick of his buffer Mr. Whipple indicated a rack of neckties.

"Dollar, seventy-five, fifty," he said. His tone was bored, but his voice, Jimmy noted, was beautifully resonant bass.

"This blue one—now"—said Jimmy, fingering one of the less awful ones, "do you consider this a good tie, sir?"

"Well," said Mr. Whipple, in the voice of one saying the last word possible, "I wear one like that myself."

"I think," said Jimmy gently, "I'll take this red one."

Mr. Whipple put away his buffer long enough to make change carelessly; he spun the quarter toward his customer across the glass showcase, and that instant Jimmy—a somewhat hasty young man—felt a very strong impulse to do something rather drastic to that cleft chin, but he mastered the impulse and smiled.

"Thank you," said Jimmy to Mr. Whipple, engrossed in his polishing operations, made no response. At the door Jimmy stopped, for he had another impulse and this time he obeyed it. He turned and walked back to the statuesque son of Whipple & Son.

"I beg your pardon, sir," began Jimmy in that patient, mild tone that had enabled him to coax an interview from more than one sour, taciturn financier in his New York days, "but there mediately in front. A large animal is coming directly for me, the bushes are waving violently, there is a terrible chorus of growls on the right. I am conscious of bodies rushing somewhere over there. Very close in front I see that a large bush is flattened and fire through to where the brute must be. I half expect to see a large hairy arm grab my rifle. My shot may have grazed him, but probably has gone wild; nevertheless, it diverts his rush and he swerves diagonally, missing us.

THEN turn to meet the others. My partner is also ready for an organized attack on our flank. He had got a glimpse of the big fellow I had turned rushing across a small opening. All growling and sound of moving bodies stops. Suddenly several large female and young gorillas not seen before now drop like phantoms from concealed perches in trees close by. I then turn to look at our brave hunters. Once more they had added their voices to the chorus and at the crucial moment every single man exactly repeats the performance of a few minutes previous.

Eight different gorillas took part in this concerted rush; obviously, the older leader had been hiding just below the tree I was headed for. He had come in a bee line toward me until the shot, when he was only ten feet off. This changed his mind and he swerved to the left, passing quite close to us but concealed except for my partner's glimpse. By this maneuver he headed off the others who were a little behind him. They had all turned in their individual tracks at some hidden signal, and retreated. Whether it was the noise or the blast of the Rigby ten feet away that so upset the commander, who can tell?

We followed the big fellow's tracks for a while; they were very plain. All indications were that he was traveling fast and that there would be no chance of catching up. It was getting late, and a weary seven miles home through marshy swamps and over steep hills had still to be thought of. As we came out of the bush one of my outside scouts reported that some thirty gorillas had rushed out of our forest across a corner of open country, and on into the next bit of forest. We returned tired with excitement and sore feet, but pleased with our hunt with its mixture of comedy and thrills.

For the next three days, living entirely on native food, we hunted and scouted, with no result. We had already skirmished with two entirely different troops when still a third was located three days later; and on the next morning, which was the last I could hunt and still hope to catch the rest of the expedition, we set out for the place.

The day was bright and cheerful, which put everyone in good spirits. A five-mile walk brought us to the edge of the forest opposite a ridge that led up to the summit of a mountain over 10,000 feet high. We took an old game trail along the side of a small ridge that connected with the main one. After an hour and a half of bush work we found ourselves in a natural basin, an ideal place for gorillas. The most likely place seemed in a big valley the other side of the ridge. To reach this we crossed a small ravine and then started on a long, long climb.

We now had to make our own trail, climbing ever up, with the guns constantly in the way, and a footing of wet creepers. Much of the time we were on all fours pulling ourselves up by the bushes. As we approached the main ridge the small spur we were on became narrower, and the valleys on either flank more and more densely covered with young bamboo forest.

All puffing stopped. The troop had crossed the very ridge we were on not long before, and couldn't be far off. We kept on cautiously; I heard a twig snap in the valley directly below us on our right. The sound was repeated, and this time the blacks heard it, also. They whispered, "Ingagi."

WE WERE just at a point high enough up so that we could work quietly down into the valley with a good chance of seeing the gorillas below us and maybe getting a shot. A short descent brought us to a place from which we could get a view through the trees. In the valley was a forest of dense bamboo whence came the sound of feeding gorillas. Above the forest on the opposite slope were some trees fairly free of leaves, and in the branches of one of these there were two hairy, black bodies.

They were two or three-year-old gorillas that walked up and down the limbs, slid down the trunk, and climbed back up again. It was as if they were playing and at the same time enjoying the scratchy feeling of the rough bark. It was fairly dark, but I tried taking a quick moving picture. We again moved quietly downhill, all the time eagerly peering out every opening the trees offered to see if we could see the big fellow. The snapping of twigs and breaking of young shoots disturbed the silence.

Suddenly there came without warning a fierce chest-drumming noise, undoubtedly a signal of danger from the male leader of the troop. Immediately we sat down where we were and waited. There was no further crackling of twigs; not a sound of any kind. On both sides there was perfect co-operation and neither wanted to break the silence. Twenty men waited all tense to catch the slightest noise or movement across the valley. Probably at least twenty gorillas were playing the same game not 150 feet off. The thought crossed my mind that the gorillas might quietly slip away, but I knew that they had not done so as yet because the two young sentries were sitting motionless in their trees, little dreaming how visible they were.

The silence was most oppressive, and I was afraid that at any minute one of our men would start talking. We listened; so did the gorillas. I took my watch out: five, ten, fifteen minutes passed, and nothing more than the ordinary forest sounds were heard. These animals certainly have patience. Twenty, twenty-five minutes, and not a twig snapped. There came from the closest clump of bamboo another loud chest beating of entirely different tone from the first but probably made by the same animal. Again silence. The little sentries slipped down from their trees like two ghosts.

Time for action had come. Our plan was to work up the ravine away from our quarry and make a detour around the animals that would bring us to the top of the ridge in their rear so we could come down from above and block their line of retreat. It was a relief to breathe freely again, even though we set out without delay at a fast pace on hands and knees under bushes and vines.

IN SOME of the thickets it was quite dark and my hat kept constantly catching on thorn bushes. The going got worse as we reached the crest of the hill. A grunt escaped the Batwa chief. He pointed to several very fresh gorilla tracks crossing the ridge. Apparently at the second chest-beating signal the whole troop had quietly withdrawn and crossed the ridge not five minutes before our arrival. I at once started to follow one trail far bigger than the others. It was late; a cold rain came on; probably the animals were half a mile away by now. The big fellow's trail led downhill, in places so steep that he had slid for some distance sitting down. A short distance ahead was a large shady tree, and twenty-five feet below it the brook that drained the ravine. I was getting to the tree when there was a terrible rush, and a big black form that had been concealed behind it tore down the hill to the stream bed.

A few bushes were in my way, but I fired a quick shot. I got a flash glimpse of the broad, gray back as the animal crossed the brook and plunged into the thicket on the other side. He seemed at least three times my weight and close to six feet tall. Behind the tree we found where the old man had been sitting, with his back against it, to keep the rain off. He had a wonderful take-off for his flying dash down the hill. Near the brook was a puddle of blood showing that my shot had hit somewhere, probably the shoulder.

The natives were all too cold and frightened to follow the blood trail in front of me. I couldn't watch the ground and at the same time meet a very possible charge of this wounded male gorilla. Finally, the brave little Pygmy chief started on the spoor, crawling almost between my legs. We worked slowly as the animal zizzagged and chose the very densest and most difficult places. Only one could crawl through the holes in the bush at a time. This infernal business had lasted for half an hour and we had moved about one hundred yards from where I fired the shot. We were on the side of a little ridge and in my way lay a very dense thicket. As I was about to enter it there came a low, ominous growl.

My Pygmy tracker disappeared; I still think he fled to the rear, passing between my legs. I braced for the charge and, seeing a black body moving in the darkest part of the bush not fifteen feet away, I fired at it. There was not a sound from the animal. I backed out and went around the bush. A lot more blood showed that the bullet had found a mark, but still the spoor trail led on.

No native would follow the track any longer so I did my own spooring. Not ten minutes after my second shot I was slipping down a rather steep slope with bad footing. Suddenly I noticed directly in the line of the track a large tree and, crouched against it, facing me, a huge black form. His head was well forward as if he were ready to spring. At that instant I slipped and sat down hard, with no little difficulty preventing myself from sliding down into the arms of the waiting old man, only twelve feet away. I fired, sitting as I was, at where his heart ought to be. He fell over dead.

I had to take off my hat to this old king who handled his troops so well, covered the rear of the retreat, and took his medicine like a man. The first bullet was in his shoulder, the second in his stomach, and the third had broken the jaw on the way to the heart. At this juncture the skies opened in sympathy for him, and it has seldom, if ever, rained so hard.

NOTHING, however, could dampen the wild glee of my men. Here, indeed, was a far finer specimen than I had ever dreamed of, measuring 5 feet, 8 1-2 inches in height and 62 inches round the chest. I was to take back his measurements, hide, bones, blood, parasites and internal organs to the Harvard Museum. It took twenty-five of us six hours to pack him out to Kalongi, where the natives held a great celebration lasting far into the early morning, while the Pygmies had a magnificent visceral feast.

That night in some unknown valley of a remote Congo mountain probably the gorillas held a meeting to mourn the loss of their great sovereign and elect his successor. Not many miles from this place the African native telegraph was hard at work with fires, drums and messengers calling all inhabitants for miles around to come at once and look at the Ingagi mkubwa.

"I dare say," he returned, "I've been around a lot."

"Do you know I could have sworn I'd seen you on the stage at the Galaxy. Haven't you been on the stage?"

Mr. Whipple unbent. He smiled.

"Why—no," he said. His tone seemed to imply that it must have been some other play.

"I'm sorry," apologized Jimmy. "There's something about you that somehow suggests the theater."

BACK at the office of the Mercury Jimmy Fay firmly moved Nick Crump away from the typewriter and possessed himself of that instrument.

"Nick," he announced, as he fed a piece of copy paper into the roller, "I'm on the Mercury. No argument now." He had begun furiously to type.

Presently he handed a typed sheet to the redheaded editor. Nick stared at the opening words:

Owl Nest is to have a Little Theater. A movement has begun to form a company of players here.

Owl Nest is full of folks with real dramatic ability. Owl Nest has always felt that Captain G. Chesterfield Whipple, to take an example that comes first to mind, has unusual gifts for the stage.

"Say," gasped Nick Crump. "This is the first time I ever heard of such a movement. When was it started? Who started it?"

"I did," said Jimmy, calmly. "Just now."

"I'm afraid," said Nick. "I don't warm up to it." He spoke a shade grumpily. "If there is a little theater here—I suppose Mona will act in it—and you can just bet Chet Whipple will be leading man."

"That," said Jimmy, "is the idea."

Owl Nest came out of its coma like a moth breaking from a cocoon. Committees began to hold excited sessions in the Grange Hall. The result was the launching of the Owl Nest Thespians—Captain G. Chesterfield Whipple, president and chairman of the casting committee; Nickelby Crump, press agent and chief usher.

The Mercury was able to announce shortly thereafter that "Romeo and Juliet," a play by W. Shakspeare, would be presented in the Grange Hall a month hence. Said the Mercury:

Captain G. Chesterfield Whipple has consented to play Romeo. Miss Mona Ferry will be his Juliet.

Owl Nest was wedged expectantly into the Grange Hall that night.

As he sat there a vision kept coming before the eyes of Jimmy Fay. It was that of the earthly remains of the author of the play in his quiet, distant tomb.

Miss Ferry was a delight to the eye and played Juliet in the best Des Moines school of histrionics manner, though palpably scared. The minor characters threw the Immortal Bard for a loss every time they tackled him. And Romeo—

Captain G. Chesterfield Whipple played Romeo in his best full-back style. Mr. Whipple carried the poetry as if it were a football. In the more tender romantic passages Mr. Whipple made a flying tackle on the slight form of his Juliet and bellowed his sentiment in the tone of a tug siren roaring for help, while he had Miss Ferry in a viselike half-Nelson.

THE balcony scene, Jimmy decided, would always haunt his dreams. Juliet's light soprano, "O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?" came under the head of foolish questions. Romeo was right there as big as a taxicab, crowding Juliet into a corner and out of the spotlight so that he might, with his eyes partly on her but mostly on the audience, thunderously declaim his passion. When the last curtain fell he took seven curtain calls; Miss Mona Ferry took only one. When Jimmy Fay saw her later her eyes were red; it was not the make-up that made them so.

Nickelby Crump looked crushed when he came into the Mercury office at noon the next day.

"What's wrong?" asked Jimmy.

"Read that story," exclaimed Nick Crump. "Just read it."

"Why should I? I wrote it."

"There'll be no holding Chet Whipple now," cried Nick. He slapped the paper from which large black headlines protruded.

CAPT. WHIPPLE SCORES TRIUMPH AS ROMEO.

"Listen: Is this your idea of lambasting a man?" He read from the paper:

"Probably never in the annals of the American stage was a performance ever given like that of Captain G. Chesterfield Whipple as Romeo in the Owl Nest Thespian's production of Romeo and Juliet before a dense audience that packed the Grange hall last night. His interpretation of Romeo was entirely his own. Sothern never did anything like it; nor Irving. What a Romeo! Such passion! Such virility. The reviewer has gone much to the theater but he never saw anything to equal Captain Whipple's performance last night.

"The reviewer, who has seen many of America's best actors, found himself saying, 'What a pity that trade engages the attention of one so obviously designed by nature for the footlights!' Surely if Captain Whipple so desires he could make a sensation on the professional stage."

Down near the end of the story was a line: "Miss Mona Ferry was adequate as Juliet."

"YES," moaned Nick Crump, "you fixed him all right. Now I'm totally eclipsed."

"I suppose," Jimmy remarked, "that you noticed Miss Mona Ferry in the crowd around Romeo trying to put a laurel wreath on his alabaster brow?"

The beginning of a grin came to the redheaded editor's face.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I didn't."

"Suppose," Jimmy said, "you give me an assignment to interview Romeo on the future of the American drama and what I expect to contribute to it."

"Why?" Nick demurred.

"See you later," said Jimmy.

When Jimmy returned to the office of the Owl Nest Mercury he announced with gravity:

"A blow is about to fall on Owl Nest."

"What do you mean? Are they going to give Romeo and Juliet again?" Nick Demanded.

"No," said Jimmy.

"What's going to happen?"

"Romeo," said Jimmy dramatically, "is going to Broadway!"

"I know," Nick said. "Chet will come back a star. Then he'll win Mona—sure."

But as weeks went by Owl Nest waited in vain for news that G. Chesterfield Whipple had taken Broadway by storm.

Nick Crump came breezily into the office of the Mercury one night; he had on a new suit and his widest grin.

"How is Mona?" Jimmy asked.

"She's wonderful," replied Nick. "But I mean"——

"Mona hasn't mentioned his name since the night of the play," said Nick. "But, say, Jimmy—it's going to be—all right—with Mona and me."

Then Nick Crump paused as if a disquieting thought had struck him. "And yet," he said, "if that big handsome stiff should come back here, a successful professional matinee idol, I'm afraid"—

Jimmy laughed.

"Don't worry," he said. "The flops never come back."

Calumet Baking Powder is so positive in its action that no real substitute has ever been found for it. Nothing can take the place of CALUMET—it has no equal.

One reason for the superiority of the World's Greatest Baking Powder is its double leavening action. Foods made with it come from the oven raised to their highest nutritional value. And, another thing—Calumet has more than the ordinary leavening strength—one spoonful equals two of many other brands. It goes further—makes more bakings—costs less per baking.

Feed Fat Away

The Food is in Marmola

It seems queer, but the modern method is to feed away excess fat. The food is a gland substance, taken from cattle and sheep. The amount decided by scientific tests is two grains a day.

The reason is this: Medical research has found that the great cause of excess fat lies in a weakened gland. It is really a disease. No exercise or diet can correct it.

When that gland is under-active, too much food goes to fat. Physicians, the world over, in treating obesity, now try to correct that condition.

The main factor is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. They were perfected in a famous medical laboratory. People have used them for more than 20 years—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others. Not only constant loss of weight, but new health and vitality. Thus the use has spread, from year to year, until countless people use this modern method.

You can see the results wherever you look. Slender figures are the rule. Excess fat is now a rarity. Men and women try to look and feel their best.

Try this method for excess fat in any part that makes you look old or abnormal. Watch the fat fade away. Watch the new vigor that comes. You will be amazed and delighted. Don't go on with a weight of fat when so many are getting slender. Start today.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

Winter's
Beauty Queen

NINE times out of ten," says a famous Winter Beauty Queen, "a woman's skin is her biggest handicap in winter.

"And there is no reason why this should be so," she adds. "I find that by using Dr. Campana's famous Italian Balm once or twice a day, I can give a skating exhibition in the coldest sort of weather and appear a few hours later at a formal dinner with my skin looking as though it had never been out-of-doors."

For many years, Campana's Italian Balm has been cold Canada's favorite skin protector. For keeping skin white and smooth, and for banishing the beauty-destroying effects of housework and weather it has no equal. Sold in the United States at drug and department stores, it is made today in exact accordance with the formula invented by Dr. Campana, famous Italian skin specialist. It includes imported essential oils. Two sizes—35c and 60c. Free travel-size sample on request. Campana Corporation, 26 Lincoln Way, Batavia, Ill.

The TRIPLE THREAT

THREE ominous warnings signal the approach of age, and show that fatigue and time are beginning to destroy a woman's loveliness. The three threats are these: a drooping of the underchin, a crêpiness of throat, and a deepening of wrinkles at the corners of eyes and mouth.

It was Dorothy Gray who discovered how the years put their first marks on throat and chin and eye, and how — still more swiftly — neglect will leave these same marks, so that even a young woman looks middle-aged if she neglects her skin. This is all so needless.

If you would retain — or regain — the youthful charm of clean-cut chinline and smooth, fresh skin, follow the simple scientific treatments which Dorothy Gray evolved.

You can readily follow these treatments in your own home, using the same method and preparations which have proved so tremendously successful in actual treatments in the Dorothy Gray salons in six cities. These authentic Dorothy Gray preparations are sold at leading shops of your city, while the simple, scientific Dorothy Gray method is clearly explained in a valuable booklet which will be gladly sent you on request.

When Mr. John Edward Gittere of 155 Theodore St., Buffalo, walked into Jenczka's Drug Store and said, "Let me have something good for a cough," the druggist handed him the right bottle.

"Let me have something good for a cough"--

"My work keeps me out in all kinds of bad weather," says Mr. Gittere. "It was last winter, when I had one of those bad colds and was coughing a lot, that I went over to C. E. Jenczka, my druggist on Genesee St., and asked him to let me have something good for a cough. He handed out a bottle of REM and I took it and in just a couple of days I had no more cough. You can notice a big difference in your throat right away, as soon as you take a dose of REM. It kind of soothes the sore parts of your throat and stops the tickling."

Though every bottle carries an honest-to-goodness guarantee, not one person in a hundred has ever wanted his money back on REM. Could anyone write a better advertisement for REM than that?

What a cigarette meant there

for he was no "ladies' man," and she was the belle of the town.

That awkward, stammering proposal . . . interrupted . . . what a mess he had made of it! And now . . . would she never come back? And what then? The zero hour, for a fact . . . the longest minutes of a lifetime.

Like most men, he lived through it, sustained by that little friend in need . . . his cigarette. In after years he always said it was the most important cigarette he ever smoked.

Xanthi and Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun—magic names, these! From here come the fragile tender Turkish tobaccos which lend their spicy aroma to Chesterfield's famous blend . . .

What a cigarette means here

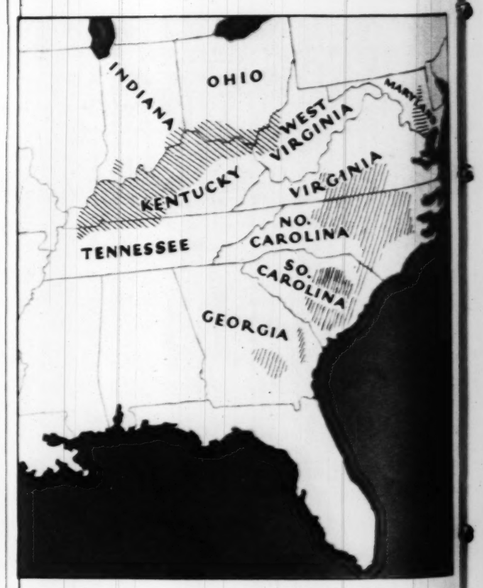
It took a lot of courage,

likewise, to propose and go through with the idea behind Chesterfield.

It took courage, for it meant less profit per package than is made on most other cigarettes. Into Chesterfield we blended the finest qualities of tobacco ever offered in a cigarette at popular prices—tobacco selected regardless of cost, from all the leaf markets of the world.

And when Chesterfield jumped to big volume and continued steadily to grow . . . we knew that this cigarette which so surely bespeaks tobacco quality to us had come equally to mean it to you.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.



. . . and from Virginia and Carolina come the famous "bright" or "yellow" tobaccos; from Kentucky the rich mellow Burley, which with the Turkish leaf completes a mild satisfying blend as yet unmatched by any other formula.

HAVE YOU FOUND MONGOLIA?

YEP! JUST TWO INCHES NORTH OF CHINA!

LOOK, BLACKIE— A LETTER FROM DAD—FROM CHINA!

SAVE THE STAMP FOR ME!

DEAR CHILDREN: I AM STILL IN PURSUIT OF THE RASCALLY WAH KEE, WHO STOLE OUR $50,000, AND I HAVE CHASED HIM HALF-WAY ACROSS CHINA—

MY CHASE LED ME INTO THE WILD MOUNTAINOUS COUNTRY OF THE NORTH, ACROSS WIND-SWEPT PLAINS AND UNTRAVELED ROADS—

I KNEW MY DANGER FROM THE ROUGH HILL TRIBES, THOSE SAVAGE BANDITS, AND AT DUSK ONE DAY I WAS CAPTURED BY A SHOUTING, MENACING HORDE—

THE HEAD MAN DECREED THAT I MUST SUFFER THE PENALTY ALL STRANGERS PAY WHO INVADE THE LAND OF THE HILL TRIBES—DEATH!

CONFRONTED BY DEATH, MY MIND WORKED FAST—I KNEW MY ONLY CHANCE OF ESCAPE WAS TO OUTWIT THEM. SO I ANNOUNCED THAT I WAS A GREAT MAGICIAN WHO WOULD DESTROY THEM IF THEY HARMED ME!

THEY DEMANDED THAT I PROVE MY MAGIC POWERS, BUT I HAD NOTHING WITH WHICH TO DEMONSTRATE— UNTIL SUDDENLY I THOUGHT OF MY CIGARETTE LIGHTER—

I KNEW THEY HAD NEVER SEEN A LIGHTER AND THE APPEARANCE OF FIRE FROM IT WOULD MYSTIFY THEM AS MAGIC. I MUMBLED SOME PRETENDED MAGIC WORDS OVER IT, PRAYING TO MYSELF. I WAS DESPERATE—

IMAGINE MY FEELINGS AS I LOOKED AT THAT CUT-THROAT CREW AND KNEW THAT MY LIFE DEPENDED ON THE LIGHTER! IF IT FAILED TO LIGHT, MY LIFE WAS OVER! I TWIRLED THE WHEEL —AND WONDER OF WONDERS, IT WORKED!

BUT THE SUSPICIOUS HEAD MAN—WHOSE NAME WAS SHI HAN—WANTED TO TRY THE LIGHTER. IF IT WORKED FOR HIM AS WELL AS ME, IT WOULDN'T BE MAGICAL. MY LIFE AGAIN HUNG IN THE BALANCE—

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright 1928, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service

THANK HEAVEN, THE LIGHTER RAN TRUE TO FORM! THE OTHER TRIBESMEN GOT INTERESTED, AND THEY, TOO, TRIED TO MAKE IT LIGHT AGAIN—WHILE I CREPT QUIETLY TO MY HORSE AND MADE MY ESCAPE!

WELL, THAT'S ONE TIME THAT THE LIGHT THAT FAILED WAS A SUCCESS IN A BIG WAY!
